The registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. and judging will begin at 9 a.m. sharp. All parade entrants that want to compete for ribbons and cash prizes must be in place by 9 a.m. Parade organizers said that entrants who arrive late would not be eligible for prizes.

Preliminary figures:

County budget down 26%; levies up 7.7%, taxes 24.7%

by Joe Aman

It's not finalized yet, but based on the preliminary figures of the proposed Owyhee County budget obtained from the clerk's office, taxpayers can expect a 7.67 percent increase in county property tax levies for next year, resulting in a boost in tax dollars raised amounting to 24.7 percent county-wide. However, the overall county budget will actually decrease 25.7 percent, a drop of $1,380,852. Commissioner Chris Salove said the proposed figures now on the table will be the final budget. "We may adjust a few numbers, but, basically, it's what will be levied" he said.

State law limits the raising of county tax revenues more than three percent over the highest of any one of the previous three years, plus new construction values assessed at last year's levy. The amount raised by taxes last year (the highest of the last three years) was $1,343,601. A three percent increase amounts to $40,308; new construction amount would add $24,138. Another item to be added is what's called "property tax replacement — a figure representing what could have been levied last year, but wasn't. The county can add this figure into this year's levy. The total is $1,534,283, but the commissioners plan to raise $1,675,592—that's $141,669 more than state law allows.

According to Owyhee County Clerk

Charlotte Sherburn, the lower budget and higher taxes are the result of a depleted cash balance. At the beginning of this fiscal period, the county showed nearly $3.1 million with which to begin the year. Next year begins with only $1.06 million carried forward, for a reduction of $2 million-plus.

Sherburn said last week that the depletion of the cash balance forward was, among other items, the result of expenses related to the Owyhee Initiative, which cost about

Rodeo man named parade grand marshal

Don Basey may live in Canyon County, but just ask him where his heart is, and he will tell you he is Owyhee County through and through.

Basey was chosen as this year's Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo grand marshal. But he will tell you that he has no idea why he was chosen as grand marshal, he has only been a member of the rodeo board for nearly 45 years.

"Really my roots go way deep in Owyhee County," Basey said. "My parents and two uncles came to Grand View in about 1915. Then my dad migrated into Canyon County and my two uncles stayed in Owyhee County. I have never lived more than a mile from the Snake River. Homedale and Marsing is my hometown. Owyhee County is in my blood. It is in my heart."

Basey said he was taken into the rodeo circuit by Johnny Wright, a family friend. He said Wright wanted to get a rodeo started in Homedale again and he enlisted the help of then 16-year-old Basey.

"He was trying to get some guys together and some financing to do this," Basey recalled. "They finally begged, borrowed, and accumulated enough to get it started. Johnny even took a note to get a rodeo started in Homedale. I helped until about 1958 or 1959 when they got ashamed of themselves and put me on the rodeo board. They figured they had schooled me long enough and they put me on."

But Basey said he is not one of the original members, but he has been on the board the longest. Basey laughed that anyone else who was on the board longer has cars just north of the shop followed by equestrian entries that will stage at the football field and swimming pool. Kelly Burns and Kelly Aberasturi will assist.

The third annual Owyhee County Drill competition will also be part of this year's parade. The co-host is the Owyhee Silver Express Drill Team. This year's event has eight teams entered.

Following the parade the drill teams will travel to the fair and rodeo grounds to continue its competition and coordinators said parade goers are invited to watch the graceful style of a drill team competition.

Parade coordinator Mary Tibbett said that nearly 100 horses are expected at the parade including many area drill team competitors. The drill team competition will begin during the parade where the teams will be judged during the parade. The drill team competition will continue at the rodeo grounds at noon.

Cash awards will be given to entries in the sweepstakes theme float, community floats, cars and youth. In the horse division, awards will be presented to 4-H and youth clubs, family and drill riding clubs, theme wagons and buggies and sponsored wagons.

Other categories receiving a small cash award will be the commercial entries, and individual horse entries will receive a ribbon award.

Ribbons will be awarded for the best adult male, best adult female, best pairs which will include, mixed of all ages, 6-18 year-olds, 13-19 year olds, and 7-12 year olds, boys 6 and under, girls 6 and under, juvenile costume, adult costume, and theme costume.

The 4-H/FFA fat stock sale will begin at 12 noon at the Fair and Rodeo grounds.

Beta Sigma Phi sorority sisters will again be assisting with this year's parade as well as many additional volunteers Mary said she would like to thank everyone who helped with the parade. Sponsors for this year are the Owyhee County Fair board and the Owyhee County Rodeo board.

either retired or passed away.

"There are not very many older ones left," Basey explained. "Jim Duncan was our rodeo secretary for a long time, but he retired a long time ago. Connie Brandeau took over after Jim."

Basey began entering the rodeo roping calves when he was 16. He said his last year in high school, they would not let him participate because he had won money rodeoing.

"At that time if you had won money, they considered you a professional," Basey recalled. "I roped calves for years until I found that I had arthritis in my back and the doc said 'no more'."

Basey said he enjoys team roping now and his wife said she gets tough when Don wants to rope now because it is so hard on his back. She said keeping her husband off of a horse now is very difficult.

"I always wanted a roping arena," Basey said. "We didn't get one until after I quit roping. But it is good because now the grandkids use it."

Basey will be the lead of the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo Parade on Saturday.

Class of '54 to meet for 50-year reunion

The Homedale class of 1954 will hold its 50-year class reunion on Aug. 14. The class plans to ride in the county fair and rodeo parade on Saturday.

Class members are asked to meet at Riverside Park at 8:30 a.m. Saturday to ride in the parade. The class will then meet at the Homedale Senior Center at 4 p.m. for a banquet and at 7 p.m. all alumni are invited to an all class dance at the center.

4-H, FFA Livestock sale supports kids' futures

This year the annual market livestock sale will be held on Saturday beginning at noon in the covered arena at the fair grounds. Owyhee County Extension Livestock and Range coordinator Scott Jensen said last week that 164 animals would be up for sale.

"This year at the market livestock sale we expect to have about 30 lambs, 34 steers, and 100 pigs to sell," Jensen said. "The kids use the money from the sale usually to purchase their next year's project, but many times you hear kids talk about saving the funds for college and to further their education. Caba's will be there with a BBQ lunch for the buyers about 11:30 a.m."

The sale is the culmination of each 4-H and FFA kid's market livestock project. Buyers have the opportunity to contribute in three ways. They can purchase an animal and have it custom butchered and then take it home for their freezer. They can purchase an animal and then elect to resale it at the floor price for that animal. They then are responsible to pay the difference between their bid price and the floor price but they do not take any of the meat home. The final method is to "add on" money to an individual child or the entire group of kids. The buyer makes a contribution towards the designated recipient.

Jensen said if there is someone who cannot attend the sale but would like to purchase an animal, they could contact him or any member of the market livestock sale committee to bid for them. Jensen can be reached next week at 880-0482.

"There is a real need for anyone willing to purchase a resale pig at the floor price," Jensen said. "Floor price will be set at about 50 cents per lb. If interested, they need to call the fair office at 337-3888 or Scott at 880-0482. The market livestock sale committee will deliver the animal to the butcher. It will be cut and wrapped to your order and then you will pick up the freezer-ready product."

Sale is Saturday at noon

Late entry gives queen contest competition

A late entry into the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo for rodeo queen will give the event some competition with the entry of a 16-year-old Homedale teen.

Hailey Rose Hall, daughter of Ken and Echo Hall will compete with Tessa Bradford, 19 of Nampa. Hall turned in a late entry to Queen Coordinator Debbie Shearn last week.

Hall attends Homedale High School and is a member of the honor roll, volleyball, basketball, track and softball teams and District II rodeo team. She is a member and past president of the Dust Devils 4-H Club and the Homedale High School rodeo club. She said she likes spending time with her friends and family, boating, riding colts and swimming in her families pond. Hall will be riding Rain.

Bradford, daughter of Mike and Joanne Bradford of Nampa entered the contest and will compete for the crown from outgoing queen Sarah Boyer of Emmett.

Bradford is a graduate of Val-livue High School and attends the College of Southern Idaho. She is active in choir, volleyball, FFA and 4-H. She is a member of the Owyhee County Teen Council, Nampa Rod and Gun Club, North American Elk Foundation, Club Idaho Volleyball and the Boise River Volleyball club. She enjoys training dogs, shooting shotgun, hunting, fishing, playing volleyball, 4-H, camping and riding horses. She will be riding Cheyenne.

Boyer is 16 and the daughter of Hap and Peggy Boyer. She is a home-schooled junior and is a member of Friends of Rodeo, A.Q.H.Y.A., Gem State Stock Horse Association, 4-H horse team leader and U.S. Bucking Bulls Association. She enjoys training colts, judging livestock and hunting. She will be riding a tri-colored paint, Buck.

Boyer will also represent Owyhee County at the Miss Teen Rodeo Idaho competition in Gooding on August 18 through the 23. She has attended numerous parades and rodeos throughout the valley. Queen Shearn said Boyer has done a very good job representing the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo.

✓ Budget

$30,000. She said medical benefits, which cost around $235,000 a year, increased 15 percent ($35,250). The county spent $52,943 more in the Fair Buildings and Grounds budget this year than proposed for next year – more than double – further depleting cash reserves. Salove said that the depletion of the cash balance was the result of this year's budgeting ['04] to hold down the levy at that time. "But it came back to bite us."

Salove said the county's independent auditor recommended that the county was carrying more cash than it should, so it was used up. "Now," he explained, "we see we might have gone too far." Among proposed expenses to take a hit in next year's budget was the one percent annual cost of living salary increase to the 78 county employees, resulting in a cut of expenses of about $20,000. Sherburn and Salove both indicated the commissioners plan to continue the "step" pay increases for employees, however.

Departmental decreases include: Current expense $207,732; Airport $3,500; District Court/Probation $27,198; Fair bldg. and grounds $52,943; Solid waste $61,773; Capital project $1,007,186 (no amount was listed for next year).

Departmental increases include: Bond redemption $20,000;

Health District $674; Historical Society $945; Indigent and Charity $24,700; Junior College (not a levy) $2,000; Revaluation $2,857; Tort $11,000; 911 Dept. $9,300 (not a levy).

According to Clerk Sherburn the assessed valuation for figuring the '05 budget is $439,419,741. The assessed valuation for '03

(used to calculate '04 taxes) was $375,024,937. New construction value to calculate '05 taxes is $6,737,543.

The commissioners will be meeting as necessary until the budget is finalized. It is to be completed in time for publication in late August. The budget hearing will be held September 7.

GV School District to hold recall election of trustee

The Grand View School District will hold a recall election to unseat zone 3 board trustee Darrel Agenbrood on Aug. 24. The announcement of the election was submitted this week.

A petition to recall Agenbroad was turned in to the district's clerk's office last week and was approved with only seven signatures. District Clerk Catherine Sellman said an original petition was turned in last month with 25 signatures and a "perfection" recall petition was turned in on July 20. She said the petition only needed seven signatures, 20 percent of the total amount of voters that voted in the election when he was elected into office in 2002. She said only 67 votes were cast in 2002 as Agenbroad did not have an opponent and an election was held for Zone 5.

The petition states that Agenbroad has “violated trust.” “He has refused to listen to his patrons regarding their concerns around the schools,” the petition states. “He has isolated himself from the community and its collective wisdom so that he only gets information from the district administration. Mr. Agenbroad has rejected pleas from the citizens he represents to conduct open-minded and thorough investigations of district problems and issues. Mr. Agenbroad has also exerted unwarranted and unethical pressure on parents who signed a petition requesting trustees to address district concerns.”

Agenbroad submitted a response to the petition stating that the allegations were “absolutely not true.”

"I have evidence that this recall petition has been planned and carried out under the direction of the teacher's union to gain control of the district," Agenbroad stated in his response. "As the trustee of Zone 3, I have always made my decisions based on what is best for the education of the children in our district." Many times concerns must, by law, be addressed in executive sessions, which are not open to the public. I have never refused to return a phone call made to me by a patron with a concern. In the last two years since I have served on the board we have accomplished much that is noteworthy. The district has become financially stable and most importantly, student achievement has risen dramatically.

“I have tried to find out what the concerns of the patrons are by talking to those who signed the petition, mentioned in the recall, so I can address those concerns. At no time did I put pressure on any person to talk to me.

“A vote against the recall is also a vote against union control.”

Agenbroad also included an announcement about an informational meeting on the school district on Aug. 17 at 7 p.m. at the Grand View Elementary School.

Qualified voters in zone 3 will cast their vote at Grand View Elementary School or at the home of George Bennett Jr. in Elmore County from noon until 8 p.m. Aug. 24.

An elector must be a registered voter who has resided in this state and in this school district at least thirty days preceding the election.

Qualified electors who expect to be absent from the district or who will be unable, because of physical disability or blindness, to go to a polling place, may vote by absentee ballot. Written application for an absentee ballot may be made to the Clerk of the Board of Trustees on a form made available at the District Office, 660 Boise Ave., Grand View, Idaho on Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Such application must be made no later than 4 p.m. Monday, August 23. Electors applying by mail should submit their requests as soon as possible. The absentee ballot must be received by the Clerk no later than 8 p.m. on the day of election.

Charity run flops as BLM fees eat proceeds

A charity poker run held at Hemingway Butte by the South Western Idaho Desert Racing Association was not nearly as successful as co-ordinators hoped it would be as the Bureau of Land Management took most of the fundraiser for fees and insurance. The run was held as a fundraiser for the Bruneau-Grand View search and rescue.

Coordinator Bill Walsh said in a statement released last week that the run held on May 2 raised $1,100 but SIDRA was only able to give the group $330 because of BLM fees and insurance.

Before the fundraiser, Walsh requested the BLM waive its fees since the run was not considered to be a competitive race. BLM refused stating “new regulations” as the reason.

Walsh sent a letter to Lower Snake River District Manager Jenna Whitlock asking her for a response to why the BLM would not waive the fees since the event was held to help search and rescue, they “surely” qualified. Whitlock did not return our phone calls for comment.

“The event was held for search and rescue,” Walsh said. “To introduce the new trail system that was installed last winter as part of the 5.5 million dollars of the tax payer’s money the BLM plans to spend in the Owyhee area. I think that this type of event would be educational to the recreational users of public lands.”

Walsh said he felt the event also falls under the “requires no specific management and educational” section of reasons to waive the fee. He said the event was held on the newly installed ATV trail.

“I was really disappointed in the lack of help from their office,” Walsh said. “It was a great event to educate the public, only the number of people in attendance was too low.”

“I do not understand why BLM refuses to co-sponsor with SIDRA for the event. As a user group, we feel this could have been a great tool for the BLM to educate motorized users of public lands.

“The only way I can see doing this again is with co-sponsorship with BLM. It’s a sad ending to what was overall a successful event.”

Alzheimer’s support group to meet

The Snake River Alzheimer’s Support Group is changing the times it normally meets to the first Wednesday of every month from 2-4 p.m. and the third Thursday of every month from 7-9 p.m.

Every student in the Homedale School District in grades kindergarten through eight will receive a backpack and school supplies free. Costco employees will give the supplies to each student on the first day of school, but teachers may request a few additional supplies the first week.

Commentary

Accuracy in media

It’s not a “war on terror”

By Cliff Kincaid, Editor of the AIM Report

Describing itself as a “prominent national Islamic civil rights and advocacy group,” the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR) has issued a statement condemning bombings at five Christian churches in Iraq that left at least 11 people dead and 50 wounded. But these are mere words that carry no particular weight or authority in global Islam.

CAIR said that, “Religiously and historically, Islam mandated the protection of churches and synagogues. The Prophet Muhammad and his successors sought to protect houses of worship and the communities they serve.” If this is the case, however, then why do followers of Islam carry out the bombings?

If the answer is that “militant Islam” is responsible, that at least is a modest start toward identifying the real enemy. A former chief assistant U.S. attorney says in the current issue of The American Spectator that the media and policymakers have gotten it all wrong in saying the U.S. is waging a war on “terror.” Andrew C. McCarthy, who led the 1995 terrorism prosecution of Sheik Omar Abdel Rahman in connection with the first World Trade Center bombing, says, “You can’t win a war without identifying who the enemy is, and I think we’ve bent over backwards to avoid labeling all of Islam as the enemy. That is fair enough. But I think we’ve gone overboard in saying that our enemy is terrorism. Terrorism is a method, not a person or a faction or an enemy.”

In his article, “The Great War on Militant Islam,” he points out that Islam began in violence and that Muhammad himself was a violent warrior. McCarthy writes that, of all the global religions in the modern world today, “only Islam sports an unbridled faction that systematically inculcates hatred, systematically dehumanizes non-adherents, and systematically kills massively and indiscriminately.” He says Islam also has a rich tradition of education and a rich culture. But the violent faction of Islam has come to the fore and “the moderate elements have failed to condemn it in a persuasive way,” he argues.

The other problem in separating militant from moderate Islam lies in the nature of the religion. Islam, he argues, is a religion that goes far beyond providing a spiritual purpose to life. “It’s actually a self-complete social and political and in some ways economic system” that operates from the bottom up rather than the top down, he notes. That is, Islam has no hierarchy that condemns certain behavior or interpretations of the religion.

In the World Trade Center case he prosecuted, McCarthy said Sheik Rahman taught that the only legitimate Jihad was war using the sword, bomb, and the missile. “There was no authoritative body in Islam that is empowered to step in and say that’s wrong,” he pointed out.

Practically speaking, therefore, how does one define who belongs to “militant” rather than “moderate” Islam? If there is a Mosque down the street, how do we know if the Muslims who go there are a threat unless and until they start killing us and then it’s too late?

That is why, McCarthy says, that it is absolutely urgent to move beyond saying we are waging a war on “terror.” But McCarthy says that Islam has become a “sacred cow” in the national debate and that the religion and its adherents are not coming under the proper scrutiny. One elementary way to separate militants from moderates is by their behavior and by their willingness to take a stand against violence and terrorism. He says one question we should pose to followers of Islam is whether they believe in democratic government or rule by Islamic theocrats. Also, do they believe Jihad is a compulsion to do violence or can it be interpreted as an internal struggle to be a better person? This assumes, of course, that the answers will be truthful. How many Muslims would admit to being committed to violent Jihad against the “infidels?”

Abdurahman Alamoudi, president of the American Muslim Council, was considered a respected moderate. He has pleaded guilty to participating in an assassination plot and money laundering for terrorists. One of his former associates got an intelligence job with the Department of Homeland Security, the government agency now warning that terrorists in America may be preparing to strike.

Is it too late to begin the national debate over Islam that is so urgently required? The media can help provide an answer to that.

County establishes Ag coordination committee for bugs

Owyhee County Commissioners established a county wide agriculture coordination committee to control crickets in the future due to delays in communication regarding a plan and implementation of a plan. Commissioners have named Jerry Hoagland as chairman, Tony Richards, George Bennett and David Young as members.

The resolution was passed during a commissioners meeting on Aug 2 and states that the delays in communications may be avoided if there is a place a committee of persons engaged in the agricultural trade who are on the ground observers of conditions and recognize that the committee can coordinate with government agencies for pest control.

The committee will be in charge of coordination with agencies and person engaged in developing the plans for combating Mormon crickets and other agricultural pests. They will be required to keep the commissioners advised of control plans and actions, and provide information regarding control strategy available for control measures such as bait and the availability of cost sharing.

They will also be required to cooperate with elected officials and other county personnel engaged in control measures.

We Salute the Owyhee Co. Cattlemen!

From the old files...

A survivor of the west

Reprinted from the Homedale News, March 25, 1955

By John Bailey

We have always been fans of the great Old West and when we heard that Win Adamson at Homedale is an old time westerner and a friend of Charlie Russell, the western artist, we had to stop and talk with him.

Adamson is a man who is not quick to talk about himself, but we did find out that he left the place of his birth in the Oklahoma territory and headed for the wide open spaces at the tender age of 12.

Adamson, in his seventies we would judge, joined a cattle drive headed for North Dakota. He stayed there seven or eight year before his feet began to itch and he headed west again.

The dates are a little fuzzy back in those day, but he does remember being in Dodge City, Kans. When it was roaring, really tough, he says.

He finally wound up in Montana with an outfit raising horses for livery stock. After that it was cattle, and that's how he happened to meet Russell. He and Russell became friends while they were riding line on the same ranch. That was, of course, before Russell gained renown as a painter.

Even after Russell settled down and began to paint they still remained friends. Used to run into each other now and again at rodeos, Fourth of July celebrations and the like, Adamson says.

"It was good free open country, and anywhere you took off your hat was home," Adamson told us. "People in those days didn't even ask your name. Anything they knew about you was what you had told them yourself."

Still, it seems as though the west hadn't quite settled down, from some of the things Adamson said. Outlaws and gunfighters still roamin' around.

Adamson told us about a band of cattle rustlers that operated all the way from the Canadian border to Mexico. Pretty big outfit. They got away with it for several years before they finally got caught. Turned out to be three bankers in the bunch, too.

A stock detective finally got the goods on 'em, Adamson said. Worked with them for two years before he lowered the boom. They all got prison terms and the detective. Adamson was thoughtful for a moment.

"Don't know what ever became of that detective," he said. "May be he got killed."

There were others too. Adamson recalls three brothers who turned to the wrong side of the law. Seems as how they just kept getting squeezed out by biggest ranches. Kept getting blamed for things they didn't do and it finally got too much for them. They made pretty tough outlaws too, so we understand.

Then there was Long Henry. He was somewhat of a lone wolf, and fast enough with a gun that nobody cared to draw against him. Finally shot be a 15 year old boy Adamson tells us. The boy was sitting at the end of the bar in a saloon and shot old Long Henry when he walked in the door. Shot him dead with a .38, just like that.

Any trouble with Indians? No, not much, well, there was one time. Didn't amount to much though. Seems as how some Indians went on the war path once when Adamson was still in the Dakotas. He was out on the range when the Indians chased everybody away from the ranch. When he got back he found a note saying everyone went to the fort, so he spent the night sleeping in the hills, he said.

Back in 1911 and 12, or thereabouts. Adamson was packing in steel markers along the Canadian border. Uncle Sam used them as dividers, said U.S. on one side and Canada on the other. After that he was stockman on the Blackfoot Indian reservation, inspecting brands and protecting the Indians' interests and so forth.

It was about that time that Adamson frosted his lungs and was advised to moved to a warmer climate. Got down to 62 below that winter, 1916, Adamson recalls. Didn't get about 55 below for about six weeks, he said. It wasn't until six years later that he moved west again, though landed this time in Burns, Ore.

"Some pretty good sized ranches there in those days," he said.

He stayed around Burns until he moved to Homedale about 22 years ago. No tractors then and he could always get work driving a team. Seemed to have a way with horses.

Adamson leaned back in his chair, pulled a sack of Bull Durham out of his wool shirt pocket and began to roll a cigarette.

"Won ten dollars rolling a cigarette once," he said. "We were riding along in a stiff wind and a fellow bet me I couldn't roll one. I did and he lost."

Adamson says he still gets itchy feet once in awhile. Longs for the open spaces again. Even helps in roundup and branding just to keep in practice. Enjoys a good western movie now and then too.

Last summer Adamson and his family went back to Montana to visit the country where he had spent so much time.

"It just isn't what it used to be," he said. "Too many people I knew where I wanted to go but I didn't know how to get there. They've got roads and fences now."

Adamson, more at home on a horse that in a car was driving when he came to a fence. Pulled back on the steering wheel, hollered whoa and plowed right through the fence, they say.

We began to run out of time about then and had to leave all too soon. We never tire of hearing about the Old West and it was hard to get back to 1955.

Local Angus breeders recognized in evaluation report

Several local Angus breeders are recognized in the 2004 fall Sire Evaluation Report published by the American Angus Association in St. Joseph, Missouri. Issued in both the spring and fall, the new report features the latest performance information available on 6,148 sires.

William L. White of Murphy owns three bulls listed, T J Grand Angus Co. of Grand View owns one bull listed, Colyer Cattle Co. of Bruneau owns two bulls listed, C and D Angus Company of Grand View owns one bull listed, Doug and Janice Burgess of Homedale own one bull listed and Anchor Angus of Grand View own one bull listed.

“This report provides both Angus breeders and commercial cattle producers using Angus genetics with accurate, predictable selection tools for improving their herd,” said Bill Bowman, American Angus Association vice president of information and data programs. Expected Progeny Differences are generated from the performance database of the AAA, which includes information submitted this past year by nearly 8,300 Angus breeders through the Angus Herd Improvement Records program.

EPDs are available for 17 traits including birth weight, weaning weight, milk, yearling weight and height, mature daughter weight and height, and scrotal circumference. Carcass progeny measures generate EPDs on carcass weight, marbling, rib eye area, external fat thickness and percent retail product. Ultrasound body composition data also generates end product predictors for rib eye area, intramuscular fat percentage, fat thickness and percent retail product.

The “Big Easy” Creole Cookout

Breathe new life into the traditional American cookout with flavors from New Orleans, the “Big Easy.” Choose ingredients with big Creole flavor, easy preparation and that little something extra, or “lagniappe,” as they say in the French Quarter.

Start with premium, grain-fed Midwestern steaks that are naturally tender, no-carb and well marbled. Sprinkle on an authentic, all-purpose blend of Creole spices or give the beef a soak in a Creole-spiced marinade. The seasoning creates a seal during grilling, keeping the food juicy. The marinade adds flavor and tenderness.

Then package the tasty leftovers in tight-sealing disposable yet reusable plastic containers, such as GladWare, and send them home with your guests. But don’t give all the leftovers away — you’ll want to keep some for yourself! Everyone will get to take it “easy” another day when dinner is already prepared.

For more information and great recipes, check out www.omahasteaks.com, www.tonychachere.com and www.glad.com.

Entertaining the Creole way

- Make entertaining easy. Keep individually wrapped steaks, pork and poultry, signature appetizers, side dishes and delicious desserts on hand in the freezer. When it’s time for company, thaw, heat and serve.
- Give side dishes and salads that “French Quarter” flair. Spice things up using Creole seasoning in place of salt.
- Prepare flavorful grilled vegetables in no time! Marinate fresh veggies with a Creole marinade, thread onto pre-soaked wooden skewers and grill.
- Make time to relax and enjoy your guests. When possible, prep foods ahead of time. Wrap, cover and store foods with sealable plastic wrap, such as Glad Press ’n Seal, until you’re ready to grill or serve. This helps keep food fresh and the spill-proof seal guarantees safe transport to any grill or table.
- Plan for leftovers! Some dishes taste better the next day after their ingredients have had a chance to mingle. Keep refrigerated leftovers fresh in tight-sealing plastic containers, pop in the microwave and enjoy your “Big Easy” cookout another day.

Giving foods on the grill a Creole flavor is easy with the right seasonings and marinades.

On the edge of common sense

Helping ourselves

In the winter of 1983 I was at a PCA meeting in a small country town. America was in a depression, farmers were mortgaged to the hilt and interest rates were 13.5%. The speaker stated flatly to the group of gloomy farmers, “We will never see single digit interest again.”

I remember thinking, ‘Are we as a nation so weak, so undisciplined, so helpless, that we have condemned ourselves to the fate of bankrupt third world countries?’

I am reminded of that dark night years ago when I see the battle over water in our western United States today. As the population of southern California, Las Vegas and the front range of Colorado and central Arizona grow virtually out of control, enormous pressure is placed on their surrounding fragile ecology and limited water supply. These giant metro centers beckon tourists and businesses. They encourage people to come and settle. They also seem to have no compunction about coopting life-giving water from smaller communities and wild lands hundreds of miles away.

The Imperial Valley, the Arkansas Valley, The San Luis Valley, and Owens Valley are prey in the eyes of the voracious city planners. Yet these same metro-citizens plant huge lawns, trees, golf courses and open spaces. They pump the neighbors’ aquifers dry and yet vote down dams in the already civilized canyons near their homes.

I ask myself again, ‘Are we not capable of self-discipline?’ We squawk like offended geese when the price of gas goes over two dollars a gallon, yet leave ourselves to the mercy of such “allies” as Iraq and Venezuela rather than drill a well in our own backyard or develop nuclear power.

10% of our income goes to food. But we get indignant when the price of beef or blueberries or milk goes up. We demand that we not ship jobs overseas yet we continue to buy at discount stores that voraciously import cheap goods.

Are we as a civilization so beyond the capability of self-restraint in our consumption of the good life, our own bad habits, and our tolerance of depravity that we are doomed to suck ourselves dry and shrivel at the center?

In the gut-wrenching belt-tightening of the early eighties, the United States bit the bullet. Alan Greenspan and Ronald Reagan did the surgery. We have been double digit-interest free for over 20 years.

But do we have leaders of their caliber today? And more importantly, are we as Americans willing to face these giant issues as fellow concerned citizens instead of partisan carpetbaggers?

I look forward to next January when the election bickering is over and we can get down to the business of helping each other put our house back in order.

Do I hear an Amen?

Computers can be great machines

Computers can be great machines. Usually. I have been in the printing trade since the days of hand-set type (invented in the 14th century) and hot lead type (invented in the 1880s). I was in the business when strike-on type, then cold type were first introduced to the industry. I’ve been through the generation of phototype, too. And, I must admit, the computerized typesetting system is superior to them all.

But all is not perfect. A good example of this imperfectness was displayed in last week’s Avalanche. In at least five places in the paper the combination of the letters “ci” changed into an “a” with a squiggly mark above it. (“Principal”, for instance, came out “prinapal”) with that squiggle above the first “a”).

Still don’t know how this happened. After the paper was printed and I saw the fluke, I went into my layout program where the page was designed. It was correct there. But when it came out of the imagesetter (film) machine, it had changed. Some electronic quirk, I guess.

One thing about the hand-set type, if you picked the right letter out of the California type case and placed it in the composing stick, then into the chaise, it would still be that same letter when it was printed.

But I still prefer the electronic method, quirks and all.

Had quite a surprise Saturday evening. It started with Jim Bish insisting I accompany him on an ATV ride, one of necessity to get GPS readings of the Cow Creek- Jackson Creek area and east to Silver City. He convinced me that these readings were needed for future search and rescue operations. And I bought into it, in spite of the fact I already had most of the readings on my own GPS.

Unknown to me, my better half had arranged it to get me away from home. When we returned, there were about 40 friends and family gathered in our back yard to "honor" my 60th birthday.

Thanks to all who came. You made living so long worth it. (And a special thank you to my bride, who worked so hard to keep it a surprise.)

Not important ... but possibly of interest

This is the first installment of a story that will be continued in future issues of the Owyhee Avalanche. - - -

I’m lucky. I grew up when kids were still allowed to be kids.

While rummaging through the family bookcase on a winter day about 1955, I discovered a book titled “The Story of a Bad Boy,” by Thomas Bailey Aldrich. The author described his adventures as a child growing up in a small New England town. It was about his family, friends, and life’s lessons learned.

“The Story of a Bad Boy” fascinated me because many of the incidents the writer described paralleled my own experiences up to that point in my life. The primary difference was that his adventures occurred 115 years earlier.

After reading the book several times, I concluded that although the world had changed dramatically in many respects between 1840 and 1955, boys were pretty much the same.

Although I don’t pretend to be an expert on today’s youth, all one has to do is look around, watch the newscasts and read the headlines to realize most kids and families are different than they were 50 years ago when I was a kid.

So why is life so much different today -- especially for kids? We live at a much faster pace now, in a society that seems based on instant gratification. When I was growing up, adults weren’t obsessed with acquiring “things.” If they had roofs over their heads and enough food on their tables, folks thought life was pretty good. Most had time to sit back and watch their kids do the things kids do. Today’s society almost requires kids to act like miniature adults. Members of my generation were some of the last youngsters allowed to spend their childhoods as children.

I grew up when cars didn’t have safety belts or safety seats and nobody wore protective pads to ride a bike. Medicine bottles and kitchen cleaners didn’t have child-proof caps and willow switches and leather belts were considered acceptable tools for meting out punishment to misbehaving youngsters. Getting caught “playing doctor” with someone of the opposite sex would have got the participants in hot water but wouldn’t have required intervention by the courts or psychiatrists. Still, the vast majority of us managed to survive and went on to lead successful and productive lives.

Many sociologists want us to believe the “traditional American family” never existed -- that the “good old days” so many Americans yearn for are figments of bad memories. That’s not true. This story is my proof.

Those same social experts may argue that some of the incidents I describe demonstrate what was wrong with those times. Many of the experiences I had as a youth would today be, at the very least, socially unacceptable and at worst, in violation of federal, state or local statutes.

Although the story is told through the eyes of this writer, it could have taken place in any one of hundreds of small towns that existed in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries in America. It is the story of the last generation of youngsters to slip through before the rules changed.

I’m glad I grew up when and where I did. It was a great time to be a kid.

Farm Bureau Feds erase another pack

By John Thompson, Director of Information

Federal agents cut down another pack of wolves in late July a few miles north of McCall. This is the third consecutive year when the feds have had to step in and turn an entire pack into worm food. While there have been hundreds of other incidents when the feds darted and transported or killed individuals or smaller groups of problem wolves, this unexpected trend of gunning down entire packs raises a number of questions. The question of is this experiment working leads the list, but there are others such as how much is this costing the taxpayer? Those who support wolf reintroduction have got to be wondering whether the loss of one pack per year threatens the long-term viability of this misguided effort.

According to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service data, inside the wolf recovery area which includes Idaho, northwest Montana and Wyoming, the number of wolves killed in management activities by federal agents more than doubled from 2001 to 2002.

In the late winter of 2002, the Whitehawk Mountain Pack killed several cattle near the East Fork of the Salmon River. After repeated depredation incidents, federal agents snuffed the entire pack of 10 wolves. In February of 2003 after a string of similar incidents near Avon, Montana, Wildlife Services agents gunned down 12 wolves which they believed to be most of the animals that made up the Castlerock and Halfway packs. Then in April of 2003 a pack of wolves killed over 100 sheep near McCall. Most of the sheep were just killed, not consumed. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service issued shoot on sight permits to the rancher but none of the wolves were seen again – until this summer. Between early June and the end of July nine wolves from the Cook Pack killed over 100 sheep about 20 miles north of McCall. On July 20 each of those nine wolves felt the wallop of a 10-gauge shotgun loaded with buckshot.

So this is what wolf management has come to in Idaho. The animals have reproduced to the point where they have saturated available habitat. As more wolves are born each year and the young disperse into new valleys and mountain ranges they inevitably kill more livestock. But they can't dart and transport problem wolves anymore. Wolf management now means killing wolves. We have one federal agency (US Fish and Wildlife) that nurtures and monitors the packs and conducts public relations on their behalf, while a second federal agency (APHIS Wildlife Services) employs helicopters and shotguns to blow wolf hide all over the brush. "We're from the government, we're here to help," was perhaps never a bigger contradiction.

Wolves from Canada were slowly repopulating the northern Rockies before Bruce Babbitt and his ilk decided to intervene. Since they couldn't leave well enough alone, we now have more wolves and more problems than we bargained for. To the federal government officials in charge it's just job security. But to rural Idaho residents, it's just the opposite.
