Brute strength and eight seconds

Slash T Rodeo Company brings only their best stock to the Owyhee County Rodeo

by Cheryl Peterson

Eight seconds is all that stands between a bull rider, the brute strength of a bull and a hand full of cold hard cash in any rodeo, but the victory is not the cash, the victory is the thrill of breaking a bull and the unforgetfull cheers of a delighted crowd.

Performances will begin at 7:15 p.m. tonight (Wednesday) and end with the crowning of this year's Owyhee County Rodeo queen on Saturday night.

Pre-rodeo mutton bustin' will kick the evening off followed by eight regular ICA approved events beginning at 8 p.m. Bareback, bull and bronc riding will feature each nightly event which will also include team roping, wrestling, breakaway roping and barrel racing.

Search continues for suspected drug dealer

Authorities are still seeking three suspected drug dealers including a Homedale man, as theirs and 28 other alleged drug dealers', trial date nears.

The three, Juan Zavala, from Homedale, Amanda Mcerquiaga and Geoffrey Clarine are suspected to be a part of a much larger network of 31 alleged drug dealers arrested earlier this year.

Authorities broke the drug ring after an intensive five-month investigation involving federal, state and local law enforcement. Now prosecutors are attempting to try all 31 defendants at once, after all 31 are behind bars.

As officers were arresting the defendants, Zavala, Mcerquiaga and Clarine disappeared. The search for Zavala included the assistance of the Homedale Police Department and Homedale Police Chief Jeff Eidemiller said Zavala is considered to be armed and dangerous.

bulls and ranch hand bronc riding.

Ranch hand bronc riding will have added money and two performances will be held, one each on Wednesday and Thursday. Nine performance contestants use stock saddles. "This event is the way the original cowboys started saddle bronc riding," rodeo announcers said.

The junior bull riding on miniature bulls will consist of contestants 9-13. Contestants cannot be over 120 pounds and six contestants will ride per performance. Those wanting to enter will need to call Rebecca at 1-209-536-0363.

Slash T Rodeo Company from Gooding, Idaho will again delight the crowds and cowboys alike with many bulls determined to keep a fearless rider off his back. Three of those bulls will stand out in the minds of every bull rider to enter the Owyhee County arena.

ET, the former Pepsi Bounty Bull, was brought to the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo two years ago with a $3,000 bounty to the first rider to stay on the now 1,800 pound bull. Although the bounty has been pulled from ET, many bull riders still hope for the day to get a chance to ride the red limousine bull that again has not been ridden yet this year by anyone in the ICA standards. ET has only been ridden once. Lee Akin won third place in the PRCA in 2000 with a score of 89.5 and an eight second ride on the back of a monster bull.

Oreo will also join the arena as an unridden bull. He is a black belted bull who has been topping the scales at over 1,800.

The tiger striped bull, Pearl Moon, will also fight his way through cowboys during the four-day event in Homedale. He carried a title of being unridden until recently when he was held in an eight-second ride. Pearl Moon is an 1,800-pound mixture of power and strength.

Smokin' Joe will delight the crowd with his twists, turns and bucks. Joe is a bridle cross, 1,600-pound bull that also has not been ridden this year.

But all eyes will be glued to the nearly one ton, yellow, tan and orange cross bull called Hang-um High. He is also unridden this year.

In the bareback events, Bay Wolf, Bay Rum, RingTail and Gone Wild will join the arena to keep a rider off his back.

Jamie Cox from Filer will enter the arena as this year's bullfighter. He was honored as ICA bullfighter of the year and has recently went to a pro status.

Local announcer Pat Stanford from Jordan Valley will again announce this year's event.

The wild horse race will have an extra-added bonus purse given by the Rodeo Board. Again this year, the Lions Club has donated $1,000 purse bonus.

Horse entries will line up in front of the swimming pool and all other entries will line up on 4th Street East beginning near the baseball field. Stations will be set-up for each class.

Cash awards will be given to entries in the sweepstakes theme float, community floats, cars and youth. In the horse division, awards will be presented to 4-H and youth clubs, family and drill riding clubs, theme wagons and buggies and sponsored wagons.

Other categories receiving ribbons only will be commercial entries and individual horse entries. Ribbons will be awarded for the best adult male, best adult female, best pairs which will include, mixed of all ages, 6-18 year-olds, 13-19 year olds, and 7-12 year olds, boys 6 and under, girls 6 and under, juvenile costume, adult costume, and theme costume. Horse sponsors are still needed; for more information contact Mary Tibbett, 337-5335.

This year a large group of horse riders will attend the parade as part of the drill team competition. Tibbets said the riders will need to park at the fair grounds as they will be riding in competition shortly after the parade.

The Raw Hiders, Rough Riders, Ghost Riders, Ada County Possettes, Ten Mile Riding Club and the Leather Slappers will grace the streets with decorative colored costumes.

The 4-H/FFA Junior Livestock sale will begin at 12 noon at the Fair and Rodeo grounds.

Beta Sigma Phi organized this year's parade and would like to thank all that helped with the parade. Sponsors for this year are the Owyhee County Fair board and the Owyhee County Rodeo board. – CP

"We are continuing to work with the Drug Enforcement Agency on catching Zavala," Eidemiller said. "He still has ties to Homedale and has been seen in the area in the last 30 days. People should know that Zavala is considered to be armed and extremely dangerous, more so now since he knows he is wanted by federal agencies."

Eidemiller said if Zavala is seen he should not be approached. "People can call us, the Owyhee County Sheriff's office; people in Canyon County should immediately contact law enforcement through 911. Do not approach him." -CP

Elko woman killed in one vehicle rollover

A 17-year-old Elko woman was killed instantly in a one-vehicle rollover on Highway 51 near the Idaho/Nevada border in the early morning hours of July 29.

A spokesman for the Idaho State Police said Nicole Rounds was wearing a seatbelt but was partially ejected from her vehicle when it rolled several times.

"She went off the shoulder of the road and over-corrected causing her to go off the road again," a dispatcher from ISP said last week. "Speed was also a factor as she was apparently traveling at an high rate of speed."

The dispatcher said alcohol was not a factor in the accident, but said Round probably fell asleep at the wheel. The accident was still under investigation. He said Round died on impact.

Man pleas for help, lands behind bars

Malheur County Sheriff's deputies arrested a California man last week after he approached an officer for assistance because he was hungry and thirsty. The arrest did not stem from the man's plea for help, the man asked the same officer who had been involved in a high-speed chase with him the day before.

Curtis Dwayne Rogers, 40 from Modesto, California eluded Malheur County and Oregon State Police officers July 26 at mile marker 44 near Rome, Oregon after a Malheur County Sheriff's Deputy attempted to stop Rogers on a simple traffic stop. He led officers down Highway 95 at speeds exceeding 100 miles per hour.

Rogers turned off the highway at a gravel pit then fled for approximately three miles on foot.

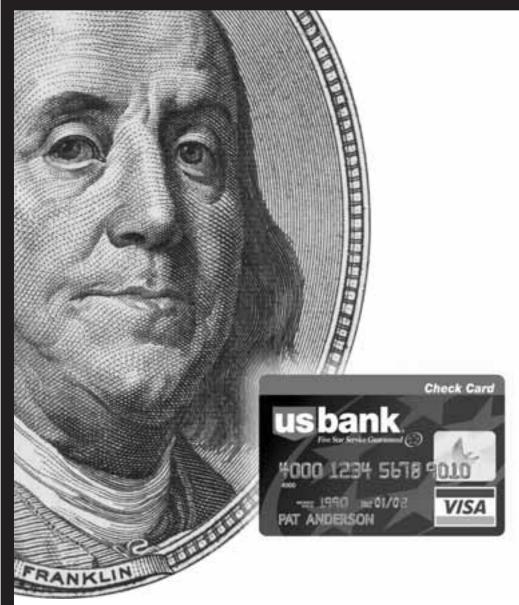

"We caught up to him when he barricaded himself into some caves in a rock cliff," Malheur County Sheriff Andy Bentz said last week. "We requested backup and had a search team start looking. He had barricaded himself in some rocks and after we determined he was not armed, we called off the search at dark."

Rogers may have been able to make a clean getaway, but he made one mistake. A Malheur County Deputy saw Rogers again the next morning asking for help because he was thirsty and hungry.

"The deputy he requested help from just happened to be the same deputy he eluded the day before," Bentz said. "Rogers is now being housed in the Malheur County jail."

Rogers was charged with four misdemeanor charges, eluding officers on foot, failure to perform the duties of a driver, reckless driving and criminal mischief. He also faces one felony count of eluding officers in a vehicle.

"We had eight Malheur County Deputies, four Oregon State Police and put Owyhee County Sheriff's office on alert," Bentz said. "I would like to thank all of them for their help and effort." -CP

Catering permits overlooked by county commissioners beer sales at the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo, the subject of catering permit requirements arose for the Owyhee County Commissioners who discovered neither entity serving alcohol at the yearly event have been in compliance with county code.

The American Legion has been serving beer during the fair and rodeo for, what most say, has been over 50 years. Recently the rodeo board began selling beer during the rodeo as well.

The American Legion sent a letter to the Commissioners on July 11, stating the rodeo board had not been in compliance with state or county codes requiring permits for the sale of beer. Upon further investigation, the American Legion found they as well had not been in compliance with county code requiring a catering permit to sell beer.

"In response to an inquiry made June 28 to the Idaho State Police, we learned that the Rodeo Committee obtained a beer/wine permit for last year's Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo which permitted the Committee to sell beer only on Aug. 11, 2001, between the hours of 7 p.m. and 1 a.m.," Dan Grober, attorney for the American Legion, wrote to the commissioners. "If the Rodeo Committee sold beer at last year's fair for more than the six hours for which it received the permit, it did so in violation of Idaho law. Furthermore, in addition to exposing the Fair Board and ultimately the County to significant potential liability, the distributor who provided the beer to the Committee for sale at times other than those for which the permit applied was also

In the ongoing dispute over subjected to significant without our permission. In June eer sales at the Owyhee potential liability.

I talked to the fair board and

On June 28, a letter from the Idaho State Police Administrative Assistant Alcohol and Beverage Control, Denise Rogers told Grober that they had "no record of beer license issued for the Owyhee County Rodeo Board," the letter states.

"However we do have a beer/ wine permit issued to the Owyhee County Rodeo Board for August 11, 2001 for the fair grounds in Homedale," the letter continues.

"We would like people to know our side of the story," American Legion Post #0032 Commander Jake Pierce said last week. "We have never had any problems with selling beer down there until this year. We have only wanted to do what has been best for the community.

"We used to get our permits from Boise and then they moved it to Meridian," Legion member Paul Fisher said. "A few years ago they told us that we did not need a catering permit because we are a nonprofit organization. Now this year the county says we need a county catering permit. We have never had to have one before."

County Ordinance No. 90-04 is an ordinance for the county to regulate and control the sale and distribution within the county of Owyhee of beer, liquor, and wine. It requires a separate license for any person to sell beer, liquor, or wine at retail or by the drink. Former commissioner Richard Bass on Dec. 10, 1990 signed the ordinance.

"There is an investigation into the beer license from the state police on the rodeo board," Pierce said last week. "They used our license last year without our permission. In June I talked to the fair board and we signed the contract. Now we are going all over it again and we at the American Legion are giving up one beer garden to try and keep the peace."

Records from the Department of Law Alcohol. Enforcement Beverage, Control shows the "Owyhee County Rodeo Committee" received a beer/ wine permit for August 8-10, 2001 from 7 p.m. until 1 a.m. The records also show a beer/ wine permit for the rodeo committee for August 11, 2001 from 7 p.m. until 1 a.m.

Permits document with the department for the American Legion show a beer/wine permit purchased for Aug. 8-9, 2001, from noon until 1 a.m. and for Aug. 10-11 from noon until 1 a.m.

County Clerk Cindy Eaton said neither group had purchased a catering permit from the county. The Commissioners were unavailable for comment.

The American Legion has purchased a catering permit for this year's rodeo. -CP

Wilson Butte 4-H Club

by Kaycee Culbertson

Since Wilson Butte 4-H Club had their first meeting on November 24 this year the sheep members have had quite a few meetings and activities.

On May 18 at the Wilson Butte School House the kids gave a demonstration. Kate Blackstock, Shelby Brown, Dally Culbertson, Riata Culbertson, Cooper Culbertson, and Kaycee Culbertson were the kids who acted in a sheep demonstration. On May 4 in Marsing we held a car wash and would like to thank all the people who let us wash their vehicles. On May 8 we had a swim party at Givens Hot Springs where we also took a test on what we learned on sheep this year. On May 25 we were shown how to fit and bathe our lamb. We were also shown what to look for when buying a lamb. Also on June 15 we had a fitting and show contact for all the kids who did not know what to do. The kids who did know what to do helped those who didn't. Even though it was a real hot day all the kids had fun getting wet from washing their lambs.

The fair is just around the corner and all the Wilson Butte kids are getting their animals ready for showing. We are hoping you will come watch and cheer us all on. Thanks for reading this and see you at the Owyhee County Fair.

Of course, the best way to eat the corn is hot from the grill, but you also can cut the corn off the cob for roasted corn relish or salsa. Stir roasted corn kernels into cornmeal muffins or pancakes or sprinkle them on just about any

Southwestern or Mexican dish from taco salad to enchiladas. Dear Betty,

How long can I keep fresh sweet corn in the refrigerator? Galena, Kan.

Sweet corn tastes best the day you buy it. However, if you put the ears in a plastic bag in the fridge, the flavor will still be good for a day or two.

Up to our ears in corn!

Dear Betty,

I'd like to try roasting corn in the husks like at the fair, but don't know how to do it. What's the best way?

Waxahachie, Texas

Is there anything better than roasted corn-on-the-cob at the fair? I love the aroma of the roasting ears almost as much as that rich, smoky flavor. But you don't have to go to the fair to get delicious roasted corn. It's easy to make on your grill at home.

First, go to the farmers' market or supermarket and buy the freshest sweet corn. Be sure it's in the husk or leaves, then:

Prepare the coals or gas grill for direct medium heat.

Carefully pull back the husk of each ear and remove the silk. Ease the husks back over the ears and tie in place with a thin piece of husk or string.

Set the grilling rack so it's 4 to 5 inches above the heat. Place the ears on the grill and close the cover. Grill for 20 to 30 minutes or until tender. Turn the ears every five minutes so they roast evenly.

If you're in a hurry, shave about 10 minutes off the cooking time when grilling corn. You'll have to husk it first, then wrap each ear in foil. Add 1 tablespoon butter and one ice cube or 2 tablespoons water to each packet.

Want to add some zip to your roasted corn? After you've pulled the husks back and removed the silk, brush the ears with olive oil and sprinkle with chili powder, freshly ground black pepper and a touch of salt. Or melt about tablespoons butter, stir in 1 tablespoon taco seasoning mix or lemon pepper and spread the seasoned butter on the corn. Then close the husks back up and roast. Yum!

Another recycling project Mrs. Uda hopes to get into full swing is the collection of old newspapers. Homedale residents wishing to donate old papers may contact Mrs. Uda. The papers are worth 1 cent per pound and proceeds from this drive will assist with the construction of parallel beams and other wooden structure playground equipment at the Riverside Park.

MINING ACCIDENT. – Last Tuesday, Jos. Low Req., Superintendent of the Oro Fino and Ida Elmore mines, met with rather a serious and painful accident from the explosion of a blast in a drift that was being run for the purpose of connecting the Oro Fino with the New York tunnel. At the time of the accident Mr. Low was walking through the drift, supposing the men were not at work, but presently he heard the hissing noise of burning fuse within three or four feet of him, and just had time to throw himself forward into a cavity that had been blasted out, when the blast went off throwing some fragments of rock against his left leg, fracturing the fibula and otherwise bruising the limb. The men not knowing that any one was near had just lighted the fuse and stepped into another drift. Mr. L. has been brought to town where his injuries are being carefully attended to, and from good authority we learn that he will soon be on his pins again.

THE MISSISSIPPI. – A perpendicular shaft is now down on this mine thirty-five feet, at which depth the ledge is five feet wide, somewhat broken up but consisting mostly of quarts. We were shown a large piece of the ore literally covered with globules of gold and silver after having been roasted in a blacksmiths' forge. The Mississippi is one of the most promising mines in the County and it will probably be purchased by J. H. Johnson, who has it bonded for a Chicago company.

NEW SALOON. – Poorman Pete is fitting up a cozy saloon corner of Washington and Third Streets. Will open to-night. Pete can't be beat in that line.

GRASSHOPPERS. – Robert Davidson, just over from Catharine Creek, informs us that myriad's of grasshoppers have made their appearance in that locality, destroying every green thing on their line of march. Mr. Hunter's ranch has been swept of nearly everything in the vegetable line. Cabbages, corn and potatoes disappeared like magic. This is strange. As there were no cricket this season abundant crops were anticipated in the valleys to the eastward, but it seems that crickets are not so bad as the grasshopper pest, which in destroying capacity resemble the locusts of old.

BULLION SHIPMENT. – During the month of July, Wells, Fargo and Co. shipped from this place to San Francisco, per Hill Beachey's Stage, $142,000 in bullion—coin value. Henceforth the bullion shipments will be much greater, and before the end of the year we expect the figures will reach at least half a million per month.

John Grete has opened a saloon in connection with his bakery where the best of lager, wines, liquors and cigars can be obtained. All kinds of pies, cakes and bread constantly on hand. John has a knack of making folks feel at home – drop in and see him.

The Catholic Church committee have purchased the Union Church at Ruby City and are now receiving proposals for moving and rebuilding it here.

RETURNED. – Capt. Harris, commanding Camp Lyon, has returned to that post with his command after having scouted the country between there and Camp Harney. It is thought that but very few of the Lo family now infest that locality, as but little sign was discovered.

THE WEATHER. – Last Wednesday we were visited by the heaviest rain-storm of the season. It fell in torrents the greater portion of the afternoon, flooding the streets, filling the gutters and visibly raising the creek. It is very hot now during day time but cool and pleasant nights.

Senate OK's Daschle's Security Plan

Sen. Thomas Daschle (D-SD) pulled a fast one last week by adding the "Black Hills Fire Prevention" agreement to the Supplemental Defense Appropriations bill passed by Congress and now on its way to the White House. The agreement allows forest managers to immediately begin thinning trees in Black Hills forests and by-passing environmental comment periods. The move prompted a letter to Sen. Daschle from the Western Caucus noting that "[T]he wildfire problem has been elevated to crisis proportions by appeals, lawsuits and gratuitous bureaucracy that effectively prohibit forest management on any meaningful scale." The letter stated that to oppose similar relief for the rest of the states would smack of hypocrisy and urged him to ignore the ridiculous demands of the environmental community (which has remained silent on the issue). Rep. Scott McInnis (R-CO), called for Daschle to join in reform of the Forest Service's decision making process, stating that "in one case, a single thinning project had to go through 800 steps to be approved...and took nearly three years to work through the...pipeline." Unfortunately, the area was burned to a crisp by the devastating Hayman fire before work could be started. Voters need to let Sen. Daschle know that there can be no valid argument for denying the same protection for Americans everywhere.

California Coastal Commission Held Unconstitutional

The powerful, anti-private property California Coastal Commission has been held unconstitutional by a California trial court. Over a year ago, on May 8,2001, Sacramento Superior Court Judge Charles C. Kobayashi ruled in Marine Fisheries Society v. California Coastal Commission, that the composition and activities of the Commission are unconstitutional under the Separation of Powers provisions in the California Constitution because the agency is responsible to the Legislature but performs both executive and quasi-judicial tasks. The Commission is the heavy handed agency that imposes unreasonable restrictions on coastal landowners such as requiring easements forpublic access across private land in order to receive approval to build (Nollan v. California Coastal Commission). The decision is on appeal, and if not overturned, will rock the non-growth concept of the environmental community.

Environmentalism Obstructs Military Readiness

On July 9th, General John Keane, vice chief of staff of the Army, testified before the Senate Committee on the Environment and Public Works declaring that environmental laws are creating "formidable" problems. He said: "[A]t Ft. Bragg, the Army has been ordered to protect all the trees, in which birds might have or want to have a nest. We have a 250 foot buffer around each tree. There can be no bivouacking or occupation for more than two hours at a time, no use of camouflage, no weapons fired other than 7.62 and 50 caliber ammunition...The soldiers can't make noise because it might offend the birds. Let's get real." The hearing should have been held in Senate Armed Services Committee, but four environmental sub-committee chairmen; Barbara Boxer (D-CA), Joseph Lieberman (D-CT), Bob Graham (D-FL), and Harry Reid (D-NV) argued that because the House had included provisions to provide relief from environmental restrictions in the Defense authorization bill, it should be heard in Environmental and Public Works instead. Jim Jeffords (I-VT) did his part by holding up the hearings until after the Senate passed the Defense authorization bill, minus the critical measures.

Central Park Host to New Species

A new species of centipede has been discovered in Central Park and NewYorkers seem thrilled over the news. The tiny, four tenths of an inch creature was discovered living in decomposing debris by folks from the American Museum of Natural History who were working on a project to restore the Park's wooded areas. After U.S. scientists failed to identify the miniscule munchkin, it was sent to Italy where it was determined to be an entirely new breed of cat, so to speak. The creature is called Nannarrup hoffmani, for Dr. Richard L. Hoffman of the Virginia Museum of Natural History, one of the scientists who couldn't solve the centipede mystery. If declared an endangered species, a walk in the park may take a lot more planning in the future.

Turn Out the Lights...

A Loudon County, Virginia, supervisor introduced a proposal to ban the use of outdoor lights at night. Labeled as the "Vampire or Kidnappers Enhancement Act," the proposal would ban security lights in shopping centers, billboards, lights advertising local businesses, and of course, no Christmas lights. Elizabeth Alvarez, assistant director of Dark Sky International says: "We try to teach people when, where and how much light they should be using for energy and environmental reasons." These folks claim "light pollution" causes needless deaths of "billions of moths and other nocturnal insects" each year and that "increased nightlighting associated with human civilization disrupts important behaviors and physiological processes with significant ecological consequences."

It's fair and rodeo week

After all the hubub surrounding the rodeo and the fair, everything's a "go" this week, as the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo Week is underway.

In spite of the fighting, grandstanding, and power pulls, it appears that most of those involved are working together to make the week come off as scheduled.

And then, it will be over — except for resolving the issues temporarily put aside to make the week a success. There's the issues of the expired terms of the fair board members, the resolution of the rodeo grounds' use in the future, and the roles of the fair board, the 4-H program, and the commissioners regarding the fair.

The fair events began Monday morning with the usual horse events and continues throughout the week, the four-night rodeo starts tonight and ends with the crowning of the queen Saturday night.

The parade will run through town Saturday morning, followed by thelivestock sale at noon.

If there's a lesson to be learned in all this, it's that despite the conflicts, perceived conflicts, and so forth, the folks of Owyhee County can put it all aside and make the week a success anyway.

And that they are doing.

Profit-Hungry companies abandon U.S. workers, farmers

by John Thompson, Director of Information

There is less than one penny's worth of sugar in a 60-cent package of Lifesavers candy. Yet when Kraft Foods recently announced plans to build a new plant in Quebec, Canada and close the original Lifesavers manufacturing plant in Michigan, the company cited the cost of sugar as one of its reasons to move north.

Another candy company, Brach's Confections Inc., alleged similar reasons when it left Chicago for Juarez Mexico last year. Other companies that have recently moved or are making plans to move out of the U.S. have employed similar public relations strategies. Blame it on higher wages, energy costs, insurance, cost of raw materials or anything else they can find. But don't blame the company. After all, they're just trying to maximize profits in a competitive, global economy.

It's easy (for people with no scruples) to forget, or overlook that many of these companies were built by the sweat and muscle of the American worker. And that their raw product supplies come from family farms, ranches, small businesses and other producers who have cooperated, made concessions and at times suffered financially in order to perpetuate a partnership. Now, all across America, these companies are turning their collective backs on their partners, chasing profits across borders and beginning new business relationships with foreigners.

A study commissioned by the American Sugar Alliance highlights some of the reasons why U.S. companies are relocating to Canada and Mexico. The average wage for a union worker at the Kraft plant in Holland, Michigan is $31,824 per year compared to $14,768 in Quebec and $1,165 in Juarez, Mexico. Kraft will save $10.2 million per year on wages alone. For health insurance, Kraft pays $2,256 per worker per year in Michigan compared to $605 under Canada's socialized health plan and $360 per worker per year in Mexico.

However, the study showed the cost of sugar varied only slightly at 22.1 cents per pound in Michigan, 20.7 cents per pound in Quebec and 27 cents per pound in Juarez.

Maybe there is nothing that can be done to reverse this alarming trend. Persuading other countries to pay their workers a living wage is often futile. And persuading some companies to stay here because it's the right thing to do often yields the same result as spitting on a forest fire.

The fact that American farmers and manufacturers can compete with companies in countries that have no reservations about paying workers less than $5 per day is a testament to our quality, ingenuity and productivity.

The enactment of country of origin labeling in 2004 will go a long way toward providing American consumers with the information they need about where fruit, vegetables and meat are produced. We hope that given that information, those consumers will choose to buy American and know that when they do they are helping to perpetuate a partnership.

A contest of wills

Loading a cow is a contest of wills, usually between a 4-legged beast with a thick skull and a stubborn streak and a 2-legged beast with a thick skull and a stubborn streak.

Shawn and Rick had sorted off the ignorant pig (not a literal biological description, but rather a personality classification) into the loading pen. Both a'horseback, they tried to push her into the loading alley. She'd circle, turn back, charge the horses, blow snot, run into the fence and try to scale the wall. Anything but load.

The wall, or fence, as it were, was hard to scale. It consisted of railroad ties set five inches apart, stockade style, and standing six feet tall. There was no danger of her escaping.

Shawn, decision maker of the two, grew frustrated, as in "I'll load that no good, snake eatin', no loadin', head down, sorry excuse for a tail draggin' salt licker...Rick; git off yer horse!"

They both dismounted. Following instructions, Rick applied the "Hulk Hogan tail twist" to the thousand pound, on-the-fight, polled, cactus eating, bag of buzzard bait (again, a personality classification). Shawn guided her with a handy piece of humane cow director, shaped like a 2 x 4.

They got her within 2 feet of the alley neck when she whirled, did a 180 and looked Rick in the eye. Rick turned and ran. He maintained a 12 inch lead as they raced across the loading pen. He was looking over his shoulder when he ran out of pen.

Like Roadrunner into the cliff, he hit the wall a full second before she licked the stamp and stuck him to it! (Author's note: one does not slide down the face of a creosote railroad tie as smoothly as down a tiled wall. Tar and splinters give it the Velcro effect.) Meanwhile the cow turned back into the pen like a man-eating shark in the shallow end of the pool. She pawed the ground and charged Shawn!

Engaging his cowboy mentality, he drew back the board in baseball bat fashion, unfortunately she threw a fast ball. He misjudged, swung late, the crack Rick heard was not the bat, but a rib. She caught him full frontal.

He was doubled over her head, arms around her neck, clinging desperately to avoid getting pulled down under the trampling feet as she plowed across the dirt.

Alas, he went down in front of the locomotive legs and she mowed him down. He rolled - then unrolled - flat out, belly to the sun. From their crumpled viewpoint Rick and Shawn watched this fine Brangus cow scan the battlefield, turn, and walk down the alley up into the trailer.

"There," said Shawn, scratching his thick skull and rubbing his stubborn streak, "Just right."

Ambulance crew offers clarifications

Regarding the information reported in a July 17th article on Hepatitis C, we would like to make some clarifications. First off, the members of Homedale Ambulance have the highest respect for other agencies and our fellow EMT's. We strive to provide professional, quality care to the patrons of our community; we especially respect the privacy and confidentiality of every individual that we have contact with.

Patient confidentiality is of extreme importance to all members of Homedale Ambulance. When emergency personnel are informed of the presence of an infectious disease in a patient, that information is supposed to be kept strictly confidential. The information regarding the exposure of an EMT to blood at the accident scene, the fact that the accident victim tested positive for an infectious disease, and any test results of any parties involved were not provided to the newspaper by any member of Homedale Ambulance. All medical information obtained from patients is kept confidential, and all medical records/documentation containing personal information are kept in a locked cabinet and not released without the patient's written consent, and is only released to those entities that the patient approves of.

The fact reported about the six known cases of Hepatitis C was only meant to be used for factual information regarding the presence of infectious diseases in this area. However, that existence is not unique to Homedale; infectious diseases are widespread. This information was not meant to cause alarm to the general public; the risk of contraction is very low to the general public who are not engaging in high-risk activities (i.e. IV drug use, needle sharing, etc.). The risk of contraction by healthcare workers who use personal protective equipment (latex gloves, etc.) remains low. The EMT that arrived on scene at the accident without gloves was not affiliated with Homedale. Although we do not condone providing patient care without personal protection, we were not aware that this information was going to be disclosed in the article. Our intent in agreeing to an interview regarding infectious diseases was not to criticize another EMT or agency, but rather to provide factual information about infectious diseases.

Also, Owyhee County Sheriff's Office has offered to cover immunizations for those EMT's who have not been immunized against Hepatitis; it is unknown what the arrangements were for the cost of exposure testing.

To clarify, Homedale EMT's are affiliated under the Homedale Rural Fire Protection District, specifically Homedale Ambulance, and not the City of Homedale.

We want to assure the general public that the members of the Homedale Ambulance will continue to provide quality, professional care to all members of the community of Homedale. We work hard to maintain our professionalism, training, skills and continuing education. Our apologies go out to anyone offended by the article.

Sincerely Lisa Price Association Administrator Homedale Ambulance

Accuracy in media

Promoting all the history that is fit - to support media biases

by Notra Trulock

One way to detect liberal bias in the media is to monitor coverage of new scholarship on early American history or the founding fathers. When new historical findings are supportive of the media's liberal agenda, the New York Times or New York Review of Books will promote these prominently in an effort to influence the public debate. If the subject relates to an issue hotly debated in the political arena, the author is assured of publicity in the nation's most influential publications.

On the subject of gun control, for example, both the Times and the New York Review of Books promoted Emory University associate professor Michael Bellesiles' Arming America: The Origins of a National Gun Culture. The Times was covering Bellesiles' book months before it was published, citing gun control advocates as saying that the book "may change the terms of the debate." Bellesiles' research challenged the widely held belief that gun ownership had been commonplace in early America; in fact, he claimed that records of the era show that no more than ten percent of the total population owned guns at any time before 1850. Bellesiles said that gun ownership did not become popular with Americans until the Civil War.

His findings were used to undercut interpretations of the Second Amendment that rely on early America's gun ownership as proof that the founding fathers meant the amendment to apply to an individual's, and not just a state militia's, right to bear arms. The Times assigned Garry Wills to review of the book; he lavished praise on it and the Times put his review on the front page of its Sunday book review section. Wills wrote that Bellesiles had "dispersed the darkness" and dispelled our deepest "superstition" about the role of guns in American history. Bellesiles won the Bancroft prize-the most prestigious in American history scholarship. His book was on its way to influencing court cases on the meaning of the Second Amendment, particularly a bitterly contested federal appeals case in Texas.

The book could not withstand the scrutiny of other academics when they checked his scholarship and research. His footnotes could not be verified. He misused historical records, and some records he cited had been destroyed. The Times finally got around to reporting that Bellesiles was under fire about a year late and then in an article buried in its Saturday edition. The Times focused mostly on the hate mail and harassment Bellesiles received and implied that the campaign had been started by the National Rifle Association. It did air criticisms of the book by other scholars, but Bellesiles told the Times that his research materials had been destroyed in a flood and that, anyway, the portions of his book under fire weren't really central to his overall thesis. Despite lots of academic posturing, Bellesiles still has his Bancroft prize and he is still a member in good standing of Emory's history faculty. Obviously, Bellesiles picked the right topic on which to fudge the facts.

Now comes another new book that examines America's historical experience about another hot button issue in contemporary politics. Professor Philip Hamburger, a legal scholar at the University of Chicago, published his book, Separation of Church and State, just days after the San Francisco-based Ninth Court of Appeals struck down schools' use of the Pledge of Allegiance because of the phrase "under God," and the Supreme Court found that school vouchers do not violate the separation doctrine. Hamburger's research overturns the long-held belief that Thomas Jefferson enshrined the doctrine in the Constitution; instead the doctrine grew out of nativist objections in the years before the Civil War to government support for Catholic schools in New York City. In fact, the doctrine of separation of church and state owes more to the Ku Klux Klan than to Jefferson or the American Civil Liberties Union, according to Hamburger. Late in the 19th Century, the Klan made anti-Catholicism part of its central nativist creed, which continued into the 1920s when the Klan was known in the mid-West more for its anti-Catholic and anti-Semitic positions than its hatred for African-Americans...

However unpalatable such findings might be to the Times' and other liberal opinion makers, to its credit the Times has discussed Prof. Hamburger's startling findings. Not on its front pages or prominently displayed in its Sunday book review section, however. The Times' only mention of the book, thus far, came in a Saturday piece in its Metropolitan section two days after the Fourth of July. Hamburger clearly picked the wrong topic.

The proposed ordinance will also set forth the parameters for siting Confined Animal Feeding Operations. The proposed ordinance will also call for amendment of some procedural provisions of Article II of the Owyhee County Code (the zoning ordinances now in existence), will provide for hearing examiner to

The zoning districts and compatible uses within those districts may well change the land uses available in the area in which you live and/or own land. Such change may restrict future land uses which you want to engage in with your property. The proposed ordinance cannot change the current use of your property, and it spells out the nature of the "nonconforming use" status to which you are entitled by reason of prior and current use.
