Fair board chairman demands records of rodeo group

But rodeo board refuses

The Owyhee County Fair Board will not be allowed to view the financial statements of the rodeo board, it was made clear during a meeting held last week.

Three representatives from each board attended the nearly three hour-long discussion meeting in an attempt to end a disagreement of who is in charge of the rodeo board and who the rodeo board reports their financial statements to. The meeting ended as a stalemate, but both parties did agree that the two entities would attempt to work closer together on general decisions.

The fair board, who was represented by Bill Watterson, Gwen Miller and Joe Merrick called the meeting. Tim MacKenzie, Dan Parrill and Fred DeGeuss represented the rodeo board and made it quite clear the group would not consider allowing the fair board to view the financial statements.

The second topic of the agenda was the ongoing dispute of the beer garden operated by the rodeo board and the alcohol booth ran by the American Legion.

Watterson told the group that the meeting was called to try to come to an agreement concerning the two problems.

Watterson began the meeting by handing out a copy

AG's office to prosecute Yarbrough's wife on charges

Attorney General Al Lance and his staff were named special prosecutors in a case against the wife of Owyhee County Prosecutor Ed Yarbrough. She was charged with two felony counts and two misdemeanor counts last week.

Yarbrough's wife, Maureen Cassidy, 49, an attorney in Boise, was arrested April 20 after a high speed chase through two counties which ended with road spikes being ordered by the Owyhee County Sheriff's office.

Cassidy was charged with felony eluding police, felony possession of methamphetamine and misdemeanor charges of resisting arrest and possession of marijuana. The chase, which exceeded speeds of 95 mph, entered Canyon County where she drove through Melba and tried to return to Owyhee County. Owyhee County Sheriff Gary Aman requested road spikes near Idaho 45, which damaged Cassidy's tires. The pursuit lasted approximately 30 minutes.

Two-state pursuit ends near Jordan Valley

A 230-mile pursuit involving multi agencies ended in a foot-chase about 20 miles south of Jordan Valley last Thursday afternoon.

The two juveniles were taken into custody at gunpoint by Owyhee County Sheriff's Deputies after the vehicle they were driving ran out of gas and crashed through a barbed-wire fence. The pair then ran north from Highway 95 to the Rand Collins ranch, a distance of about a mile and a half, before they were apprehended.

The two had apparently stolen the vehicle out of Twin Falls and gone to the Winnemucca area. The chase started south of Winnemucca when the Nevada Highway Patrol attempted to stop them on a traffic violation. The patrolmen were joined by the Winnemucca Police Department, Humboldt County Sheriff's Office, and at one point, the McDermitt Ambulance Department, which attempted to block the road with their ambulance. When the chase entered Oregon the Oregon State Police and Malheur County Sheriff's Department were already responding. The MCSO asked for assistance from Owyhee County to set up spikes on U.S. 95. After the convoy entered Oregon, Owyhee County deputies were instructed to move to the south side of Jordan Valley with the spikes. But just a few miles before the spikes, the stolen vehicle apparently ran out of gas, and the subjects fled on foot. After their capture they were taken to the Malheur County Sheriff's Office in Vale where they were charged with numerous counts. They were also to be charged in Nevada and Twin Falls. On two occasions during the chase officers reported the suspects were brandishing firearms, but no weapons were found in the car or along the foot-chase route. Additional assistance was given from Owyhee County Sheriff Gary Aman and his deputies Gary Olsen, Dennis Peppley, Troy Tarter, posse deputy Joe Aman, Canyon County Deputy Paul Maun and his dog, an Oregon Wildlife officer, and a Bureau of Indian Affairs officer. Humboldt officers reported speeds consistently over 100 miles per hour, with several near-head-on collisions. At one point the suspects cut through a gas station, sliding sideways and endangering "about a dozen" people. The chase lasted about two and a half hours. — JA

This vehicle was stolen out of Twin Falls and driven to the Winnemucca area before the pursuit began. The car, equipped with a 13-gallon tank, travelled over 230 miles at consistent speeds of 100 miles per hour before running out of fuel south of Jordan Valley.

OCS offers reward in cemetery burglary

The Owyhee County Sheriff's Office is offering an award for information leading to the arrest of the person, or persons, who stole several thousand dollars in tools and equipment at the Homedale/Marsing Cemetery earlier this year. During the weekend of March 30th and 31st someone broke into the cemetery shop by prying a side door open and breaking a dead-bolt lock. Upon entry the thief stole many hand tools, an air compressor and gardening supplies valued at nearly $3,000. Owyhee County Sheriff Gary Aman said the thief left several clues at the scene, but an arrest had not been made.

Commissioners caution BLM against expansion

Congressional authorization to consider affixing the restrictive "Wild and Scenic" label to a particular stretch of river does not extend to every other river, stream and creek in any way connected to it. In fact, such illegitimate expansion amounts to the usurpation of Congressional authority. That was the gist of the letter to the BLM's district manager signed by the Owyhee County commissioners at their regular meeting on Monday, April 22.

Congress had asked the BLM to conduct a suitability study of the Bruneau River for possible inclusion in the Wild and Scenic River System. The BLM responded by proposing that lands associated not only with the Bruneau River but with the Jarbidge River and Sheep Creek as well, be "withdrawn," that is shut down for productive use.

The Owyhee County board of commissioners charged that, "On a number of occasions in the past, most recently at our April 11 coordination meeting, Owyhee County has made it clear that we believe that the BLM exceeds the authority granted by the Congress when it sets aside lands for special management as proposed additions to the Wild and Scenic River System when those lands are not associated with river segments that have been specifically named by the Congress as potential additions to the system.

"When BLM attempts to set aside lands associated with undesignated rivers, either through the withdrawal of lands or through special designation in land use plans, we believe that is a usurpation of the authority that the Congress has retained with respect to the management of the Wild and Scenic River System."

In summary, the commissioners wrote, "We oppose the withdrawal of lands associated with the Jarbidge River and Sheep Creek." And, further, "We support the publishing of a notice of public hearings to determine if the need exists for a withdrawal of lands associated with the suitability study for the reaches of the Bruneau River that have been named by the Congress for study." -RB

Marsing Clean-up Day set for Friday and Saturday

The 8th annual City of Marsing Clean-up Day will be held this Friday and Saturday with several activities planned including a barbecue for clean-up volunteers.

Arthritis Pain Mystery Solved

Horse Liniment is the secret!

OCALA, FL. -- An ingredient used to treat inflammation in thoroughbred racehorse legs, is now recognized as safe and effective for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx™ and comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation, ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Scientists suggest that ARTH-Rx works by intercepting the pain messenger substance that sends pain signals to the brain. Although the mechanism is not totally clear, pain is relieved in the affected area because the pain signal actually disappears.

ARTH-Rx is the only product on the market with Neurocaine and is available in a convenient, pleasant scented roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, ARTH-Rx is available in pharmacies, nutrition stores, and even some feed stores. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446. www.hcdsales.com © 2000 PGC of the Idaho State Code 22-201 through 22-209, which covers some of the laws of the county fair board. He then read the section of the code to the group which discusses the responsibilities of the fair board and the responsibilities it has to the county commissioners.

“The fair board has to follow these laws and this is county property,” Watterson told the group Tuesday night. “The commissioners appoint the fair board. In the state law as is read there, it will tell you what the responsibilities of the fair board are.

“The fair board is held responsible for the care and custody of the county property that is used for fair purposes and that includes the rodeo board. I know this hasn’t been followed in the past, but it looks like it is getting too difficult for two governing bodies to manage these facilities.”

DeGeuss stated that for the past 50 to 60 years there has never been major problems and that the rodeo people have always managed the rodeo grounds and the fair board people have always managed the fair grounds. DeGeuss said the rodeo is a private, nonprofit organization.

“The rodeo people fix up the arena and get it ready for the rodeo, the fair people fix the fair side and get it ready for the fair,” DeGeuss pointed out. “As far as I can recall the fair board or the fair has seldom put any money into any of the chutes or the back part of the rodeo grounds like the pens or anything else to do with the rodeo.

“If the way this reads, the county should have been taking care of all those facilities over there? We should have never been down here for three weeks before the fair trying to get things fixed up so we can put on a rodeo.”

Watterson answered by saying the Idaho Code does not say anything about a rodeo only about a fair.

“The best solution to this is to draw a line between the fair grounds and the rodeo grounds,” MacKenzie stated. “It is county property, but the best thing to do is draw the line and say the rodeo board has this section for this many days and for these hours. It will be our responsibility to take care of it for a set price and the money that is taken in is put into a fund and put right back into the rodeo grounds. It will be a joint effort between the rodeo board and the fair board as to what needed fixed, but those books could be open for anyone to see. It would be great if the county would match that money. The thing the rodeo board has is a great deal of volunteer labor to do the work. It is like having $20,000 instead of $10,000 with all the volunteers we have.”

Watterson again stressed that the fair board would not consider separating the grounds since it is the fair board’s responsibility to control the entire fair and rodeo because it is on county property. Watterson told the group the second problem with the rodeo board as controlling entity was the beer garden.

“Two years ago the rodeo board began the beer garden during the rodeo,” Watterson explained. “The first year it was going to be a split deal with the American Legion and when the bull riding started the rodeo was supposed to shut their beer garden down. Last year the beer garden was in operation all night.”

“The rodeo board looks at it like they built that thing and invited the American Legion because the rodeo board had a beer license,” MacKenzie said.

Watterson said the American Legion said they would not have a beer garden this year if the rodeo board had one. “If they pull out, that pulls $750 away from the fair board. This is not a big enough affair to have two beer gardens.”

“You lease it or whatever you want to say, to the rodeo board for those four nights,” DeGeuss recommended. “Then we control everything from the arena to the other side.”

“Then what happens when you guys decide you don’t have enough hamburgers over there and you bring in Uzzies Chuck Wagon and three other vendors. What happens when all these other vendors come in and then there is the controversy of control?” Watterson asked.

Watterson again read from the Idaho code stating that the fair board is in charge of the grounds, which the rodeo board agreed to.

“One problem also is that half the members on the rodeo board live in Canyon County,” Watterson continued. “I don’t have anything against anyone one person, but if you are a committee then you can be on a committee, but if you are the Owyhee County Rodeo Board then you can not be a deciding member outside of the county and dictate tax payers money.

“A rodeo committee, call yourself a board, but a rodeo committee needs to coordinate more with the fair board. We spend nearly $3,200 in trash hauling and all the power. Everybody has put a lot of money into this thing, but you do have some guys on the rodeo board who are tough to deal with. I really think that the financial statement should be turned into the fair board. We should get a financial statement from the rodeo board.”

“The law says that any function on county property as such a financial statement is supplied to the public,” Merrick said.

MacKenzie answered with telling the group that the rodeo board is a separate entity and not a product of the county.

“No the rodeo board is a separate entity,” MacKenzie explained. “It is not like a county organization. Just like the Lions Club. They use the county property. If we can get a system going with a lease.”

Watterson told the rodeo board that if the rodeo were scheduled to happen during a separate time, the fair board would not have a problem with the rodeo as a separate entity. “It is not like the Lions Club because it is all going at the same time and it is intermingled so much.

“The Lions Club is a different deal,” Watterson continued. “When we were only charging the High School Rodeo Club $75 the Lions Club was upset because we were charging them a lot more. Well, look at how many more people they have. There is a lot more wear and tear down here. They said they would put a lot more money back into the rodeo grounds if we didn’t charge them the higher rate. I don’t know except what they did for the gates at the grounds, we haven’t seen anything. This facility belongs to the whole county, if they put all their money back into this community then the people in the lower part of the county are losing out.”

Watterson didn’t agree due to the concessions and the beer garden. He said concession operators have threatened lawsuits.

“Why are you guys so against being a committee of the fair board and turning in a financial statement to the fair board?” Watterson asked.

MacKenzie answered that the rodeo board would not agree because of past generations. “We have an agreement from years ago,” MacKenzie continued.

“If the rodeo board wants money from the fair board then we should have some idea where the money is going,” Watterson said in which the rodeo board agreed.

MacKenzie answered by telling the group that they just wanted to have a rodeo.

“Somebody has to set up the guidelines,” Watterson answered. “Who is going to pay all the bills? The county taxpayers are still paying all the trash hauling, the power and the liability. The liability of underage kids drinking in the rodeo board’s beer garden.”

Watterson said last year underage children had been caught drinking in the rodeo’s beer garden and the fair board was responsible for any children caught or hurt if they have been drinking on the fair grounds.

“The beer those kids had probably was not sold to those kids,” Parrill explained. Watterson contended that if the problem could not be controlled, the fair board may consider banishing beer from the fair and rodeo all together.

“We have several people on the fair board who would like to see this as an alcohol free function,” Watterson said. But he did agree that beer sponsors would be difficult and expensive to replace.

“I think if we just sit down and coordinate things we don’t have to draw any line,” Watterson said. “We don’t want detail as to how much pop or what it is you buy, just some idea where the money is spent.

“That is a very sore subject with the rodeo board,” MacKenzie told the group. “We have even had members talk about pulling the rodeo all together and taking it to Jordan Valley for a fall rodeo. Every year any money we make goes right back into the rodeo grounds. We spend many hours and personal equipment for free for the upkeep on the rodeo grounds.”

“If we start drawing lines we are just setting this up for friction,” Watterson continued. “We need open communication and working together to make this work.” -CP

Spokesman for the Attorney General’s office, Bob Cooper, said Cassidy was charged in Magistrate court in Murphy on April 24 and that currently no one else had been arrested in the case. He said a search warrant had been served on Cassidy’s residence on April 24 but he would not release any information pertaining to what his department found or removed from the home or the reason for the search.

Cooper said if convicted, Cassidy could face up to five years in prison and a $15,000 fine for eluding an officer, seven years in prison for possession of methamphetamine, a maximum of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine for possession of marijuana and the same for resisting an officer.

Cassidy was committed on a 24-hour mental hold and taken to West Valley Medical Center in Caldwell then released to the Canyon County Sheriff’s office Monday. She was released on her own recognizance Monday. -CP ming up again this year new faces may be seen in several of Owyhee County's elected officials positions. But one face that will not be unfamiliar in the Wilson precinct area is that of election clerk Betty Brandau as this will be her 50th year as clerk for the local voting station.

A half-century on the job

Betty Brandau clerks 50 years of elections

"It sometimes turns out to be a place we can get to see friends and neighbors in the area that we don't get to see very often," Brandau laughed during an interview with her last week. "We get to talk over old times, and talk about new happenings in our lives."

Brandau said she began working for the precinct as a clerk in 1952 when her son, Richard Brandau was only four. She said her father-in-law talked her into taking the position while he was a judge for the district.

"I think he had worked as a judge for about as long as I have been a clerk," Brandau continued. "He came over one day and said he needed another clerk and told me I should take the job. So I did and I have been there ever since."

"In those days the judge would pick his own clerk. It was usually just whoever they could get to go down. I told him I had Richard and I couldn't go, but my husband said he would watch him, so I went and here I am, still on today."

Brandau said the federal and state elections have never excited her as much as the local elections have, but said she and her "boss" father-in-law did butt heads during one election.

"He was our boss," Brandau explained. "He was a great boss and easy to work with, but he was the judge. I remember once we had words about an election and I won that argument. When a person turns in an absentee ballot, we have to write down the name, open the envelope and remove the ballot. But we are supposed to put the ballot in the ballot box so it is still a private vote. He wanted to count one of the absentee ballots as he was opening it. I told him we could not do that, it had to be a private ballot and the only way to do that was to put it in the ballot box. We debated for quite a while over that one, but eventually I won and it was a private ballot."

When Betty was 21 years old, she began working as a teacher in the one-room school house of Wilson and said it was the best job she had ever taken because it was there she met her husband

Betty Brandau

"Back then we didn't have this many people so you could sit and visit and get to know the community," Brandau recalled. "Now there are so many people that you don't have time to visit. Goodness, we used to have maybe 100 people voting and now I know there is over 200 who vote just in our precinct."

Brandau said that in the early years of her career it was not uncommon to leave the precinct building after midnight. She said now they have more people so they don't get home as late.

As for Owyhee County, she said she was unhappy with the representation the county is receiving.

"I don't like to see Owyhee County without hardly any representatives," Brandau concluded. "Everyone who is running is from the lower part of the district and we won't get anything up here. But I guess we are just little peons up here anyway."

Brandau said she would continue to serve the people of Owyhee County in the general election as long as she is able to. -CP

Anti-grazing group pushes buy-out program

Program could cost taxpayers billions

By Cheryl Peterson

Another attempt to remove cattle from federal lands was launched recently by a group of environmentalists, with a new name, who have been attempting for years to put an end to federal lands grazing. The action, if passed through the legislature, could cost taxpayers several billion dollars.

The NPLGC (National Federal Lands Grazing Campaign) was launched recently with several thousand letters sent to ranchers throughout the West in an attempt to persuade them into a legislative proposal that would allow a federal grazing permittee to relinquish the rights to federal lands grazing in an "exchange for compensation."

Nearly every rancher in Owyhee County received the letter that states if legislation is passed, ranchers could receive $175 per AUM (animal unit month). The letter continues to state that a rancher with 300 cow/calf pairs who grazes on federal lands for five months could receive $262,500. "An amount the group uses to entice ranchers to sell out," Idaho Senator Mike Crapo said in a phone interview from Washington D.C. last week. If approved, the program could cost the American taxpayer over $3.2 billion.

"My concern would be, what would this do to local communities?" Crapo continued. "The ramifications of losing these businesses would have a domino effect."

The NPLGC, directed by Andy Kerr, with a steering committee consisting of Randi Spivak, Martin Taylor, Katie Fite, John Homing, Bill Marlett and John Marvel, are asking ranchers to convince congress to enact the buyout program because it "will require political pressure from conservation organizations and taxpayer watchdog groups and also support from [federal] lands grazing permittees interested in relinquishing their permits for cash (either now or in the future)."

"A proposal by several anti-livestock grazing organizations to create a new federally funded program to purchase and permanently retire grazing rights on [federal] lands across the West is not feasible," The Public Lands Council said last week.

"PLC and its member organizations strongly question the validity of this proposed program," said PLC President Paul Frischknecht. "The organizations behind this idea are the same livestock grazing industry opponents who consistently file lawsuits and appeals with the ultimate goal of driving livestock producers from our [federal] lands. The buyout effort is nothing less than another attempt to remove [federal] lands grazing, and now they intend to use tax dollars to further that effort."

"Fifty years of research substantiates that improvements in rangeland condition occur quicker under moderate grazing scenarios when compared to the total exclusion of livestock grazing. Most professional range managers agree that our nation's rangelands are in better condition today than since before the turn of the century," the PLC continued.

Many mainstream wildlife, hunting and resource conservation organizations do not support the buyout proposal.

"While PLC supports permittees marketing their property and permits as they see fit, PLC opposes this effort at a buyout and the philosophy behind the proposal," Jason Campbell, PLC executive director said. "PLC also questions the use of federal funds for this purpose."

Crapo agreed that the destiny of the federal lands and grazing is the issue of the Owyhee Initiative, an initiative put together by the Owyhee County Commissioners last year.

"The Owyhee Initiative would be the appropriate place to begin with a project such as this," Crapo said. "Groups from all aspects of grazing are involved in the initiative and the agreements would be made before approaching legislation."

Crapo continued to say that a buyout program such as the one being introduced by the NPLGC would be detrimental to surrounding communities.

In a talk-back discussion forum by Andy Kerr, an article written by Kerr and Mark Salvo states: "Grazing by domestic animals, mostly beef cattle, has done more damage to North America than a bulldozer and chainsaw combined. Not only have livestock been degrading the landscape longer than developers, miners and loggers, but they have also grazed nearly everywhere. Yet the conservation movement has paid scant attention to this issue, even on publicly owned federal lands where livestock mow through 257 million acres annually."

The report continues to say, "historically, conservationists working on federal-lands grazing have focused on increasing the federal grazing fee or unwisely advocating for improved grazing practices. Neither strategy has or could result in the conservation and restoration of grazed western landscapes. What has worked in some local areas is removing livestock's special protection on federal lands or litigation under the Endangered Species Act and the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act."

The PLC concluded that the proposed buyout is not in the best interests of the livestock industry, the well-being of federal lands, nor the American taxpayer.

To pasture...

Martin Jaca of Melba and ranch-hands herd cattle down Highway 78 to federal rangeland last week. Owyhee County cattlemen and cattlemen throughout the west, are being asked to show support for a legislative bill that would buy out ranchers' rangeland rights.

Rimrock Jr. Sr. High band performs at festival

Music students at Rimrock Jr. Sr. High School have enjoyed great success this past year and made great strides in building a solid music program. In just two years the band students have been able to start at the beginning and play at football and basketball games, as well as participate in their first festival since the early 1980's.

On April 10 the Rimrock Concert Band performed at the Snake River Band Festival in Payette and received an excellent rating. The bands must perform three selections in contrasting musical styles and are judged by a panel of three judges. Their selections were Sgt. Major's March, Chalumeau Serenade, and Entrance of the Tall Ships.

The Rimrock Concert Choir performed for the second year in a row at the District III Ensemble Festival on April 17 and received a II rating. Again, the choir must perform three selections in contrasting style and are judged by a panel of three judges. Their selections were Non nobis Domine, The River Sleeps Beneath the Sky, and Sing Cantate Domino.

Individual students in the music program also have performance opportunities throughout the Treasure Valley. Allison Noland and Samantha Morrison were chosen to audition for the Treasure Valley Honor Choir. Allison Noland was chosen to represent Rimrock in this choir through the audition process. The choir consisted of over 200 students from schools across the Treasure Valley. The guest clinician was Merilee Webb, one of the choral directors with Young Americans.

Assalisse Field, Samantha Morrison, and Allison Noland performed vocal solos at the District III Solo Festival in March. Annalise and Samantha received excellent ratings and Allison received a superior rating. Stephen Campbell and Michael Starbuck will also be taking snare drum solos to the District III Junior High Festival in May.

Other performances still to occur for the music department this year include the Elementary Tour April 24 to Bruneau and Grand View Elementary and the spring concert May 15 at the annual Wood Show/Arts Night held at Rimrock. Both ensembles will be performing their festival pieces and the public is invited to attend. Both groups will also be performing at Rimrock's graduation May 19.

There are three graduating seniors this year that have contributed a great deal to the program. Samantha Morrison, Mark Owens, and Allison Noland. Allison has chosen to attend CSI in Twin Falls and plans to work toward an associate's degree in music. She received a $1,000 scholarship based on her audition for entry into the CSI Music Department. Mark Owens has been a contributing member to the band and the choir and has willingly participated in the band opportunities, even though he was unable to take band because of scheduling conflicts. Samantha Morrison has been a member of the Rimrock Concert Choir since the class has been offered. She enjoys music and drama and was inspired enough to seek private vocal lessons.

Unfortunately, the recent budget cuts schools endured have pushed the Bruneau-Grand View School District into eliminating the music program. The students have been a joy to work with and have gone above and beyond to produce a quality music program. They are terrific students and deserve the public's support in congratulating them on building a strong music program in the last two years.

"THEY HELPED ME GET MY FINANCES ORGANIZED FOR FREE.
AND I DON'T EVEN BANK AT ZIONS."

—CINDY COOLEY, WEST VALLEY CITY, UTAH

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE A ZIONS CUSTOMER TO GET A FEE-FREE 10-POINT FINANCIAL CHECKUP.
CINDY COOLEY GOT HERS. WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

Cindy Cooley, a single mother from West Valley City, Utah, wanted a financial plan for the future, but wasn't quite sure how to go about it. Then she heard about Zions Bank's 10-Point Financial Checkup.

"I did it to make sure I had everything in line in case something happened to me," explained Cindy. "Besides, I didn't have a will and I wanted to make sure my daughter was taken care of." Getting her finances in order is something Cindy has wanted to do for a long time. "I don't think my credit union offers anything like this," continued Cindy. "There was no cost. And, Zions said I don't need to be a member. So I thought, what have I got to lose?"

So Cindy stopped by a Zions branch. Her experience? "It went really well. They gave me a booklet to go through and figure everything out." Then, armed with her existing financial information, Cindy returned to the bank for her checkup appointment with Branch Manager Lori Harding.

"She just sat down with me and asked a lot of questions," said Cindy, explaining further that it was much easier than she thought it would be, and there was no obligation or pressure. "She just made suggestions... I felt very relaxed."

When asked if she would recommend the checkup to others, Cindy said, "Definitely! I've told my parents about it and my brother and sisters. It feels great. There's a lot of comfort knowing I've done it."

To look into your personalized, fee-free, obligation-free checkup—whether or not you bank with Zions—call or stop in at the nearest branch today.

When it comes to cancer,
CARING is good medicine.
 Just ask Teresa.

"The people at MSTI were right beside me in my fight for life. They taught me to always take the time to give, and get, a hug. Because life may be shorter than you think."

— Teresa Schwisow, age 45, brain cancer survivor

When faced with adversity, we turn to those we can rely on. That's why Teresa turned to St. Luke's Mountain States Tumor Institute (MSTI).

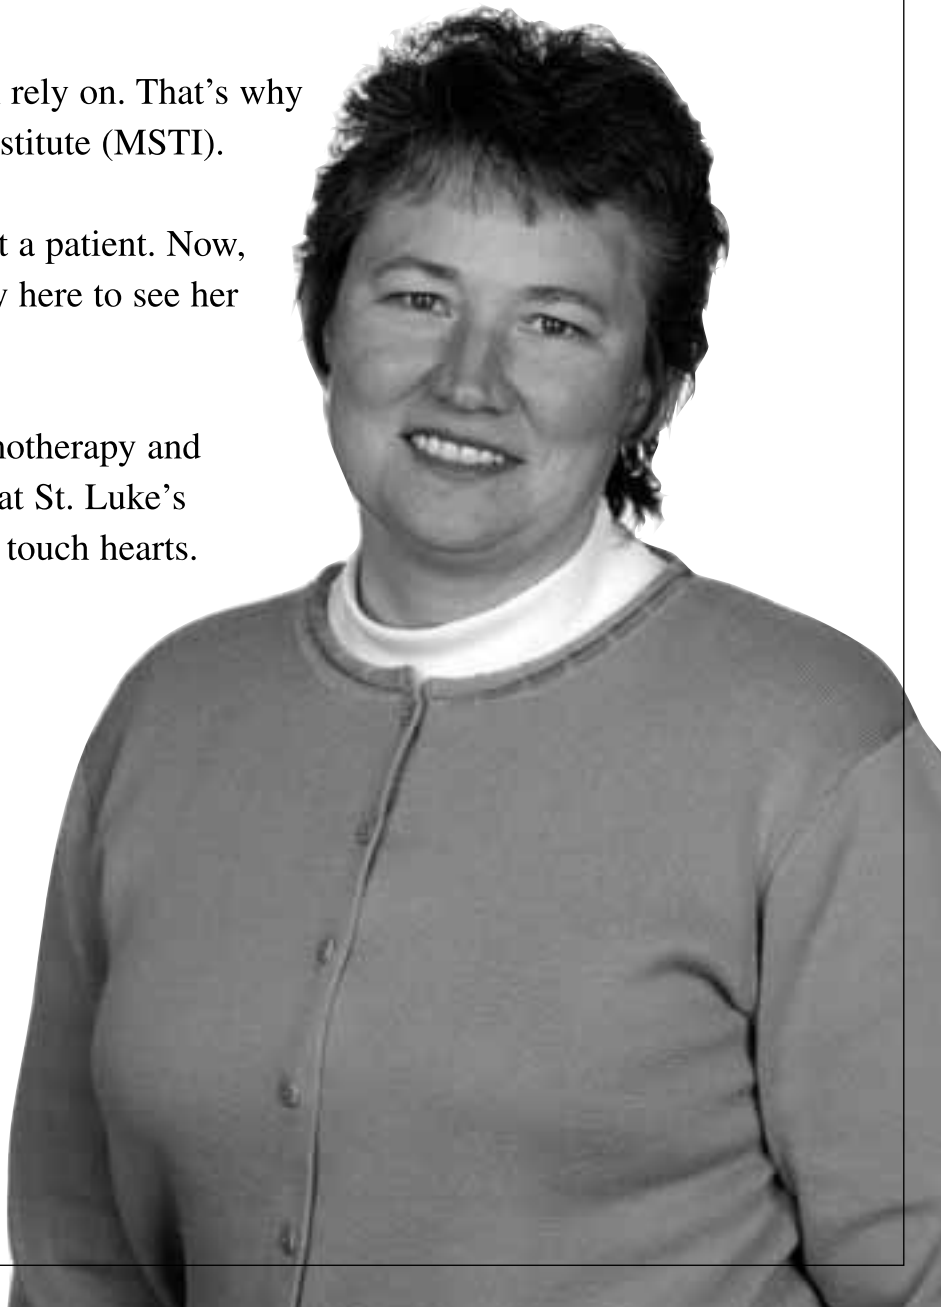

At St. Luke's MSTI, Teresa felt like a person, not just a patient. Now, when she returns for follow-up visits, she's not simply here to see her doctor, she's here to see friends.

Going the extra mile is what caring is all about. Chemotherapy and radiation helped Teresa survive, but the ongoing care at St. Luke's MSTI helped her live. When cancer touches lives, we touch hearts.

Ned McCandless: Enter at your own risk built rifles for precision target work, silhouette-shooting and hunting could not be in greater demand.

“All else being equal, the name of accuracy is consistency,” he says.

The classic rifleman keeps fully up-to-date on all the latest developments in guns and ammunition, but he does not disdain older designs which continue to have distinct advantages. One of McCandless’ favorite cartridges is the 250-3000 Savage, developed by Charles Newton, a name McCandless has long respected. Though the 250 Savage is hardly a new round, McCandless considers an 87-grain bullet driven at 3000 feet-per-second an ideal load for many applications. He showed me a European-mount of an antelope he had killed cleanly (“it dropped like it was pole-axed”) with one shot at 465 yards from a 7X57mm, a cartridge developed many years ago and still going strong in Europe and Africa. He is working on a double rifle, not for African game but for North American brush work, of 35-38-caliber based on the rimmed 303 British military case, a round with roots going all the way back to the blackpowder era, and furnished with a set of shotgun barrels for all-around versatility.

McCandless learned a lot from master American and British riflemakers when he was younger and, now in his 60s, he is working hard to improve on that golden age body of work – developing hyper-accurate rifles and extremely high-performance rifle cartridges based on the .303 British, the .338 Winchester Magnum, the .416 Rigby and .416 Remington Magnum, among others.

“I was fascinated with guns from birth,” McCandless says. His mother should have listened.

By Robert Boatman

There’s a sign on the door of Ned McCandless’ custom riflemaking shop near Marsing that gives fair warning to any visitor who might be offended by cigar and pipe smoking, anti-liberal talk, a literate male sense of humor or any of a litany of other politically incorrect experiences which may be found inside. Otherwise, assuming Max the Boxer and bouncer rolls his eyes up to give you an approving stare, you’re invited in for a cup of coffee.

It’s likely to be an exotic cup of coffee, perhaps served on a Moroccan tea table and accompanied by a French opera, as McCandless is a man of worldly tastes. His workshop spills over into his bachelor pad, or perhaps it’s the other way around, as McCandless may at any moment wish to put his hands on his zero-tolerance lathe named Cleopatra or his collection of rare books or hand-made trays loaded with wildcat rifle cartridges or photographs of his five ex-wives.

When he was 14 years old, little Ned told his mother he wanted to be a gunsmith but she didn’t believe him. With a family tree full of doctors and lawyers (even his grandmother was a doctor), young McCandless ended up in medical school. But he didn’t end up there for long.

He was soon off to Switzerland where he attended the Zurich Conservatory, studied classical music under Scherchen and Ansermet, and befriended the Royal Philharmonic conductor Sir Thomas Beecham. But that wasn’t what he told his mother he wanted to be when he grew up.

Back in America, McCandless became a college professor, raced cars, worked as a rodeo cowboy, modern ballet dancer and farmer, and performed freelance jobs for the federal government here and abroad which he cannot discuss. He worked for the Job Corps in Marsing for several years and then opened his current custom riflemaking shop.

McCandless isn’t looking for any more business. He is already two years backordered on jobs he has in progress. The man who believes, as Col. Townsend Whelen did, that “only accurate rifles are interesting” and who built that kind of rifle for the US Olympic Shooting Team, has regular customers all over the world. From Louisiana to New Zealand, Africa to Georgia, Boise to Sydney. McCandless-

TOM GANNON

STATE SENATE REPUBLICAN DISTRICT 23

To the Voters of Owyhee County,

As you have read in this paper, the redistricting process has created Legislative District 23 consisting of Owyhee County and the majority of rural Twin Falls County. With strong family ties to Owyhee County, I fully understand your concerns about Owyhee County representation in the new district. My wife of 32 years, Jeanne, grew up on the Davis family ranch in Bruneau.

Jeanne’s grandparents, Perle and Hilda Davis, homesteaded in the Homedale area (on the Oregon side) and farmed the land for over thirty years.

While we all disagree with the geographic boundaries of District 23, for the next ten years this “marriage” will determine our representation in the State Legislature. With the imbalance of nearly three voters in Twin Falls County to every one voter in Owyhee County it would appear that your vote wouldn’t have an effect on the election outcome. Remember Florida in the last election. A strong showing at the primary polls from Owyhee County on May 28th will select your State Senator and send a signal to all future candidates that District 23 is not just Twin Falls County.

My education (BS-Accounting, University of Idaho, Masters Degree, Computer Systems Management), 23 years of service as a Navy Officer, community service and 5 plus years serving the City of Buhl combine to give me the leadership qualities and experience to be your next State Senator. Should I be fortunate enough to win in the primary and general elections I can assure you Owyhee County will have representation in the State Senate.

Sincerely,
Tom Gannon

Marsing Husky Nick Usabel slams a ball during last week's baseball game against the Homedale Trojans. Homedale defeated Marsing 12-2 in five innings. Jake Fernstrom catches for the Trojans.

Trojans stop Huskies 12-2 in 5 innings

Chris Varuska threw 10 strikeouts on the way to his third win, beating the Marsing Huskies 12-2 in a Class 2A Western Idaho Conference baseball game last week.

Homedale took 13 hits, including two triples by Cole Cooper and one triple by Brandon Hathorn in the win.

Marsing's Caleb Showalter slammed a double.

On April 20, Marsing lost a no-hitter game to the New Plymouth Pilgrims 16-0 also in WIC conference ball.

Drew Johnson from New Plymouth, allowed only two base runners on the way to throwing the no-hitter.

Individual results were unavailable.

Ontario tennis team sweeps Trojans

COUNTRY SPORT. – Large numbers of our town denizens, who were snow-bound all Winter, have betaken themselves to the country to rusticate. Innumerable wild geese and ducks abound in Jordan Valley, and double-barreled shot-guns bring thousands of them to the ground. Last week our young friend Casper, who holds forth at Ned Ayer’s shoe-shop, and Bob Weeks, the tin-shop man, started out armed and equipped for rural sport. They made Farnaman’s Ranch their base of operations, and must have made it interesting for milk and butter, and ham and eggs. Tarried about a week and speak in glowing terms of their host. They say that Farnaman wouldn’t take a cent for board, lodging, etc. Good reason why - guess they didn’t have a cent! Mr. F. is building a magnificent stone house and making other valuable improvements. Our unsophisticated sportsmen observed him varnishing a buggy and asked him what kind of varnish he was using, the reply was, “New Orleans molasses;” adding that he wouldn’t take it up town, fearing the boys would appropriate the varnish. We found a splendid duck nicely roasted and labelled “Avalanche” at Charley Hanson’s the other day. Don’t know who perpetrated the joke, but shall always blame Casper.

DON’T BE ALARMED. – We have sworn everlasting warfare against the entire “Creation of Cats”. They appear to cherish an unceasing spite against us. While in our old office they took particular delight getting underneath our floor and making night hideous with their billing and cooing. We moved and thought to get rid of them forever, but the other night we were again startled with infernal squalls and took a six shooter and opened fire on the feline delegation, and out from under our house they scampered in all directions. We have seen none of them since, but should they come again we will shoot. So neighbors don’t be alarmed if you hear banging and mewing. Confound the cats!

ANOTHER STRIKE!. – Fred Reuter and others have struck a new ledge on War Eagle above the Chariot and Elmore. The discovery is called the F. H. Reuter and is said to be nearly two feet wide on the surface with croppings rich in gold. An extension has already been located and a tunnel started thereon, Go in boys! there are plenty of rich ledges yet undiscovered in our mountains.

FALSE ALARM. – Last Monday morning two parties were contending about a wood ranch on the mountain beyond the Poorman mine: imagined each other Indians and commenced dodging among the trees and shooting. A couple of men who were going up on the mountain heard the guns, and rushed down town, and reported that a band of Indians had four men corralled in the timber. Rifles, shotguns and pistols were collected and forty brave men on foot sped to the rescue. Great was their chagrin upon finding no Indians. During the afternoon the party came limping back one after another, tired and hungry. We will venture to say that there is not a place of the same population as this on the Pacific Coast where as many brave and willing men can be obtained at a minute’s warning, to fly to a rescue or fight in case of an emergency.

BIG BRICK. – Stepping into McDonald’s assay office the other day, we saw a pile of Ida Elmore bullion weighing 7.164 ounces, and worth about $50,000. One of these bricks is believed to be the largest ever cast in Idaho Territory.

Power and control Fair board needs its wings clipped

The issue of the use of the fair grounds by the rodeo board needs to be resolved once and for all time. But, regardless of the whims of the fair board chairman, it must be resolved within the bounds of Idaho law. (See news report on page 1 of this issue.)

Watterson, (and obviously some if not all fair board members) assert that the rodeo board must turn over its financial records to the fair board. That demand is absurd. The rodeo board is not and never has been a part of the county government or of the fair board. That group was incorporated years ago for the purpose of producing a rodeo (The first rodeo arena at the fairgrounds was built and paid for with private money by some local individuals). Fair board member Joe Merrick's statement that "[t]he law says that any function on county property as such a financial statement is supplied to the public" is simply not true.

Is the fair board demanding financial statements from the Lions Club, the High School Rodeo Ass'n., or other users? Of course not. It's none of the fair board's business.

For a quarter century this newspaper has been harping on the fact that the county commissioners and the fair board are not following the law in several areas concerning the fair and grounds. This has, in a very large part, created this battle.

It is the duty of the commissioners to maintain the fair grounds, regulate the use, and lease the facilities to outside users. For years the commissioners have collected taxes against a special dedicated levy and turned this money over to the fair board, intermingling it with moneys from another special levy authorized for the operation of the county fair itself. The commissioners have allowed the fair board to control the maintenance of the grounds, have let the fair board arrange rental and fees for use of the facility, and have let them manage the money from those rents, all against state law.

The county fair board is appointed and the county fair levy is authorized for the sole purpose of "collecting, preparing and maintaining an exhibition of the products and industries of the county" at the fair. It also has the authority to let contracts for concessions at the fair. The tax money can be used only to pay salaries, premiums or prizes, and to pay expenses of collecting, preparing, maintaining, exhibiting and advertising incurred in conducting a fair.

But, because the commissioners have allowed the fair board power to control the maintenance, regulate the use of and collect rentals on the facilities, the current dispute has come to a head.

The logical solution is for the commissioners to set a reasonable rental fee for the rodeo board's use of the arena and other areas used primarily for the rodeo, then provide for the maintenance of the facilities.

The fair board has no authorization regarding who uses the facilities, nor how much to charge for that use(with the exception of concessionsat the fair). Its only authority is to conduct a fair.

The other issue, that of allowing beer gardens, is also the responsibility of the commissioners. Under state law, the commissioners are to "regulate the use" of the fair grounds, not the fair board. Once the regulations are in place, the fair board has the power to let contracts for the concessions during the fair.

Watterson and his board might consider what the rodeo means to fair week, rather than try to destroy the rodeo by attempting to control it, and making demands that he has no right to make. The rodeo is the driving force that makes the week-long event the success it is. Without the rodeo, the fair would draw friends and family of 4-H exhibitors. The crowds would not be there, the vendors would not be there, the number of fat stock buyers would diminish.

Everyone would lose.

Tennis, anyone?

I'm not much of a fan of spectator sports. Especially professional shows like basketball and football. I'm not even sure those players are the same species as me. Nor do I much appreciate social sports such as golf. The Scots wasted a lot of time inventing that game when they could have been making more good whisky. And all of those oddball Olympic so-called sports just prove that people in third-world countries have a lot of time on their hands.

I like to watch boxing, if there's a killer fighter involved like Mike Tyson, or a classy one like Oscar De la Hoya. You can see a lot more of a Formula One road race on TV than it's possible to see in person, though you miss the low frequency vibrations of your internal organs. A good old American baseball game or a thoroughbred horse race now and then is pleasant.

But mostly what I like to watch on TV is tennis – not some limp-wristed exhibition match played for charity or some celebrity thing with fat comedians and has-been actors playing the pros for laughs. I like to watch big-time big-money grand-slam singles tennis where everyone plays for keeps. The Australian, the French, the U.S. Open and Wimbledon. The latter two especially are platforms for the most heroic individual battles since the Roman Coliseum.

No pansy 12-round limit and no overmothering referee. The tennis men slug it out three out of five sets and can spend more than four hours out there in the arena. I've seen American Pete Sampras vomit his guts out on court, racked with nausea and pain, barely able to stand, forced to rely on his uncanny ability to serve 120mph+ aces because his cramped, dehydrated body would not allow him to chase down and return any ball that came driving back over the net. Fighting like that and winning, carried away to a hospital at the end.

No on-court coaching and no time-outs. Swiss teen champion Martina Hingus out there all alone crying like a baby through the brilliant execution of her elegant, complex game suddenly spun out of control under the merciless onslaught of power from an unladylike competitor having a very good day.

I think tennis teaches character, because only players with character endure to win those almost unimaginably big million-dollar matches. The glory bestowed upon the champions is of classical proportions and well deserved. These are not ordinary athletes whose scoring ability requires the support of a whole team of players as good as they are. These are hard-working solo players whose entrepreneurial life, while not devoid of glamour and interesting places, is never without a lot of sweat and pain, some blood, schedules that allow for very little social life and the inescapable solitude of truly individual achievement.

Unlike any other sport I can think of at the moment, tennis players get paid only if they win. They do not get paid to just hang around and play. They do not get paid if they are injured or disabled on court. And they most definitely do not get paid if they lose. That's why, of the extraordinarily high proportion of excellent players on the international circuit from Russia and Eastern Europe, none of them are communists. As in all other areas, naïve Americans and Western Europeans are far more likely to be Left-wing ideologues than are people who have actually lived and struggled for freedom in a collectivist State. You couldn't possibly count the number of good little communist kids who worked hard and grew up to be tennis players and moved forthwith to tax-free Monaco.

I don't play tennis anymore. I think you reach a point in any seriously competitive activity where you decide either to make that your life's work or to move on and make room for something else. My current involvement is to see how many thousands of yards I can accurately sail a .50 BMG bullet.

But I still like to watch tennis. Carry on, Pistol Pete and little Martina.

On the edge of common sense

Baxter Black, DVM

Not easy being against everything

It's not an easy time for the ANTI's. Circumstances are working against them. All in the same week I saw four examples of their dilemma.

National Public Radio interviewed the writer of an earlier book which outlined how vegetarianism would save the planet. She had contended that third world people were starving, in part, because America was feeding grain to livestock. Even with his polite softball questions it was apparent that her contention was built in Dreamland. The author was now promoting the consumption of "whole foods": growing your own garden and buying from stores that featured organic, natural, no preservative, eco-approved products. The interviewer pointed out that her new plan was inconsistent with her dream to help the poor, i.e., "whole grain" stores routinely cater to communities with high incomes because their food is so expensive. The author conceded that was true and drifted off wistfully, I imagined, dreaming of the time when people like her had credibility.

The New York Times printed an interview with a convicted animal rights terrorist. The prisoner's comments spoke for themselves. He was a thrift store version of the Una-Bomber. You could almost hear the slicker ANTI groups running for cover.

In the USA Today that week I read a big article entitled "Honk If You're Overrun by Geese." The story explained that normally migrating Canadian geese are choosing to stay in the U.S. year round and are multiplying rapidly. They are despoiling city parks, suburban open spaces and golf courses with hundreds of thousands of tons of goose poop. Suburban and city dwellers concerned about the public's aesthetics, health and safety are calling for drastic control measures, even to the point of depopulating them. Animal rights activists are unhappy. One is quoted as saying, "They are attempting to get permits to just go out and kill birds!"

Well, duh.

Then, in the same newspaper two teams of geneticists were hailed for mapping the genomes of rice, one of the most widely consumed grains in the world. One scientist was quoted as saying improved strains and genetically modified rice will be the result, thus allowing rice breeders to expand crop yields and alleviate hunger. Conspicuous in the article was that no opinion was included from genetically modified food opponents.

The bombing of New York - Washington, D.C., has made us look at our lives, the earth and our place on it, differently. When people or groups espouse silly ideas, mock legitimate science or refuse to acknowledge our global responsibility, they place themselves in contempt. Or worse for them, they are deemed irrelevant. This is what's happening to the ANTI's, whose extremist behavior and terrorist bedfellows have engendered increasing public distrust.

Never underestimate the common sense of the everyday working mother. She can spot a lunatic quicker than the FBI, CNN or airport security.

Welcome, Deputy Reed

Nothing makes an impression, as does a happy person. I saw such a person on the road to Juniper Mountain several days ago in the form of retired former Malheur County Deputy and newly employed Owyhee County Deputy, George Reed.

Deputy Reed was sporting a broad grin and a newly started mustache which will be a bit grayer than the former if it's beginning is an indication of the finished product.

Gate openers and other malcontents had best be aware because beneath the grin is a dedicated lawman who likes nothing better than catching bad guys. He will be prowling the backcountry and the trails he takes to access the Owyhees will be the same trails he uses to deliver wrong doers to Sheriff Aman's facility.

Welcome to Owyhee County, Deputy Reed.

Stopping aids or spreading it?

by Roger Arnoff

Did the Department of Health and Human Services help fund a clubhouse for homosexuals in San Francisco? Jeff Sheehy, described as "a long-time gay activist" on the O'Reilly Factor on Fox News on March 28, said that Vice President Al Gore gave a nonprofit homosexual organization called Stop AIDS Project a check for $500,000 at the groundbreaking for its building right before the 2000 California primary.

Sheehy described it to Bill O'Reilly as "your money," meaning taxpayer dollars. He said, "I'm not a big fan of the $500,000 donation myself. Al Gore dropped it off because he was trying to buy some - -." O'Reilly interrupted, asking, "Al Gore did this?" Sheehy said, "Yes, you know, I was a big Bill Bradley supporter."

O'Reilly was mainly interested in how the building was being used. He went over a list of events held there, including a Leather Pride Reception, a QueerYouthapalooza and a Drag King Junior contest. Sheehy said that the QueerYouthapalooza was like a prom, "like a bunch of queer kids," some of whom were not sure of their sexual orientation.

The fact that the Department of Health and Human Services, HHS, had been giving money to the Stop AIDS Project had attracted the attention of Rep. Mark Souder, R-Ind. last August. In a letter to HHS Secretary Tommy G. Thompson, Rep. Souder said that the Centers for Disease Control, CDC, had repeatedly denied that any federal funds had been used to pay for a number of questionable events "dubbed HIV 'prevention programs'" that were sponsored by the Stop AIDS Project. He pointed out that the Project's program director had admitted that all the questionable events scheduled for August would use funds provided by the CDC.

Two of the grants in the year 2000 totaled $472,883. Jeff Sheehy's claim that Gore gave the group $500,000 may have represented a rounding of that sum. His claim that it was used to help pay for the clubhouse has not been confirmed. A third grant in 2000 raised the total for the year to $698,000. The questionable events mentioned in Souder's letter included a "gay fisting event" and a "Booty Call," where "dildos, plugs, fisting and rimming" were discussed along with "tales of intercourse and orgasm." Others were a GUYWATCH, "where a guy can make friends and find dates" and a Great Sex Workshop, a "hands-on, clothes-on exploration of intimacy and fantasy." These and three similar events were advertised on the Stop AIDS Project's Web site.

Rep. Souder's letter resulted in HHS's Office of Inspector General, OIG, investigating the Project's compliance with its cooperative agreements with the Centers for Disease Control. Its report states, "The CDC basic principles require that all AIDS-related materials 'include information about the harmful effects of promiscuous sexual activity and intravenous substance abuse, and the benefits of abstaining from such activities.' They also require that no funds 'be used to provide education or information designed to promote or encourage, directly, homosexual or heterosexual sexual activity or intravenous substance abuse.'" They also bar the use of obscene material in providing information on how to reduce the risk of getting AIDS.

The events sponsored by the Stop AIDS Project and advertised on its Web site last August were strong on promoting homosexual sex and weak on discouraging unsafe sex. The OIG concluded that "some of the information presented in the workshops...could be viewed as encouraging directly...sexual activity in violation of CDC's guidance." It said that the Project's sexually explicit advertisements similarly violated the guidance and could be viewed as "obscene." Normal people who know what "fisting" is find it revolting, not just obscene.

The CDC grants were made "to provide outreach services, develop and hold workshops and train members of the community as workshop providers." The Project did not keep records of its expenditures by project and funding source, and the OIG found that CDC funds were used to support all of the Project's activities. It did not monitor any of the "workshops" or review all training materials, but it promised a more comprehensive review of the CDC's AIDS program in FY2002. The CDC gave $7.2 million to 28 AIDS-prevention organizations in San Francisco alone in FY2000. It is not likely that HHS will even try to find out how many of those organizations are flouting the CDC guidelines and perhaps doing more to encourage behavior that spreads AIDS rather than preventing it. It is too bad the media have shown so little interest in this story.
