County struggles with abuse incidents

Although sexual abuse and physical abuse against both minors and adults is a widespread problem, for Owyhee County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Dick Freund one case is too many. So far this year, 56 incidents involving children have been reported to the county sheriff's office and Freund has handled nearly every one of them.

Freund said although most of the cases reported are determined to be unfounded, some are not, and that is where the work begins.

Currently 21 convicted sexual offenders live in the county. Thirteen of them have a Homedale address, four have Marsing addresses and two are listed as having Grand View addresses. Three are listed as living in the county.

Freund said most of the cases of sexual abuse with a minor are so hard to convict that when a conviction comes, a great deal of work is behind it.

Commissioners adjust budget before signing

A few adjustments were made to the proposed Owyhee County budget after the publication and the hearing last week, according to clerk Charlotte Sherburn.

The sheriff's budget was increased $10,704, and the jail budget by $889. These adjustments were in vehicle maintenance, overtime salaries, and regular salaries.

The Capital Projects fund was reduced by $96,897 to bring the revenue side of the budget into compliance of the allowable three percent annual increase in the amount raised by taxes.

The budget can be adjusted within itself so long as the total expenses are not increased, Sherburn said.

The board of commissioners was to meet Monday to set tax levies, she added.

Early-day doctoring, Doc Kellogg remembered

A piece of history

George Kellogg holds a plate with a likeness of the Dewey Palace in Nampa. Kellogg is the son of a pioneer doctor to Owyhee County, Doc Kellogg.

As former Owyhee Historical Society president George Kellogg recalls, the early days of doctoring was not as fast paced as today's hustle and bustle life style. His father, Doc Kellogg left the memories of his early day doctoring in Silver City and Owyhee County to his son George who spoke with The Owyhee Avalanche from his home at Karcher Estates last week.

"He would travel to Owyhee County by horse and buggy," George recalled. "He was about the only doctor left who would make calls in Owyhee County. The rest of them wanted to stay in their offices."

Doc Kellogg never lived in the county, but George said he worked closely with the miners and doctored the early day pioneers who could not travel to larger towns to see a doctor. "He would travel as far as Jordan Valley to see patients," George said. "He graduated from the University of Colorado and worked in mines. He got a job as a company doctor for an outfit in Twin Falls and helped build the first dam on the Snake River. He went to the railroad depot in 1903 and told them he wanted a ticket west. As far west as the money he had in his pocket would take him. He made it to Nampa."

George said Doc had his first office in a home in Nampa and he worked with representative who later started the first hospital in Nampa.

"My dad had a revolutionary rifle that had been in the Kellogg family back to the revolutionary war," George said. "He left it to our son with a letter on its history. It had an octagon barrel on the inside and on the outside. The gun was several inches longer than it is now because a guy didn't shove a ball all the way down in it and it blew the end of it off."

"His old horse's name was 'Geezer,'" George said. "He was among the first of Owyhee County's

Bowen and Parker holds grand opening of new office complex

Associates of Bowen and Parker Accounting firm in Homedale moved to a much large office located at 19 East Wyoming and held an open house for the public on Friday. Pictured are Shelly Blodgett, Brad Dines, Suzanne Brockett, Mike Parker, Sherri Parrill, Gavin Parker, and Jim Duncan.

Ghost town comes to life Saturday and Sunday

The “Queen” of Idaho’s ghost towns will come to life this weekend during the annual Silver City open house. Two day event will take place throughout the town from noon until five on both days. This year a handmade wagon wheel brand rug will be raffled off on Sunday after the festivities, but tickets will be available during the event.

Ten buildings will be open to the public for tours. Tickets will be available for $10 for adults and $5 for children under 12. Ticket sales will be by donation from 12 p.m. until 4 p.m. both days.

The annual event is held to help raise funds for a full-time watchman to protect the existing buildings from vandalism and fire. The watchman is paid on a voluntarily basis by the homeowners of Silver City.

Grant Danner, a member of the Historic Silver City Foundation, said an anonymous donor donated a handmade wagon wheel rug, which is approximately 42 inches in diameter. He said it showcases eight local brands and is hand braided with 100 percent wool in the “old” hook and latch design. The tickets are being sold for $5 each or three for $10 and the proceeds will go to assist in the renovation of the Silver City Schoolhouse. The rug will be on display at the hotel in Silver City.

The schoolhouse is one of Idaho’s most historic public buildings and is one of the few 19th century public buildings still standing in Idaho. It is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and time has taken its toll on the 111 year-old structure. Portions of the framework have rotted away and the building “twists.” Windows have been broken and the brick chimney has deteriorated. Danner, a member of the board of Directors representing the Silver City property owners, said the foundation plans to restore the building as close to its original condition, with the help of modern materials, as they can.

Tickets may be purchased from Danner and donations may be sent to Grant Danner at 6812 Center Lane, Nampa, Idaho 83687. He can be reached in the evenings by calling 467-3073.

Two roads are open for public travel to the tiny historic town. The Murphy/Silver City road off of Highway 48 is 23 miles of good gravel road. The Jordan Valley road is on Highway 95 and is a well-maintained road to DeLamar. Then it is eight miles of single lane dirt.

Silver City was the county seat of Owyhee County and was one of the first towns in Idaho to have electricity. Silver City’s newspaper, The Owyhee Avalanche, was the first to have telegraph service, and the first daily in the state. The town survived several “boom” and “bust” years but lost the bulk of its population during World War II. During the war many of the buildings were torn down for the materials. By then the county seat had been moved to Murphy.

All the buildings in Silver City are privately owned, many by the descendants of the original families. Silver City is not an abandoned town and function coordinators ask the public to respect private property by not trespassing.

The town has limited food service, snacks and drinks at the Idaho Hotel and coordinators said prior reservations are wise. Pat Nettleton’s Pat’s What Not Shop will be open and has many gifts and souvenirs. Public restrooms are available.

Irrigation update

Water will continue to flow in the South Canal, at least for a few more days, South Board of Control Manager Rex Barrie said last week.

On Monday, the reservoir had 16,210-acre feet in storage. He said a normal season is expected on the Snake River pumping stations, but right now he said the district is watching the water supply on the Owyhee Reservoir on a day by day basis.

New pop machines and vending machines line the walls of the new dining area at the Marsing High School. The expansion at the high school was finished shortly before school began last month and includes the dining area and five new classrooms.

Computers line the wall of a classroom at Marsing High School, which was recently completed as part of a $1.5 million construction project in the school district. The district passed a levy last year to add a new 13,000 sq. ft. kitchen and cafeteria, five new classrooms at the high school. Construction on the kitchen is expected to be completed in November or early December.

New principal opens school to parents

Marsing’s new principal is opening the doors to the elementary school to parents in an open house Thursday evening.

Parents are invited to attend the evening’s festivities beginning at 6:30 p.m. Principal Brett Clevenger said he would like parents to come to “there” school, meet the teachers and himself who will be available to answer any questions parents may have.

Clevenger is from Payette and worked as a teacher at the McCain Middle School. Several new teachers have joined the staff in Marsing including Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Osgood, Mrs. Buckley and a new VISTA volunteer coordinator Arisbe Jimenez.

The school’s new kitchen and cafeteria facility construction project is under way and ahead of schedule.

The middle school will hold an open house for its students and families on Sept. 15 from 6:15 p.m. until 8 p.m.

√ Abuse...

“These kids are scared; children are difficult witnesses,” Freund said. “These abusers threaten them. They scare them. They make them think the act is somehow their fault. Parents are the key to teaching their children how to report a case of abuse and how to attempt to keep abuse from happening to them.”

So far this year, the county prosecutor Ed Yarbrough said two sexual abuse cases have resulted in convictions and two are pending. In 2001-2002, the county prosecutor had one case filed with an outstanding warrant. From 1998-2001, 12 suspects of sexual abuse were convicted.

“There is not way to get control of these kind of cases,” Freund said. “It isn’t like vandalism or burglary. You can’t go out and do saturation control. It is in education with the young kids.”

Freund said teachers can only teach so much about sexual abuse. He said they teach some prevention in the DARE program and they work with the local health teachers. But he said the key is in the home and most times that is where the abuse happens.

“The process includes filing a petition to terminate parental rights,” Freund said. “If there are extenuating circumstances you file for a termination of parental rights and they have 30 days to terminate those rights. If the judge decides the circumstances warrant, a termination order will be give and the kids will be put up for adoption.”

Freund said the best protection children have from sexual abuse is an open line of communication with their parents. He said people who abuse children threaten them with harm to them or with harm to family members or pets. They convince the children that the abuse is their fault and tell the victims that their parents won’t believe them if they tell. He said children need to know that they can talk to their parents or to a school counselor or to someone they trust.

“It isn’t only a problem here. It is everywhere,” Freund said. “The more we talk to our children about it, the more it gets reported. The more it is reported the more we can do something to help our kids through it. We have had 56 incidents so far this year involving kids. We have investigated about seven of those.”

The law requires that a convicted sex offender register with the sheriff’s office of the county in which they live. Freund said a list of those offenders may be obtained through the state. Currently he said that there are not any violent sex offenders registered in Owyhee County.

doctors. He had a phone that he would take and hook up to the phone lines when he traveled so he could talk to his office. I guess he invented one of the first cell phones,” George laughed.

George said his father had an office in The Dewey Palace in Nampa for many years, but he spent little time in it.

“Col. Dewey went to Boise to build his palace, but they turned him down,” George stated. “He told them that they would regret it and everyone came from Boise to stay in the palace because it was so nice. There was a bowling alley in the basement and a dance hall.”

George said his father passed away in 1962, but left behind many memories of his days connected with Owyhee County.

Idaho Water Users Ass’n. updates lawsuit plan

Idaho’s largest water user group is being deluged with calls from worried irrigators, legislators and industry representatives following public revelation that new demands for Idaho water by environmental groups is threatening the state’s water supplies next year, the Idaho Water Users Association said last week.

Environmentalists have notified Federal officials that they will file lawsuits against various agencies within 60 days claiming they are violating the Endangered Species Act as they say it applies to salmon recovery efforts unless certain demands are met. These demands include threats to force the Bureau of Reclamation to shut down its water deliveries from Idaho reservoirs to irrigators in 2004 and send the water downstream for flow augmentation.

“With the state already locked in three years of drought and limited water supplies, the news of this environmentalists eco-extortion threat has hit Idaho water users like a bombshell,” said Norm Semanko, IWUA Executive Director and President of the Idaho Water Coalition. “Following the Labor Day weekend, we have had nonstop phone calls and emails. Just about everyone we have heard from is worried about a potential Idaho ‘Klamath’ crisis.”

In 2001, environmentalist demands for irrigation water for fish resulted in the Federal government stopping water delivery to nearly 200,000 acres of farmland in the Klamath River Basin of Oregon. The result devastated the farm and local economies resulting in hundreds of millions of dollars in losses to the economic base of the area.

Water economic impact studies already done by Federal authorities estimate that a Klamath style shut off in Idaho could dry up well over a million acres of farm land.

“An Idaho Klamath would result in a virtual tidal wave of fiscal devastation with an economic impact running into the billions of dollars,” Semanko added.

“If this eco-extortion strategy is successful, Idaho will have Klamath times ten on our hands,” said Norm Semanko, of the Idaho Water Users Association and president of the Coalition.

Another demand is that NOAA Fisheries and the Bureau of Reclamation abandon the biological opinion that currently outlines reservoir operations and begin a public review of all BoR storage reservoirs in the Upper Snake River Basin.

“With Idaho now facing what may be its lowest ever reservoir carryover total and no end to the drought in site, we are being asked over and over why Idaho Rivers United and the Idaho Conservation League have decided to declare war on the citizens of Idaho,” Semanko added.

Coalition officials point to scientific data that has conclusively established that flow augmentation does not provide a meaningful benefit in salmon recovery efforts. The Coalition notes that flow augmentation is a failed experiment that has been wholly discredited in the scientific community in recent years.

Besides Idaho’s $5 billion agricultural sector, losing reservoir storage water would severely impact critical municipal supplies, recreational and tourist activities on rivers and reservoirs, existing fisheries and wildlife habitat, groundwater and spring flow levels, and even water quality, Coalition officials point out. Coalition members include nearly 20 diverse groups, all of which has a critical interest in the well being of Idaho water. These include such various groups as The Idaho Dairymen’s Association, the J.R. Simplot Company, the Committee of Nine, the Idaho Water Users Association, the Idaho Food Processors Association, the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation, the Idaho Aquaculture Association, the Potato Growers of Idaho and the Idaho Cattle Association.

OHRC receives excellence award

Owyhee Health and Rehabilitation Center of Homedale received the coveted Jean Schoonover Excellence in Caring Award from the State of Idaho’s Bureau of Facility Standards on July 21.

The honor came during the Idaho Health Care Association’s Opening Ceremony of their annual conference held at the Boise Convention Center on the Grove. This is the seventh consecutive year that the 49 bed Medicare and Medicaid certified skilled nursing facility has received this award.

Owyhee Health and Rehabilitation Center administrator, James Roberts praised Director of Nursing, Georgia Nelson saying that, “the facility ranks in the top five of 80 skilled nursing facilities throughout the State of Idaho.

“I can tell you that Georgia is one of the key reasons the facility has such an outstanding reputation with the State of Idaho. She has wonderful compassion for the residents and staff combined with superb nursing management skills.”

Roberts, who recently joined the team of OHRC also expressed profound admiration for all facility staff who work so hard year after year to provide quality health care services to Idaho’s aging community. “It takes everyone working together to get to this kind of recognition. I am so pleased for our staff.”

Finding a Really Cheap Car.

Tell everyone that you are looking for a car, especially teenagers or those in the 18-25 year range! You would not believe what these kids get rid of! That's the way I got my daughter's latest car. A friend of a friend needed some quick cash to bail her boyfriend out of jail. She wanted to sell her car, which was a '96 Sebring LXi with 135K miles. It was loaded with A/C, power everything, rebuilt transmission, nearly new tires, etc. She wanted $1200 cash, which I had. My daughter now has a dependable car that she's paying me back for at $100/month. And before the week was out, I had offers of two more cars that other kids were needing to sell quick! So, pass the word around! Debbie Salsa Stretcher. I recently read that bottled salsa has now become the most popular condiment, beating out ketchup as the family favorite. At typically twice the price of ketchup, this can be an expensive upgrade. Next time you open a new jar, replace that initial amount by filling the bottle back up with a small eight-ounce can of tomato sauce. Your family will hardly notice the difference, the salsa usually is still "chunky" enough, and the tomato sauce is often on sale for around 20 cents a can. This also works to tone down the heat if the salsa you try turns out to be hotter or spicier than you wish. Carol S.

Learner's Permit. Here's a money-saving tip for car owners. Eventually, every car needs some kind of a repair. When I knew my brakes needed repair, I got an estimate of nearly $400 to repair my brakes. I am a college student, and as a result, I couldn't afford that. I was looking through my college handbook and saw that the automotive department fixes cars for only the cost of parts. The job is quality because the instructor is teaching students how to do the job right without cutting corners. Because they aren't getting paid, I didn't worry about them misleading me about what all needed to be done. However, there are limitations. The classes may not have your needed repair in the curriculum right away, and due to class schedule, it may take longer than it would if a mechanic did the job. I have been happy with my brake job that was done nearly a year ago, and I plan to have them do my transmission. Kevin L.

Cool It! Use caution when refrigerating or freezing cooked food. After cooking the food, if you put it in a baggie, the baggie should be left open until the food cools completely to allow excess moisture and heat to escape. Once cooled, seal the bag or package and remove as much air as possible. Also, leave adequate space between packages to ensure that hot foods cool down to 40 degrees Fahrenheit or lower within four hours. Leaving the bag sealed when the food is hot keeps heat in. Stacking hot foods together also traps heat and doesn't allow for proper cooling. Foods that do not cool properly risk being at an unsafe temperature (the danger zone is between 40 and 140 Fahrenheit). In this temperature danger zone, bacteria likes to breed and multiply. Just a few food safety tips!

Any child who qualifies for free or reduced school lunches also qualifies for this program. Check for a similar program in your state! Learning to Conserve. I have four kids. Each child has his/her very own Rubbermaid tote. Every time I go to the grocery store, I buy them cereal, snacks, lunch items (canned fruits and pudding, etc.), and occasionally drinks. All their favorites go in their very own totes. If they so choose, they are allowed to eat it all before my next grocery trip. However, if their tote is empty before that time, their tote stays empty. No, they're not lacking in food, only their "special treats."

This cuts down on fights over who gets what and also teaches them to be conservative. They learn that there is a plus side to being conservative. Even though their tote is still full on my next shopping trip, they still get more to put in it since I always get them something

Avoiding Restaurant Temptation. Our idea of a meal is a huge plate covered with food. One way I cope? I rarely go out to eat, but when I do, I almost always ask for a take-home container to be brought with my meal. I put half my food in it before I start to eat. (If anyone looks askance, I simply say that I'm saving on calories.) I take the food home, transfer it to a plastic container with a tight lid, and then freeze it. That way I get half the calories, two meals for the price of one, and a delicious meal that I don't have to cook. Win-win-win! CAS

Authorized to Pay Down Debt. I wanted to share my tip on reducing credit card debt for people who may have little self-control as I do. This is for people who are not late on their payments, yet want to get out of debt as soon as possible.

Call each credit card company and ask for an "authorization hold" on your account. You will be able to keep the account open, but your card will be closed until you call back to have them re-activate it. I've done this for all but one of my credit cards.

By doing this, I will actually be paying down these cards, instead of making payments and using them again. Also, this will preserve my credit rating because I won't be closing the accounts, just putting them on hold until the debt load is substantially lower.

On the edge of common sense

Mad cow madness

The human tragedy associated with the Mad Cow Disease (BSE) discovery in Canada, hangs over our fellow Canadian cattlemen like a ticking time bomb. Rumors run rampant, each one an electric shock to an already frazzled bundle of nervous cowmen. All in response to draconian eradication program erected to quell the public’s paranoia.

What is the real risk of a human being in Canada or the U.S. contracting Jacob Crutzfield Disease from eating the brains or spinal cord of a BSE infected cow? Less than being hit by a Ferrari? Less than being injured in a terrorist attack? Less than falling out of a bi-plane, getting struck by lightning, dying of a flu shot, swallowing a poison mushroom, less than being struck by a meteorite? Unlike England which has ‘inbred’ the disease and created a minor epidemic and a major reaction, Canada and the U.S. have no such potential.

If we as a nation have faith in the extensive testing and instigation of preventative practices already in place, we have very little real risk. Yet, because of our overreaction we are threatening to devastate the Canadian agricultural community.

Earl, a respected, compassionate cattleman with insight, suggested to me that the U.S. in its complicity to exaggerate the implied risk of importing Canadian cattle, is setting a dangerous precedent. He thinks we would be wise to open the borders immediately and say to Japan and our consumers, that we have done our absolute best to assure that any possible danger related to the one case of BSE diagnosed in Alberta, poses no risk to anyone.

ÖThat we will remain vigilant and if you can think of any place else on earth that has a safer, more wholesome food supply, feel free to buy from them.

ÖThat if this “Mad Cow scare” causes you to quit eating the brains and spinal cord of beef animals, then do what you must. Even knowing that the transmission of BSE from cow to man is still an unproven theory and knowing that if the theory is correct, it still cannot be contracted by eating red meat or hamburger.

Earl believes that the consuming public will soon adjust to the presence of Mad Cow Disease, as they have adjusted to the possibilities of catastrophic meteor strikes, continent splitting earthquakes, and peanut allergies. That if we as a country put this disease in its proper perspective, then the common sense consumer will fit it into all the other ‘warnings and precautions’ that come from living in a modern world.

So when the first headline, “Mad Cow Diagnosed in American Cow!” screams across the front page, the average citizen will think, ‘I knew it was coming, so what’s the big deal. We’ve been eating Canadian beef for quite a while.’

Earl’s got a good point. Maybe we ought to give the housewife a little more credit for having a brain and take the Canadians off the hook.

Cornell to resurrect Not important column

Wayne Cornell

About four years ago (or was it five?), I voluntarily put Not important Öbut possibly of interest to bed for what was supposed to be the last time. The column had appeared, in one form or another, for nearly two decades in three different newspapers.

My reason for retiring the column was simple: I felt I had run out of material. Our Three Darling Daughters had become adults and were finding their own ways in the world. And there was only so much that I could write about the family dog, Annie the World Famous Beagle. I didn’t want to wind up like the old prizefighter or football quarterback who doesn’t know when to quit and winds up a public joke.

But things change. During the past four years the lives of yours truly and my partner in life have found a new track. Annie the Beagle is still with us, although her brown, black and white spotted coat is now mostly white and two knee surgeries have slowed her down a bit. All of the Darling Daughters graduated from college and got married. And Daughter Number Two recently presented us with our first grandchild - a little blue-eyed princess in a family dominated by brown-eyed women. In addition, my current job, and modern technology, have put me in contact with a lot of new people. In other words, my life has become a lot more interesting. And half the fun of an interesting life is telling somebody about it.

Recently, I gave Avalanche Publisher and fellow Kuna High School graduate Joe Aman a call. I hinted I might publicly reveal some of the stuff about his early years unless he agreed to put

Not important back in print. Joe immediately decided the idea had merit. But I made him promise to let me know if folks start calling him to say I’m stinking up the place. Or who knows? I may decide I don’t have nearly as much to write about as I thought. I do plan to continue to “dance with the gal I brung” as far as topics are concerned, but we’ll be exploring some new areas, too. In any case, we’re going to give it a shot, starting next week.

I’m looking forward to getting back in action.
See you next week.
Wayne Cornell

Farm Bureau Big game feeding regulations present dilemma

By John Thompson, Director of Information

Wildlife management and controversy seem to belong together in this state. Like pancakes and maple syrup, wherever one lands, the other soon follows.

One of the biggest wildlife challenges Idaho faces is managing brucellosis in the Yellowstone region. Brucellosis is a disease that causes ungulates to abort. The ungulates in this case are cows, elk and buffalo. The only remaining reservoir for the disease in the U.S. exists in the Yellowstone region in elk and buffalo. When carriers of the disease mix with cattle, typically on winter feed grounds, the disease can be transmitted to cattle. Transmission occurred last winter in Fremont County and an entire herd of cattle had to be destroyed. If transmission were to occur a second time, Idaho could lose its brucellosis-free status and all cattle leaving the state would have to be blood tested. Even cattle raised hundreds of miles from Yellowstone would have to be tested and the stigma that comes with the disease would hurt all Idaho livestock producers. Beef production is a billion-dollar-per-year industry Idaho can’t afford to lose.

To further complicate this equation, we have to accept that managing brucellosis with available technology, is an inexact science. We have a vaccine for cattle but nothing that fights the disease in elk or buffalo. Although most Yellowstone buffalo move into Montana in the winter, both species are unpredictable and during hard winters they frequent ranches where cattle are being fed.

New regulations being considered by the state would require landowners to report the presence of elk or buffalo and allow access to private land so the state can herd the animals back to public land. Substantial private property damage is likely if this new regulation is adopted and chasing elk around with snowmobiles and helicopters could be more unpleasant for landowners than for elk. But another occurrence of brucellosis isn’t an acceptable tradeoff.

Yet another problem is the fact that people like to hunt elk and hunters mean revenue to Idaho’s economy.

This may be a problem that never gets completely solved. But there are some things we can do better. We can do a better job of tracking conditions and determining when a feeding emergency exists. And when an emergency arises elk should be lured away from ranches with food. More resources should be put toward finding a vaccine that will cure the disease in wild animals. And the Fish and Game Department needs to do a better job of managing the money collected from sportsmen specifically for winter-feeding programs. That money does not belong in the F&G Department’s general fund.

The interested parties need to work together to find reasonable elk management solutions. If we fail in that we leave wildlife managers with only two options — slaughter or starvation.

Trustees schedule patron poll

Marsing. Patrons of the Homedale and Marsing school districts will be polled next week to determine whether they favor further study of a plan to consolidate the two districts.

That was the decision reached at the Tuesday evening joint meeting of the Homedale and Marsing trustees, conducted at Marsing high school.

The poll will take the form of a ballot published in both the Homedale and Marsing newspapers. Patrons will be asked for a yes or no answer to the question: "Do you favor the Homedale and Marsing School Districts exploring the possibility of consolidation, for the purpose of better serving the students of both districts?"

The ballot will appear in next week's editions of the two Owyhee County newspapers. Persons wishing to give their opinion should fill out the ballot and return it to the offices of either school district. The ballots can be mailed, delivered in person or returned by students.

Bill Gibbon, a member of the Marsing Board, said he felt the poll was a necessary step before any further discussion.

"Both boards could say yes to a plan and if the patrons don't agree, we're wasting our time," Gibbon observed.

Marsing representatives said they had initiated consolidation talks with Homedale because of the rapidly increasing school population at the elementary level. Marsing School Superintendent Loren Schmitt said when the students now at the elementary level reach high school, "our situation will be impossible."

Homedale gives nod to budget

Homedale. The Homedale City Council Tuesday approved a budget for the upcoming fiscal year totaling $1,372,135.93

The approved budget includes $200,620.12 in general fund expenses, and other fund expenses of $1,171,515.81.

The major item under "other funds" is $974,200 of bond fund expenses, anticipated for the bond levy expenses approved by voters last month.

The Homedale Police Department received the largest chunk of general fund money with a total for operation and salaries of $77,178.53.

Cowmen support range land bill

Silver City. Members of The Owyhee County Cattlemen's Association endorsed the Public Range Land Improvement Bill now pending in the United States Senate, during the association's annual meeting in Silver City.

In a resolution to the Senate, the Cattlemen urged passage of Public Range and Improvement Bill No. 52475. The bill has already been approved by the House of Representatives.

In the resolution, the Owyhee Cattlemen stated that the bill would be beneficial to the cattle industry because it provided for funding for the range improvements; wild horse ownership after one year of possession, and the establishment of a grazing fee formula using a "cost of production" formula.

Marsing Oks budget

Marsing. The Marsing City Council Tuesday evening approved the 1979 city budget approved the 1979 city budget of $163,999.50. No one appeared at the hearing to contest the proposed budget. According to City Clerk Wendy Coons, the 1979 budget is approximately $8,000 from the 1978 figure of $156,000. Coons said no funds were added for additional services, the increase being necessary to keep up with rising costs. The budget total includes federal revenue sharing monies. The figure also includes $18,000 for contracting with Owyhee County for police protection.

180 students registered in high school

The Homedale high school had enrolled 180 students up to Wednesday of this week.

All classes are filled with the exception of a few required classes and senior subjects.

A full day's work greeted the students Tuesday. A few class adjustments have had to be made because of the size of the classes.

Some prospective students are still working. It is important that they register at an early date.

Teachers and students are delighted with the newly painted rooms and clean surroundings.

Student officers for classes are being elected and the first student body meeting will be held Friday.

REV. FATHER MESPLIE requests us to say that out of $1,500 subscribed in this place for building a Catholic Church only $1,000 have been collected. Some who subscribed have left the country, others seem unwilling to pay. The church will be finished in ten days at which time about $1,000 will be due mechanics and other laborers employed. A committee will go the rounds during the coming week and it is hoped that members of that church and others who feel disposed will donate according to their means and thus relieve the church of financial embarrassments.

McHAHON AND CO., at their foundry, continue to turn out excellent castings of all kinds that are needed here, such as shoes, dies and other mill castings, car wheels and stoves, what do you think of that? Yes, stoves. Just call at the foundry and take a look at some of these most excellent home-made stove castings. That's pretty good for Owyhee and her resources. McMahon and Co. will furnish castings for less than cost and freight to this place. Patronize home manufacture.

THE FIRST SNOW of the season fell on War Eagle and on the summit between here and Flint last Saturday evening but it melted away under the rays of the next morning's sun. The days are pleasant the smoky atmosphere reminding us of Indian Summer, butthe nights are getting cool enough to make a good fire desirable and warm us of approaching winter.

THE RICHEST YET. Day before yesterday Cope and Co. struck fabulously rich gold bearing quartz in the Potosi, a few rds back of our office. The lode was found cropping out on the surface three or four hundred feet south of the tunnel. Large crowds flocked to see the new discovery and to compliment the lucky owners. All who have seen it unhesitatingly declare that it is the richest deposit of gold ore ever found in the or any other mining camp. We saw a piece weighing about fifty pounds, which, after being broken into fragments, was held together by threads of solid gold that penetrate the mass in every direction.

ANOTHER STRIKE. On Thursday last another quartz lode was discovered on the mountain, west of the Baxter and between the Silver Cord and Savage. Our fellow townsman, Dave Meek, is the lucky finder. It is called the Appuremack, and prospects in rich in gold and silver.

REMOVED. Thos. Ewing and Co. will finish moving into their new fire-proof store today. It is undoubtedly the most complete, best supplied, finest and largest mercantile house in the Territory. We will give a notice next week.

PRETTY GOOD. Happening in at W. F. and Co's Express Office last Saturday we notice treasure to the amount of $60,000, which Thos. Cole, Jr. and Co., bankers would ship for San Francisco that evening. That is what we call "petering out" handsomely.

APPOINTMENT. Our estimable friend, C. M. Hays, has received the appointment of Deputy U. S. Revenue Collective for Owyhee County, in place of A. V. Bradley, resigned.

CAPT. HARRIS, of Camp Lyon, was in town this week on his way to Fort Boise to take part in a court martial to be held there.

A SHOOTING match for chickens will come off tomorrow in rear of Fitzbugh and Spackels' saloon.

SUDDEN DEATH. On Monday night last, a stage diver, named Sam Barr, died very suddenly at Buffalo Station on Humboldt road. It is conjectured that heart disease was the cause, as deceased was a robust young man and enjoyed excellent health to the time of his death.

From the bottom of our hearts we would like to thank the people of Homedale and Marsing for their help and support during our recent family crises. You gave so generously with your time, money, gifts, food, and most importantly your prayers, to help stabilize our lives and get us back on track. Your prayers are being answered. Our four grandsons are doing wonderfully well and our daughter, Shelley, is healing faster than anyone expected. Even her doctors say it is miraculous how fast she is healing and both Jan and I know it is the prayers that all of you wonderful people have been saying that have led her to a fast recovery. To all of our friends, neighbors and community members, there are no words that adequately express the gratitude we have for all that you have done. We love you and thank you. May God bless you all!
