“Circle of Life”

As I sit at my desk today, looking at my current batch of announcements. There are wedding and birth announcements (of course not for the same couple!) as well as announcements for high school and college graduation. All of these are from former students who are still excited to share their life milestones with all of us at Rimrock.

I have known almost all of you since you were born. I have been your teacher and most recently your principal. All of you have chartered very separate and different paths to reach graduation. Some of you have worked every waking moment to reach perfection in your grades as well as in all of your extra-curricular activities. Some of you have enjoyed the social aspects of school and achieved decent grades as long as doing so didn't stress you too much. Then there are those of you who have had issues with school since you first met your kindergarten teacher! You all have had lots of people helping and encouraging and tracking you to help you to get that diploma. And here you are, all ready for graduation at the same time and meeting the same requirements.

Now you are all prepared to take the next step. For some of you it will be marriage and work, for some of you it will be a trade school, for some of you it will be a 4-year program, for some of you it will be the military, and some of you are going to test the waters in many different jobs before deciding where your career path will take you. Each one of these paths offers many challenges. You are all embarking on a great adventure no matter what you choose to do. You will experience independence and find that the education and skills you received at Rimrock have prepared you for all facets of life. You will also find that just maybe your parents did know something! You are now the one that will determine how you are going to achieve the goals you have set for yourself. You will always have the power to adjust your life by making decisions to change something no matter what your age. You can do whatever it is you want to do and shouldn't let anyone convince you that you can't achieve.

I believe that your possibilities are endless, that you all have been gifted with talents and potential to achieve great things. You are in the driver's seat. We have done our job; now we will cheer you on from afar, hoping for the best for you. I will be hoping that when those wedding, birth and graduation announcements start coming, you have prepared yourself to advance to this next stage in the circle of life. Also we hope that you can be proud of yourself and your achievement and that you have become the responsible, respectful, contributing member of society that we worked so hard for you to become. Also, remember to tell your parents “thank you” as they have worked very hard to get to celebrate this special time with you!

On behalf of the entire faculty and staff of Rimrock Jr./Sr. High, I wish all of you congratulations and best wishes for a wonderful future.

To the senior class of Jordan Valley High School

by Michael B. Sessions Ed.D.
Superintendent/Principal

Let me congratulate you on earning your high school diploma.

I am sure you will be able to look back at your years in the Jordan Valley Schools as pleasurable as well as valuable. Your high school diploma will always be valuable to you.

Emerson said, “The reward of a thing well done is to have done it.” I hope that your work at Jordan Valley was well done, that you will be rewarded for that work, that you never regret your time here, and that you remember we at your school remain here to serve you and yours; even after you graduate.

Many of you are extremely bright, and there is not one of you that cannot reach high levels of achievement in any vocation or profession you might choose. We look for great things from the class of 2005.

I am, personally, pleased to have met you, and I am pleased to have served as your principal during your senior year. From all of us here at the school; we wish you well and love you.

To the graduating class at Marsing High School

Charles V. Stella, Principal

First I want to congratulate all of you on what you have achieved over the last four years. Because of you, Marsing High has been a School of Merit for the last four out of five years. It must have been the way all of you took on the many challenges of everyday schooling.

If you can remember back to when you were freshmen, and how you thought that you would never get through the years to graduation. Well you did it and in a very positive way. I want to congratulate each of you on your success at Marsing High School. I have enjoyed watching you grow through the years into young adults. You are and will be a very special class for me because we went through all the good and bad times together. I wish you the best of luck in the future.

“The Sky's The Limit”

Who said “The Sky's The Limit” anyway? How can we know a limit is truly a limit unless we test its edges with all our might and resources? Also isn't it just as important to know when we haven't gone far enough? The last question is “What does it mean to go too far?”

The answer to the first question is a writer who sought to create a world seen through kinder more understanding eyes. The original phrase was this “No Limits But The Sky” which is more positive than how it appears in modern usage: “The Sky's The Limit.” Ask yourself “How do I see the world around me?” Or maybe you should ask how does the world see me?

The second question facing you as you leave high school is: How can we know our limits unless we test them? Surprising enough, we can't. It is only through testing, re-testing, and pushing against the limits that we can find our individual boundaries. If we didn't test our limits, we would never learn to walk, we would never grow physically, emotionally or mentally. So: the sky is not the limit but endless possibilities, and it is up to you to determine how you perceive and impose limits where none exist. If you do not test the limits of your perceptions and abilities, you will never know what lies beyond.

The third question: How do we know when we haven't gone far enough? For the past four years of high school you have been committed, hard working students. Isn't that far enough to go? Isn't that more than far enough? Isn't a high school diploma enough? No! If you do not engage in work for which you have a real passion, you have not gone far enough. If you do not have a clear sense of direction and meaning in your life, you have not gone far enough. If you do not understand that your actions and words can have a lasting impact on another person, you have not gone far enough. If you do not hope and strive to make a positive difference in the world around, you have not gone far enough. If you are content with your life and do not look to how you can become a better person, you are not going far enough. If you have not wholly loved another person and recognize the good in those around us, then you have not gone far enough. Life is too short and too precious not to live it with passion and pursue it with zeal.

The last question: What does it mean to go too far? Have we gone too far if we try something new that fails? No. On the contrary, if we never fail, we can be sure we aren't going far enough. You have to be willing to risk for the sake of change and growth. You have to be willing to stand up and speak out even when your ideas are unpopular.

On behalf of the staff and myself, I wish each and every one of you the happiness of a productive life, the respect of your fellow human beings, and the love of your family and friends. Reach to the sky - the future is yours.

The best of luck and congratulations to the Class of 2005
