Veterans to be honored with dance and school program

Veterans will be honored this week in Veterans Day celebrations with an annual school program and a dance held by the women's auxiliary. Veterans' Day is Nov. 11.

On Thursday, a program for Veterans will be held at Marsing Elementary School at 1:30 p.m. The annual event draws in Veterans from several different wars in the new cafeteria and is coordinated every year by music teacher Liz Lacer with the assistance of the school's staff and students.

The presentation of colors starts the event, which is followed by music and the introduction of Veterans who attend.

On Saturday, a Veterans Day harvest dance will be held at the Marsing Community Center at 8 p.m. Food and drinks will be available as well as live music. The cost is $5 per person with games and additional entertainment. Everyone is invited to attend.

Due for repairs

The "Glory Hole" at the Owyhee Reservoir is due for repairs and water users in the area will get a chance to hear exactly what is planned for the spout during a meeting Monday.

South Board to hold water users meeting

The South Board of Control will hold a water users meeting on Nov. 15 at the Homedale Senior Citizen's Center at 1 p.m.

Directors said the several developments in water will be discussed and speakers from the Bureau of Reclamation will be in attendance.

The speakers from the Bureau will discuss repairs to the Glory Hole at the Owyhee Reservoir and why they are needed. The districts are looking at several options for repairs to the system. Costs of the repairs will be charged to the district, which in turn will affect the water users in the area.

Bruce Smith, legal council for South Board of Control, is also scheduled to attend the meeting to discuss details and background of a lawsuit against the Bureau of Reclamation and NOAA Fisheries.

Environmentalists have aimed the suit at the upper Snake River operations and how they affect the anadromous fish runs in the Snake and Columbia

Val Dines

Don Osterhoudt

Voters re-elect Osterhoudt, oust Sibert

In the race for Marsing-Homedale Cemetery District Commissioner on Nov. 2, voters kept one incumbent commissioner but voted the other one out in the district's first election in 18 years. Don Osterhoudt will remain on the commission after beating challenger Garland Smith by 61 votes, but challenger Val Dines will join the commission in January after defeating incumbent Bruce Sibert by 720 votes. Dines received 958 votes to Sibert's 238.

Osterhoudt narrowly beat Smith by receiving 599 votes, to Smith's 538 votes. The district was broken down into five precincts of south and north Homedale, south and north Marsing and Opaline. Osterhoudt received 146 to 139 votes from south Homedale, 99 to 78 votes in north Homedale, 134 to

Voter turnout reaches record numbers

Out of 4,955 registered voters, more than 4,000 people turned out to vote last week in this year's rather controversial election in Owyhee County. County Clerk Charlotte Sherburn said the amount of voters probably set records in the county.

Accounts of long lines at polling places for federal, state and local elections were reported across the valley as well as across the United States. In the county, voters cast their hopes for President, U.S. senate, district representative, sheriff, irrigation director and cemetery commissioners.

Four thousand three hundred six voters were registered before the election and 649 people registered on the day of the election to bring the total number of registered voters to 4,955. In 2000, 3,188 people voted in the general election.

Three thousand seven hundred nineteen ballots were cast in the general election and 282 absentee ballots were returned to give Owyhee County an 81 percent voter turnout.

Voters finally received confirmation Wednesday that President George Bush will remain in office for another term, which the people obviously wanted considering 80 percent voted for the current country leader. County voters cast 3,589 votes for president with Bush receiving 2,859.

In the senate, the results would have been the same if county voters were to elect a United States Senator or a district representative since the people of the county re-elected Tom Gannon, Mike Crapo, Butch Otter, and Frances Field.

Senator Crapo received 498,769 votes over write-in candidate Scott McClure who took 2,732 votes. U.S. Representative for District one C.L. Butch Otter won over democratic candidate Naomi Preston with 206,946 votes. Preston took 90,523 votes.

In the house, Tom Gannon was elected for another term over democrat William Chisholm. Gannon received 9,116 votes to Chisholm's 4,920 votes.

Incumbent republican candidate Frances Field won another term in office with 9572 votes over Howard Meiers who took 3,935 votes.

Polling places were quiet in a day that had expected some turmoil. The nation's terror alert was upgraded, and county law enforcement agencies acted accordingly by adding extra officers to its staff. Homedale City Police Chief Jeff Eidemiller said he added some extra patrol, but the day went uneventful.

County Sheriff Gary Aman said he also added some extra deputies and also "gratefully" did not need them. He said just having the deputies out in the public helps people feel safer.

Seniors plan November events

Homedale to hold Christmas bazaar and Marsing sells holiday cookie dough

With the holidays just around the corner, seniors in Marsing and Homedale are actively scheduling celebration events and fundraising activities.

In Homedale, the group is planning a trip to the Greenleaf Christmas Bazaar and to the Simplot Plant Bazaar. Reservations for the trip are being taken and the public is invited to attend. A small fee will be charged to help pay for gas.

On Nov. 9, 16, 18 and 30, exercise classes will be given by Betty Arriaga and Agnes Smith. Betty will teach those who can exercise standing and Agnes will teach those who need to be in a sitting position. The course will last six weeks and will be held at the center every Tuesday and Thursday from 11 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. Everyone is invited to attend.

The annual Christmas Bazaar will be held on Nov. 13 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. Tables are still available for rent by contacting Ramona Andrus, 337-4737 or June Pollock at 337-5432. Beef burgers, baked potatoes, hot dogs, pie and coffee will be sold.

That evening, Roberta Pearce will present the 22nd annual Country Harvest Hoedown at the Nampa Civic Center. Tickets will be sold at the center for $6 for seniors or $8 for adults. The center's van will transport those to the event.

The senior dance will be held on Nov. 20 from 7 p.m. until 10 p.m. Those attending are asked to bring finger foods to the event. A fee of $3 will be charged at the door.

The Center will be closed on Veteran's Day, November 11.

In Marsing, the Meals-On-Wheels program is struggling to continue. Coordinator Silvia Silverthorne said that to produce a meal it costs $2.08, but the donations are only raising $1 for each meal. Money needs to be raised to keep the program going.

To answer the call of need, seniors are selling "Cookie Dough for Dough" as a fundraiser. Fifty pounds of sugar has been donated to help out, but more donations are needed. Silverthorne said donations of flour, shortening or anything else made for cookies would be appreciated. The dough will be sold near Thanksgiving complete with directions. Prices will be announced at a later date.

Pie in the eye

Kids and adults enjoyed an evening of games and food, including bingo, pie-in-the face, ping-pong toss, basketball toss, fishing, cakewalk, roping, jail, and sphaghetti feed. At least 100 people attended and enjoyed a fun night of entertainment.

It's a cowboy Christmas in Bruneau

The Bruneau community is gearing up for a day of holiday shopping and fun during the fourth annual Bruneau Cowboy Christmas Boutique sponsored by Miller's Etched OutWest.

Organizers said a group of "incredibly" talented artists would be attending this year's festivities including community and school organizations. The event will feature unique hand-crafted western gifts, art, silver, tack, quilts and crafts by area artists and community groups. The event also features premier local western artists who will be offering their handmade, one of a kind western home décor, cowboy gear and tack, furniture, metal work, quilts, western books, crafts, art and handcrafted silver jewelry.

Venders will open at 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 21 at the Bruneau Elementary School gymnasium. Admission is free.

Fair board tables boundary decision again

The ongoing dispute over boundaries for the Owyhee County Fair market livestock sale was put on the back burner again during a regular fair board meeting last week.

In March the board revised the livestock sale rules to exclude out of county 4-Hers and will only include 4-H kids who live or attend a school located in Owyhee County. In the past, 4-H kids from school districts located in the county have been able to attend, but now only kids who live or attend a school in the county are allowed.

Many parents and leaders have expressed disapproval of the decision to the board, which has brought the decision back to the fair board agenda.

Last month, nearly 100 people attended a public hearing held by the board and expressed their disapproval of the decision. No one from the public attended the meeting in support of the issue, but board members said they will not change the decision, but they will consider exceptions to the rule.

Ray Bicandi offered an alternative to excluding 4-Hers who have attended the livestock sale in the past before the ruling changed, or if the student lives in a district that is also located in the county.

The exemption would allow 4-H students to request attending the livestock sale but the board would be the ones to make the final decision. Some members of the audience felt the decision would be "pick and choose."

"Boundary exception for showing and marketing livestock at the Owyhee County Fair," board Chairman Joe Merrick read from the draft copy of the exception. "Non residents not of Owyhee County not attending an Owyhee County school but living in a district partly located in Owyhee County may petition the Owyhee County Fair board for permission to participate in showing and marketing livestock at the Owyhee County Fair. The petitioners must belong to an Owyhee County 4-H club to be eligible for consideration. The approval of the request shall be granted or denied at the discretion of the board."

"In the minutes you sent out, the terminology is going to have to be addressed," Shawn Dygert said. "The term attending or living is used a lot and I think that terminology is going to have to be addressed. Through all of the minutes in the 1990s it uses the term living but in the 03 fair book it uses the term attending. I make a motion to amend the word attending to living in the exception."The motion passed unanimously.

The board discussed several changes to the exception application, but eventually approved tabling the action until the December board meeting.

"So it boils back down to who you choose," Deana Bass said. "It feels like the fair board is picking on the kids from Melba. I don't know what our kids have done, but it really feels like this is focused on Melba."

Board member David Rutan explained that the board was trying to keep the decision from being favoritism problem, but he said that the board would not be grandfathering any children back into the sale.

"By the new 4-H guidelines that were just passed the state level is trying to make it so any kid can go anywhere they want," Rutan said. "I think what we need to be careful of is if one comes they all come. If one is denied they are all denied. I don't think we can start accepting them on an individual basis. If you think we have problems now... If we have room for all then fine. If we don't have room for all, then we don't have room for anyone."

The boundary issue will be on the December board meeting agenda.

Local libraries to receive CDs from settlement

Idaho public libraries will soon receive more than 25,000 music compact discs (CDs), Attorney General Lawrence Wasden said last week. The distribution is a result of a legal settlement with five of the largest U.S. music distributors of CDs and three large CD retailers. Owyhee County Libraries will receive over 300 of the CDs.

The settlement stems from an August 2000 antitrust lawsuit which Idaho and 39 other states alleged in federal court that the defendant music distributors and retailers illegally entered into conspiracies to raise the price of CDs.

The court approved, as part of the settlement, the distribution of music CDs to not-for-profit corporations, charitable groups, and government entities. The CD distribution is the third aspect of the settlement. Other components included a mandatory change in sales practices of the defendants and compensation for consumers who purchased CDs with illegally inflated prices. 15,500 Idaho consumers who filed claims received approximately $214,830 in compensation.

“The defendants in the case hurt both the consumers and competitors through their unlawful activity,” Wasden said. “The distribution of CDs is one way that the defendants can compensate for the harm inflicted on local communities.”

Congressman Walden works
the crowd in Jordan Valley

by Paul McKay

On October 27, 2004 Congressman Greg Walden came to Jordan Valley to listen to the communities concerns about current political issues. The meeting took place at 6:00 P.M. at the Lions Hall. Three other United States House of Representatives accompanied Congressman Walden: Brian McDonald (Chief of Staff), John Snider, (from the Medford office) and Colby Marshall (from the Bend office.)

The Rockville School put on some entertainment to start the meeting off. They had a presidential debate. They made republicans and democrats both look pretty foolish. It was very humorous and put everybody in a good mood.

The first concern that came up was about the Timber problem in some parts of the country. He and ranchers discussed how a lot of trees burn by nature rather than using them for good uses. Many ranchers voiced their concerns about Wilderness Study Areas, and how limited the use is on them. A big problem for a few individual ranchers, was the issue of wild horses. Congressman Walden said he is working on the issue. Walden explained the problem of not being allowed to trudge the Columbia River with Ships. He said scientists were checking the water depth. Available Coal, and fuel in Alaska was discussed. Walden believes there was plenty there for use, and told about the efforts going out to get it passed. A big issue talked about was Country of Origin meat labeling. This issue has ranchers divided. Drug imports was an important issue with many concerns. Another interesting topic brought up was how wind energy could be helpful in various forms. Congressman Walden was very helpful and supportive of the small community of Jordan Valley. Everyone was very appreciative.

Congressman Walden took a tour through Iraq. He told how the American troops were and just about Iraq. It sounded like our troops were doing very well and working hard for our cause. Thanks to Bob and Karen Skinner Congressman Walden was able to talk to our community. Thanks to Congressman Walden, Jordan Valley's community concerns were heard and we now better understand what is being done. It's great to have government officials who listen to such a small community.

If you would like to contact Congressman Greg Walden to voice concerns of any kind you can reach him via email at greg.walden@mail.house.gov.

Be it a birthday, a holiday or a family gathering, Ruth was always there. Her life truly reflected the love of Christ she held in her heart and the teachings of the Bible she lived by.

Ruth is survived by her husband Morgan of Marsing, Idaho; by three children: Dave Reche of Nampa, ID, Esther Robinson of Kuna, ID, Debra Davis of Meridian, ID; by their spouses Lori Reche, Dick Robinson and Brent Davis; and by three stepdaughters: Danni Reche of Portland, OR., Carri Thompson and Kelli Morville of Deland, FL. Watersheds selected for 2005 security program

About 2,100 farmers and ranchers in 15 watersheds throughout Idaho will have the opportunity to participate in USDA's new Conservation Security Program (CSP) in 2005. The C.J. Strike watershed is among those selected.

"I am pleased to announce this kind of incentive that rewards Idaho producers for the conservation work they have already done," said Sara Braasch, regional assistant chief for the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), during a press conference held in Boise today.

CSP, a part of the 2002 Farm Bill and administered by NRCS, is a voluntary program rewarding those farmers and ranchers meeting the highest conservation standards on their land. Over $200 million could be available to farmers and ranchers nationwide.

"On behalf of Idaho's 51 Conservation Districts and some 24,000 farmers and ranchers, we view CSP as a cornerstone program in the 2002 Farm Bill," said Kent Foster, executive director of the Idaho Association of Conservation Districts. "We are happy to see it implemented here in Idaho and we are happy to see producers financially benefit from their conservation efforts."

Selected Idaho watersheds include: (see map) Moyie, Lower Kootenai, South Fork Clearwater, Middle Fork Clearwater, Lochsa, Lower Selway, Upper Selway, Lower Salmon, Little Salmon, Middle Salmon, North Fork Payette, Upper Henry's, Lower Henry's, Big Lost and CJ Strike.

"CSP offers an exciting future vision for conservation," said Richard Sims, NRCS State Conservationist for Idaho. "The program financially recognizes proactive producers already accomplishing great stewardship on their operations."

Producers with over 50 percent of their land inside the selected watershed boundaries have met the first criteria for program eligibility. A list of baseline eligibility can be found on the NRCS website.

The CSP signup will occur in early 2005. NRCS plans to hold public informational meetings in each watershed before the signup. Producers interested in participating will need to fill out a self-assessment prior to signup.

CSP will be offered in these

15 watersheds this year only. Over the next eight years, all Idaho farmers and ranchers will have the opportunity to apply for CSP.

"We completed a very successful CSP signup in the Lemhi Watershed last summer," Sims said. "We hope the Lemhi, coupled with the 2005 watersheds, will inspire other producers to assess their conservation planning to make sure they are eligible for future signups."

Grand opening

The grand opening of Cindy's Coffee and Bakery shop will be held this weekend from 7 a.m. until closing. Free samples and specials will be offered during the two-day event.

Coffee shop offers more than coffee and pastries

Cindy's Coffee and Bakery Shop is not exactly what the name says, Cindy Sims says her small shop is turning into a full-blown restaurant.

Sims opened the business in September and is now planning her grand opening this weekend. On Saturday and Sunday customers can sample holiday goodies, baked pastries and a variety of sandwiches, pizzas and much more.

"We started out as a sandwich-pizza and coffee shop," Sims said. "But the turnout has been so good, we are moving into catering, holiday specials and so much more. I have also opened a room in the back for a banquet room. We have everything we need to do most any kind of party or banquet as well as a full lunch and dinner menu."

Sims' shop still offers the original coffees, lattes, mochas and soft drinks as she originally started with, but now customers have a variety of hot meals, sandwiches and pizzas to choose from.

Sims' shop is open seven days a week except major holidays and the head cook said her shop is also able to deliver. They just recently added Marsing, Wilder and Greenleaf to its delivery area.

Library to hold discussion on "Funny in Farsi"

The Homedale Library will hold a book discussion of "Funny in Farsi: A memoir of Growing up Iranian in America" by Firoozeh Dumas. The discussion will take place on Saturday morning, Nov. 20 at 10 a.m. Refreshments will be served.

Dumas first came to the U.S. From Iran in the early 1970s when her father was sent to California on a two-year contract from the National Iranian Oil Company. The family spent much of their time correcting misconceptions about life in Iran.

After a brief return to Iran, the family returned again to the U.S. this time however, they were mistrusted and vilified, as a result of the Iranian hostage crisis. Dumas and her family faced downright hostility from formerly friendly Americans. Her father lost his job.

Despite the problems they faced, her father never lost his overwhelming love for America.

The memoir is filled with hilarious events and laugh out loud descriptions of members of the family.

Copies of the book are available for checkout at the library. Participants need not be members of the library to join in the discussion.

Notice of Request for Public Comment on the Upper Owyhee Watershed – Water Quality Implementation Plan

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) is seeking public comment on a draft water quality implementation plan for the Upper Owyhee Watershed, in Owyhee County. The plan was drafted by Duane LaFayette of the Idaho Association of Soil Conservation Districts (IASCD) and other Designated Management Agencies.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency approved a water quality assessment and Total Maximum Daily Load (TMDL) document for sediment, bacteria, and temperature for the Upper Owyhee Watershed in March 2003. A draft implementation plan has been prepared to provide a framework for the local stakeholders who are ultimately responsible for ensuring that beneficial uses in the Upper Owyhee Watershed are achieved.

Copies of the draft implementation plan are available for review at DEQ's Boise Regional Office and at DEQ's Web site at www.deq.state.id.us starting November 1, 2004. Public comments on the plan will be accepted through 5 p.m. MST, Tuesday, November 30, 2004. Duane LaFayette can answer any questions about the plan at 845-2244. Home grown pheasants

By Brian Marek, Conservation Officer
Idaho Department of Fish and Game – Southwest Region

If you're an avid pheasant hunter and pursue your quarry at one of Fish and Game's Wildlife Management Areas (WMAs), you've probably noticed several changes in the rules governing the hunting of game-farm birds on these lands. What you may not know is why these changes were made.

Each fall, Fish and Game purchases and releases farm-raised pheasants on nine WMAs scattered across southern Idaho: Cartier Slough, C.J. Strike, Fort Boise, Market Lake, Montour, Mud Lake, Niagara Springs, Payette River, and Sterling. Hunters 17 years or age or older must have a valid WMA permit in possession while hunting pheasants on these WMA lands. The pheasant permit costs $21.50 and is valid for six birds. There is no limit to the number of WMA pheasant permits a person may purchase.

In April 2004, the Idaho Fish and Game Commission changed the bag and possession limits for pheasant seasons on the nine WMAs named above. The bag limit on these lands is now two roosters per day and four roosters in possession after opening day.

A survey of pheasant hunters regularly hunting these WMA lands indicated that a majority of the respondents were in favor of the reduced bag and possession limits. With the decrease in the bag limit, more pheasants are able to survive their first day on the ground, allowing more birds to be available until the next scheduled pheasant release.

A second rule change, applicable only to WMAs in Southwest Idaho (C.J. Strike, Fort Boise, Montour and Payette River WMAs), set legal shooting hours to begin at 10 a.m. (except on opening day of the season which opens at noon). The impetus for this rule was the issue of safety for those releasing birds. In years past, there were several incidents where Fish and Game staff, in the process of releasing pheasants, were pelted by buckshot from over-eager hunters who happened to arrive in unison with the pheasant delivery truck. One wildlife manager reported that even with a heavy coat on, he could feel the pellets sting his back. It's simply good fortune that he was not facing the opposite way when this incident occurred; he might have lost an eye, or worse. There were many other close calls, culminating in the change to the 10 a.m. opener, which now allows workers to safely release birds early in the morning without risking their lives to do so. The change will improve safety for pheasant hunters as well.

One other benefit of the ten o'clock rule is that it will decrease hunter conflicts on those WMAs where pheasants and ducks are both pursued, especially at Fort Boise WMA. Duck hunters typically set up their decoys in the pre-dawn hours, hoping to catch waterfowl at first legal light. Duck hunters should now be able to hunt waterfowl undisturbed for several hours before pheasant hunters take to the field.

With the decrease in wild pheasant populations and the increasing amount of land being swallowed up by private enterprise, WMAs have become very popular spots for sportsmen. Remember that WMAs are public hunting areas and every visitor needs to be safe and respectful. Although no Idaho law requires it, wearing hunter orange is a great, life-saving idea, particularly on heavily-used public hunting areas.

Finally, remember to obey all hunting laws. Upon harvesting a pheasant at any pheasant-stocked WMA, you must record on your permit the month, day and location where the pheasant was taken. This means you'll need to add a writing device (preferably a pen) to your hunting gear in order to comply with this rule.

Marsing seniors have been busy preparing cookie dough just in time for the holiday season and the annual bazaar and half price thrift sale. The sale will be held on Saturday at the center.

"The kitchen crew will be taking orders for cookie dough and hopefully will have samples as well," coordinator Silvia Silverthorne said.

The pre-made cookie dough will cost $5 and a variety of dough will be sold including chocolate chip, oatmeal, pumpkin pinwheels, peanut butter and a chameleon dough which is a sugar cookie dough that can be used with lifesaver toppings, thumb prints or what ever the cook wants to use it for.

Baking times and instructions will be included with the cookie dough when it is picked up.

Currently $320 has been donated for Meals-on-Wheels including $80 for ingredients, 100 pounds of flour, 50 pounds of sugar and two pounds of chocolate chips. Funds from the event will be used for the homebound meal program.

Middle school volleyball and football ends with a bang

By Jordan Valley junior reporters

On Friday, the Jordan Valley Colts played their last volleyball and football games of the season against Willowcreek at Willowcreek. Fans enjoyed perfect weather, which set the mood for a great ending to an already successful season.

“The junior varsity volleyball team played their best game of the season,” commented coach Melinda Cuvelier. “They hustled and stayed focused. What a great way to end the season!”

The junior varsity team beat Willowcreek in two games with scores of 25-17 and 25-16. Elizabeth Bowen had 10 good serves and Katrina Moran had 11 good serves. Hayley Hebison was the leader with 12 good serves.

The varsity volleyball team ended their season with a win and scores of 25-17 and 25-22. Nickie Naegle had 25 good passes and Emma Johnson followed on her heels with 24 good passes. Catie Kershner played outstanding. She had 15 sets, 9 spikes, and 15 serves.

Coach Jacque Naegle said, “The girls took everything we worked on the entire year and put it all together for their last game. They took all the skill and did a great job. What a nice way to end the year.”

Both junior varsity and varsity ended their season with a win-loss record of 10-1. Junior varsity lost only to Willowcreek, just one week ago, and varsity lost to Crane earlier in the season.

The middle school football team showcased their talents in their final game. There are four eighth graders on the team, Alek Quintero, Zac Fillmore, Cody Averett, and Koehl Trautman. They showed the crowd what to look for next year on the high school level.

Quintero had three touchdowns, with Dusty Easterday following close behind with two. Trautman, Fillmore, and Brandon Mackenzie each put together a two-point conversion. Mackenzie, Easterday, and Trautman each caught an interception as well.

The game ended with a score of 41-0 with the Colts taking home their last victory of the season. The season ended with a 4-2 win-loss record. The Colts lost to only one team, Harper, twice.

Coach Mike Quintero commented, “We had a great season. Next year we will be tough too. We’ve got some great talent coming up and I’m certainly looking forward to it.”

Lady Huskies plan for second district title

Marsing will be looking to avenge last year’s near state title after making its first ever trip to a state tournament in the 2A level last season. But before that can happen, the team plans to take home the district title as defending district champions. Coach Don Heller will lead his girls again this year, but a setback for the Huskies will be the loss of a very key player.

Amanda Stewart who led the Young football teams wrap up season

The final football game of the season for the Homedale Middle School was played earlier this month when the eighth grade team faced off against Ontario. The young Trojans lost the final game 30-14 and ended with an even record of 3-3

Kevin Mercado scored early in the first quarter for the Trojans on a dive play. Rowdy Lair and Grant Sweet blocked for the score.

Coach Dave Hann said wet weather didn’t help the Trojan’s effort as they lost the ball five times during play.

Ontario was at a 30-6 lead when Austin Emery led the Trojans down to Ontario’s 15-yard line with two minutes left in the game. On a fourth down, Emery pitched the ball to Rodrigo Villarreal for a sweep, but the ball again was uncontrollable. Following a swift retrieve, Villarreal threw the ball back to Emery for the final touchdown. A two-point conversion caught by Sweet ended the season.

“ We are very proud and pleased to have worked with these fine young men this season. Lots of great memories have been made, as well as lessons that have been learned.” Coach Hann and Coach Dayton. “We’d like to thank all those parents and others who supported us and helped us at the games and practices.”

Huskies last year will not be back after graduating from the school in May, but Heller says the team is still strong, hopefully strong enough to make another attempt at the title.

“The girls played half the season without her last year and we have nearly every member returning this year so we should be strong,” Heller said Monday. “New Plymouth will be tough, but Nampa Christian has a new coach this year so I don’t know what they will look like.”

The Lady Huskies beat out Homedale 54-43 in the district opener last year at Treasure Valley Community College. But the Huskies won’t have Homedale to contend with this year as the team was moved into the 3A sanctions.

Marsing was down 9-14 last year before entering the state tournament. The team stopped New Plymouth and Melba for its first district title, which Heller said made the team much stronger. Heller said before

Stewart came back to the team late in the season, his young girls had to step up and play tough early in the season.

The Huskies beat top seed New Plymouth in the semifinals of the district tournament for the first time in four seasons.

The Huskies beat West Jefferson 47-42 in the school’s biggest game of the season.

Breana Chadez, who averaged 14 points, seven rebounds and four steals a game last year, will join the team again this year. MJ Usabel, 9.9 points, seven rebounds, will also return to the courts. Tori Kent, Angela Martinez and Molly Nielsen

Marsing will begin girl’s action in Idaho City on Nov. 16 then they will travel to Payette to meet the Pirates on Nov. 18. Their first home game will be against Rimrock on Nov. 23.

The district tournament will be held at Homedale High School on Feb. 1 followed by the state tournament at Middleton High School on Feb. 17.

A note from the sports desk

by Cheryl Beeson

I had several phone calls last week concerning why sporting events in the Marsing School District have not received any coverage this fall season. I wanted to take a moment and address the issue. The Marsing

As an Owyhee County newspaper, we “attempt” to cover four school districts in the area. Grand View/Bruneau, Jordan Valley, Marsing and Homedale. To add that up, just in the fall season alone, we could have the opportunity to cover five different sports in Homedale, two in Marsing, two in Jordan Valley and three in Rimrock. That is just varsity sports alone. Needless to say we rely, as every newspaper in the valley does, on the assistance of the coaching staff.

As a rule at the beginning of each sport season, I fax or e-mail a note to the athletic director of each school the information needed with deadlines noted on sending sports information to our office, as does most other newspapers in the valley. The benefit we have over a daily paper is we can include a full week of sports activities instead of asking the coaches to offer information on a daily basis. But for some reason, the majority of the time it is not done.

The coaches who take the time to send information are the events that make the paper. If we are notified or informed about special events in sports before they happen, every attempt is made to attend that event for pictures. But if the coach is not available to name the children in the picture, the picture generally will not be printed.

With the evolution of electronic equipment, the phone, cell phones, answering machines, faxes, e-mail and even snail mail, it leaves one to wonder why it is so difficult to make information available. We have access to each of these communication devices and have informed each athletic director of their options to use them.

The Marsing Huskies pounded their way up in the district competition last month and nearly made it to the state level. We were not there to see it or write about it, and for that we apologize.

Contact had been made with a member of the coaching staff shortly before the competition ended and we were told the team probably would not make it any further and that the season was over. The team fooled them and they did, but we were never notified.

It all boils down to cooperation and ‘team’ work. We all have lives other than our jobs, but when it comes to our children, nothing is more important than their accomplishments.

Measures are currently being taken to mend the communication gap, but for any parent who has information on upcoming events, or who would like to submit sports articles or pictures we would like to sit down and chat.

Football stars

Brett Endicott and Nick Williams, broke records in rushing and receiving for the 2004-2005 football season.

Football stars set school records

Although a district title slipped by the Homedale Trojans this year, two key players set records for the school in rushing and in receiving. Nick Williams and Brett Endicott combined for 36 touchdowns for the season.

Williams recorded 67 catches for 1,109 yards, 14 touchdowns. He averaged 16.6 yards per catch. Endicott made 232 attempts with 139 completions and five interceptions. He had 22 total touchdowns for a 59.9 completion rate. Endicott averaged a touchdown every 9.5 times.

“The year we won the state championship, 1997, Kenny Thomas recorded over 1,000 yards receiving,” Principal Mike Williams said. “Brett is close or over the records Darren Uranga set, but his includes 12 games and our kids played nine. The chances of breaking those records is tough.”

“It is incredible,” Head Coach Thomas Thomas said. “A 1,000 receiver is pretty significant at any level. He has 1,912 yards throwing. The most impressive is the percentage of efficiency. In five years of coaching, my best quarterback was at 1,300 yards.”

Marcus Eby is also pushing the records with 586 yards on 25 catches.

“When we played Middleton we had 30 offensive plays and scored three touchdowns for a touchdown every ten plays,” Thomas said. “That is a rate we have not matched any other game. Middleton put a linebacker on Nick to jam off the line, but that kid didn’t touch him. It makes my job much easier. We have a lot of options.”

Lady Trojans face tough b-ball season

The Homedale Lady Trojans will be out looking for a state championship this year in 2A basketball. It has been 24 years since a state champion banner has been hung in the gymnasium and this year the girls hope to hang another.

In 2003, the title was at the team’s fingertips but ended against long time rival Nampa Christian with a runner up status. The team beat West Jefferson, 1999 state champs but this year they will have some tough team competition as a 3A team.

Coach Mark Weekes will lead the team again this year, but said he has high hopes with some returning starters. Gloria King will return as a starter as well as Shannon Batt, Jessica Stimmel, Tegan Krall and Faith Brasher.

As a 3A team, Homedale will face teams like Middleton, Weiser and Fruitland locally, but powerhouses like Priest River, Marsh Valley, defending state champions and Shelly, 2003 champions will be on their list for a state title.

Fans can get their first look at the team during a jamboree in Homedale Thursday night at 6 p.m. The girls will start their season with a non-conference match at New Plymouth on Saturday. The freshman team will play at 4:45 p.m. followed by the junior varsity team and the varsity team at approximately 7 p.m.

On Nov. 16, Homedale will host its first home game against the Nampa Christian Trojans followed by hosting Parma on Nov. 18.

This year the freshman tournament will be held in Middleton on Jan. 31 and the district tournament will be held at the school of the number one seed. The state tournament will be held at Bishop Kelly High School on Feb. 17.

Mousetrap cars

Sweet Tips

- Counter Intelligence: Keep your counter clean when decorating cookies by using Press'n Seal wrap as a place mat. To clean up, simply toss the sheet.
- Chill Out: Keep cookies on hand all season long by freezing in Press'n Seal wrap. The tight seal helps prevent freezer burn.
- Sticky Situation: Prevent dough from sticking when using cookie cutters by dipping the cutters in flour first.
- Safe Travels: Use Press'n Seal wrap to transport plates of cookies. The wrap seals to paper plates, glass platters — even wooden trays.
- It's a Wrap: Save any leftover dough for later baking by wrapping it in Press'n Seal wrap and storing it in the refrigerator for up to 24 hours.

City well design work nearing completion

Design work on the new Homedale well and water system is nearly complete, according to Dave Curtis, project engineer.

Curtis, who represents J-U-B Engineering in Nampa outlined progress on the project at the November Homedale City Council meeting.

At a special council meeting November 19, Anderson and Wood Construction of Caldwell was named the apparent low bidder on the pump and pump house for the new well, with a bid of $73,380.60.

The well, located on a 100 by 100 foot lot across the Snake River from Homedale in Canyon County, will has a 75 horsepower pump. The pump house is designed so one end and the roof can be removed in order to make repairs.

Gem District election slated

Area voters will chose two directors for the Gem Irrigation District Board when they go to the polls Tuesday, December 11. The polls will be open from 1pm to 7pm.

Heating oil plentiful, but...

The good news is there should be plenty of oil for heating Idaho homes this winter. The bad news is, it's going to cost plenty. That seems to be the opinion of oil dealers in the Homedale area.

Oil distributors in the area seem to feel homeowners heating with stove oil of diesel won't have to worry bout getting fuel this winter. Information indicates a great deal of heating fuel has already been stockpiled if the winter is not too severe. But, cost is another matter.

Presently diesel fuel for heating costs between 80 and 87 cents per gallon in the area, with stove oil several cents per gallon higher. But if you're waiting for prices to level off, don't. If anything, fuel prices are expected to escalate in the next few months.

While most dealers feel there will be plenty of fuel for heating, they are just as unanimous in their feelings that a gas shortage may be on the horizon. Gasoline prices have been hovering at about one dollar per gallon for more that a month, but the price is about to start up again. One of the leading national authorities on the oil situation says gas may jump by as much as 16 cents per gallon by the end of the year. Heating fuels will be affected accordingly.

EDS. AVALANCHE. It again becomes our painful duty to chronicle another Indian outrage, resulting in immediate death of one man and severely wounding of two others.

On the 8th inst., about 10 o'clock, A.M., the Humboldt stage, on its way to Virginia, when within four miles of the Owyhee Ferry, was attacked by Indians. There were six persons on board, Wash Waltermire, driver; Jas, McBee, guard, and four passengers, named J. M. Holland, P. Cassy, D. Harrington and W. Wilson. They did not suspect danger near, when they were fired into by a party of Indians, who lay concealed among the rocks and behind a fortification which they had erected so as to completely screen themselves from sight of those in the stage. Wash put his favorite mustangs down to their greatest speed, and would have succeeded in reaching the Ferry without more injury than what was caused by the first volley but there was another party of Indians on horseback, further along, who kept shooting at them and striving to head them off and surround them, while the party that first fired at them were coming up behind. With steady nerve Wash ran his horses while McBee fought the red devils, and keeping them at bay for a distance of two miles, until one of the wheel horses was shot dead and two others badly wounded. This, of course, stopped the stage.

When the first volley was fired, Wilcox, who was sitting on the front seat inside the coach, received his death wound by a ballet which entered his breast near the right nipple and passing out at his back, ales, striking Wash in the side, inflicting a slight, though rather painful wound. Wilcox exclaimed, "Oh, my God, I'm killed," and his head sank over and rested on Harrington's knee, where he breathed his last. Harrington was shot in the left hip, the bullet ranging up and passing out his side, going through some six inches of muscle, producing a bad flesh wound, but it is not considered dangerous.

When the horses fell dead the boys unhitched the other three, one of them getting away from them. They then started for the Ferry, about two miles distant, leaving Wilcox dead in the stage, together with the mail, baggage, &c. The Indians seemed determined to prevent their escape and continued shooting at them; but Harrington, with great difficulty, hobble along, and they reached the Ferry about 12 o'clock, completely tired out. Four of us from the station, with Sergeant Brown and eleven men, who are stationed here, immediately hastened to the scene of action, but the red devils had already completed their work an escaped. They dragged Wilcox from the stage, stripped, scalped him and cut his heart out; also, taking with them the blankets, &c., belonging to the passengers, and cutting the mail sack and scattering the letters &c. among the sage brush. We took the body of Wilcox down to the Ferry where it was decently interned by the river side. Harrington is here and his wound is doing well. His fellow passenger, Holland, is here also taking care of him.

It is a fact to be lamented that the passengers were not armed. They all concur in bestowing great praise upon the driver and guard, by whose presence of mind and unflinching bravery the remaining lives of the party were, in all probability, saved. The stage is running all right, and the indefatigable Charley Barnes, Beachey's division agent, is here to-night with a new lot of horses and plenty of barley. He has men armed to the teeth running with the stage; so that, notwithstanding the recent trouble, passengers can consider themselves as safe as at any time during the season. W.J. Hill, Ferryman. Owyhee Ferry, Nov. 9, 1866.

THE MORNING STAR MILL has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and is now tooting its horn as was its won't in days gone by, and it is to be hoped that the parties interested will be justified in keeping it up and running the entire winter, as they fell sanguine they will.

THE INDIANS made a break on Reynolds Creek a few nights since, but met with poor success: they failed to kill anybody, and only got eight horses for a whole night's trouble. They subsequently tired to surprise Ish's ox-train but with the aid of a harder and a few soldiers that were on their trail, they were frightened away; and some of the would have been killed has not the soldiers mistaken the herder, Mr. Tom Glenn, for an Indian, in the gray of the morning, and chased him into camp, thereby affording the culprits a chance to escape while the soldiers were on the wrong track. This version we get from Mr. Waldron, an attaché of the train.

On the edge of common sense

Fall: Cow Workin' Time

It's fall. Cow workin' time. Calf shipping time. As the cowboy yearned for in song, "I'd like to be in Kansas for the round-up in the fall." Really it was Texas, for the roundup in the spring, but on most outfits, fall is a bigger deal.

The whole point is to pull the calves off the cows, preg check the cows, then ship the culls and the calf crop. It's payday. Harvest time. The reckoning.

Compared to the other big seasons in the cow business, i.e., branding, calving, turning out to summer pasture, or pulling the bulls, shipping time is the Super Bowl! Everyone's pumped up. Expectations are high, a year's work, it's like adding up your score at the end of the game. Most businesses accumulate income daily or weekly. But on a ranch or beef cow herd, the only things you accumulate regularly are bills. Christmas comes in the fall for cowmen.

The fall gather is often simple on an Ohio farm where you may run 2 cows to the acre. Shake a grain bucket or take the dog and grandchild out on the four-wheeler and bring 'em in. But on a ranch that runs 400 cows on 20 sections, the gather often requires 2 or 3 days, bad weather, the banker, horseshoer, brother who lives in the city, all the kids and everybody's dog to bring the bunch in.

The fall ranch gather is the height of rancher satisfaction; cool sunshine, crisp nights, autumn leaves, frisky calves, long days in the saddle, time to be proud of your horse, your kids, your way of life, and your contribution to society. It is a time of thankfulness shared by corn farmers in the fall piloting their spaceship down the rows during the harvest, a high school graduate listening to her commencement speaker, a cabinetmaker surveying his finished product hanging on the kitchen wall, or a soldier come home after serving his tour of duty. It is a sense of fulfillment.

It is also the calm before the storm! Once they reach the home corrals the calves are separated from their mamas and often sorted by sex and weighed. The bawling is deafening! Big semis arrive. Calves are loaded aboard and sent off to sale barns, feedlots or grass operations.

Then the cows are dry lotted overnight and worked the next day. During their 30-60 second stop in the squeeze chute, each cow is given a quick examination; her teeth are checked to determine age, eyes checked (each cow is asked to read an eye chart,) as are feet and udders. The veterinarian does a rectal palpation to determine pregnancy.

If she is deemed healthy, bred and young enough, she is given vaccinations, Vitamin A and a paraciticide and considered a keeper. At the conclusion of the rattling and banging and bawling and occasional outburst of sailor language, the cull cows are shipped, the good cows put in the meadow and everybody thanked. Then, when the dust has settled, there is usually time for football, fixing machinery, Christmas and kids activities, and feeding cows. Until...calving season begins early next spring and the cycle begins again.

Glad it's over

It's finally over.

The election campaign lasted longer than any I can remember, and the intensity of the national contest also was greater than any in my memory serves.

The result is – as Vice President Cheney put it – a mandate from the voters of this nation; a mandate that President Bush is doing the work of the people the right way.

On the local level, there was more interest than we've seen in the 29 years we've been here, but the main interest seemed to be in the minor districts. The Marsing-Homedale Cemetery Maintenance District held its first election in 18 years. Over 1,300 voters participated, and it resulted in a very clear mandate for change.

The South Board of Control position also brought out a huge number of voters, re-electing its chairman.

On the county level, a controversy developed early in the contest for sheriff, when the independent candidate filed for office, even though he didn't reside in the county. He had parked an old motorhome near a tavern at Walter's Ferry, and claimed it was his permanent residence. The clerk, who said she feared she would be sued if she didn't do so, allowed his name to be placed on the ballot.

In a one-on-one discussion regarding his residency, he said he wasn't required to actually live there, but that he merely had to claim it was his intent to make it his permanent home, and that the fact that he has ridden dirt bikes in the county for 20 years added to his residency status.

By the way, that "permanent home" had disappeared from that location the day after the election.

There were crimes committed by placing political signs right across the road from the Oreana community hall, and close to both polling places in Marsing. By law, they cannot be within 100 feet of a polling place if on private property, and 300 feet if on public property. Other signs of his – hundreds – were removed by the highway department. Each sign placed on public rights-of-way is a misdemeanor under state law.

And this guy wanted to be sheriff, and enforce the laws on the rest of us. Unreal.

Glad it's over.

Not important ... but possibly of interest

When my parents moved to a 40-acre farm in 1941, they didn't have much money. They could barely scrape up enough cash for the annual payment on the $4,100 mortgage (yep, the comma is in the right place).

Mom and dad were able to keep expenses down by planting a big garden. Mother canned upteen quarts of green beans, corn, beets and pickles every year. When we needed meat, mom would grab a six foot piece of heavy wire that had a hook on one end. She would step out in the chicken yard and select a target – hooking the Rhode Island Red's leg with the wire. The victim only had time for a couple of squawks before its head was on the ground next to the chopping block and it was on its way to the skillet.

Milk, another necessary staple, was a tougher problem. Dairy cows were expensive. My parents decided goats might be a cheaper alternative.

Goats are sort of the Swiss Army knives of the domestic animal world. They are smaller than cows, less expensive, and don't cost as much to feed. Goats will eat just about anything.

Family members who were around during the goat period (I wasn't born yet) always have been a little vague about the number of goats at the farm. There may have been as few as three. But at times it apparently seemed like there were a lot more. Like garlic, a little goat goes a long way.

Personality-wise, goats always have seemed to me to be cats with hooves. Like cats, goats like to get a good view of their surroundings. They always look for the high ground.

In those days the roof of our house was flat, as was the roof of the attached porch. The staircase leading to the basement was attached to the back of the porch, covered by a sloping roof that ran from the porch roof to the ground..

One day, shortly after the arrival of the goats, mother walked out the back door and heard a noise above her. Looking up, she discovered a goat looking down at her from the porch roof. The stairwell roof provided a ready-made goat ramp.

I am told it is rather distracting to live in a house where you can hear the prancing and pawing of little hooves above you at all times of the day and night -- not just on Christmas Eve.

The only spot the goats liked better than the house roof was the top of the nearby garage. It also was flat. To reach it they first had to jump to the top of an attached woodshed about five feet high. Then they leaped another five feet to the garage roof.

The goats were around during the war years. Perched on the roofs of the house and garage they probably looked like scruffy members of the Ground Observer Corps, on watch for marauding Japanese bombers.

The goat situation came to a head when my sisters pitched a small tent on the front lawn, intending to camp out overnight. One of the goats saw the tent and decided it might offer a new vantage point. It was right after the destruction of the tent that the goats made a trip to the Saturday livestock auction.

People who live in flat roofed houses shouldn't own goats.

Will miss Yarbrough

Although I wish our new prosecutor, Matthew Faulks, the best of luck in his position as Owyhee County's new District Attorney, I have to say that I will miss our old one, Ed Yarbrough. He did an excellent job while he was in office and served this county well. Whatever he goes on to do now, I am sure he will do just as good a job at it. Here's one person .who will miss your expertise, integrity and compassion, Ed. I am wishing you he best of luck in whatever you now choose to do, since you chose to no longer be the prosecutor of Owyhee County.

Summary judgement

Why America was born fighting

By William Perry Pendley - President, Mountain States Legal Foundation

In the Appalachian Mountains, writes James Webb in Born Fighting: How the Scots-Irish Shaped America, “American flags are frequent, on the trucks and in the yards and on the porches. America got bombed and mountain people don’t forget, even if it happened in New York and Washington, because when it comes to fighting wars, mountain people have always been among the first to go.”

In chronicling the Scots-Irish, Webb writes of the people who made him and, he argues persuasively, America what both are today. It is a close call on which benefited the most from that lineage. Webb is a top graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, the most highly decorated Marine officer of the Vietnam War, a graduate of Georgetown Law School, a former Secretary of the Navy, author of six best selling novels, including the preeminent Vietnam tale, Fields of Fire, an Emmy Award-winning journalist, and author of the screenplay for Paramount Pictures’ Rules of Engagement. America is, in the words of Scots-Irish Ronald Reagan, “a beacon...for all who must have freedom,” “the last best hope of man on earth,” and, with Scots-Irish like Sergeant Alvin York leading the way, the defender of that freedom.

Who are these Scots-Irish who “shaped America” and why is Webb’s book the first to give what Tom Wolfe calls “the all-but-invisible ethnic group that ... created the core beliefs of democracy American-style” the attention it deserves? Webb writes that 27 million Americans are descendants of the 250,000 to 400,000 Scots-Irish who left Ireland during the eighteenth century and “whose bloodline was stained by centuries of continuous warfare along the border between England and Scotland, and later in the bitter settlement of England’s Ulster Plantation in Northern Ireland.” They settled the mountainous regions of today’s Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Within decades, they had spread to southern Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois; northern Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. In another generation, they were the dominant culture in parts of Texas, Arkansas, Kansas, Iowa, and Missouri. After the Civil War, they helped settle the Rocky Mountains and the Far West.

Scots-Irish culture, which Webb maintains is dominant among America’s working class, is one of “values-based combativeness, an insistent egalitarianism, and a refusal to be dominated from above, no matter what the cost.” Webb explains why the Scots-Irish “history has been allowed to melt into obscurity.” First, given their individuality and years of arrival, the Scots-Irish did not wish to be defined by their ethic identity. Second, “most literate observers” categorize Scots-Irish with settlers of New England and Virginia. Third, literary and academic types “lump the Scots-Irish in with the Irish themselves.”

In a politically correct world there are more reasons Scots-Irish are invisible. Because of the land they settled they are blamed for the Trouble in Ireland and for taking land from the Indians. Though few owned slaves, they are tarred with the brush of slavery, and, because they fought for the South, “they were the ‘racist’ soldiers of the Nazi-like Confederacy.” Plus, theirs is “a culture founded on guns” and “they are the very heartbeat of fundamentalist Christianity, which itself is largely derived from the harsh demands of Scottish Calvinism.”

Webb celebrates a culture that “shaped the emotional fabric of the nation, defined America’s unique form of populist democracy, created a distinctively American musical style, and, through the power of its insistence on personal honor and adamant individualism, has become the definition of ‘American’ that others gravitate toward....” Yet he does more.

Webb explains the divide, which began during the Vietnam War “along cultural and class lines,” between the political radicals and the “traditionalists who were fighting the war” and feared America was being destroyed. That battle continues today; it is a battle from which those of whom Webb writes will not shirk: “We were born fighting. And if the cause is right, we will never retreat.”

Livestock owners prepare for mandatory ID program

By Frank Priestley, President

Idaho recently received a $1.6 million grant to help set up a program that can trace livestock from birth to barn inside 48 hours.

Many livestock operators are anxious about government agencies setting up high-tech tracking programs that could compromise personal information. The old way of branding livestock has worked reasonably well for over 100 years. But in light of severe livestock marketing problems that occurred last year when a dairy cow of Canadian origin tested positive for bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) in Washington, a better program that livestock brands may or may not be part of, has become a necessity.

Consumers of American beef and other meats deserve to know where their meat comes from and that it has been rigorously inspected. In addition, many foreign markets including Japan and Korea have been closed to American beef since BSE was confirmed in December 2003. Japan demanded a reliable tracking program be in place before those export markets would be reopened. The Idaho State Department of Agriculture recently received $1.6 million to organize a program that satisfies those foreign customers.

One of the first steps will be to establish and document all livestock “premises” – any place where livestock are kept. A central database will be established and field trials will be conducted to collect animal movement information. Interstate and intrastate animal movement records will be tracked electronically from records collected at livestock auctions and processing plants. Livestock imported from Canada and Mexico will also be included.

It’s easy to see this will be no small undertaking.

We support the development of this program but it needs to protect the privacy of producers and the standards for electronic identification should be uniform. When complete this national system should be capable of providing support for animal disease control and eradication as well as enhancing food safety. In addition, the system should spread costs evenly and protect producers from liability for acts of others after livestock leave the farm. We urge livestock operators to cooperate to make the program workable for everyone involved from producer to consumer.

Become a part of Owyhee County history while helping preserve that history

The Owyhee County Historical Society has launched a campaign to raise $594,800 for a 6,400 square-foot addition to its complex at Murphy.

The OCHS is an educational institution dedicated to collecting, preserving, studying, and interpreting the artifacts and documents that tell the story of the people of the Owyhees.

Increased attendance and renewed focus on the education programs has prompted the need for additional learning, exhibit, research and public space. The project is designed to create opportunities in expanding programs, creating interactive exhibits and collaborating with corporations and organizations across the region. Most of the new and renovated structure will be dedicated to these needs.

The society is asking your help in this endeavor to more than double the size of its complex through several ways of participation: Commemorative brick program, planned giving, grants, donations, and memberships.
