On the edge of common sense

Tough vs. strong

There is a difference between being tough and being strong. A 600-pound corriente roping steer is tough; a 2,000-pound Angus bull is strong.

Wrestling calves this spring at a branding, there were several young men there to help flank calves. They were all good boys and came to lend a hand. The first hour when they were fresh, it was inspiring to watch those stout young men overpower the calves.

As the morning wore on, they began wearin’ down. Moving slower, stepping back, leaning on the fence, breathing heavily and lookin’ for a break. That’s when the tough ones took the lead. Steady, balanced, using leverage, no wasted motion, sure-handed. That’s how we finished the day.

We see examples around us all the time in sports, in couples we know, and in folks we work with.

There is a difference between being fast and being quick. A Boeing 747 is fast; a fruit bat is quick. A Doberman is fast; a coyote is quick. George Foreman was fast; Muhammad Ali was quick. Would you rather be in a quick draw contest with a 4-minute miler or a mandolin player?

Fast people are handy to send after things, to deliver the mail and to walk dogs. Quick people are good at catching houseflies, stealing second base and dealing cards.

There is a difference between being intelligent and being smart. An intelligent person can invent a complicated computer program that explains how to install an air conditioning unit in an Eskimo’s igloo at Prudhoe Bay. A smart person can sell it to them. An intelligent person knows how many Brussels sprouts fulfill the average daily requirement of vitamin E. A smart person knows nobody eats them! An intelligent person comprehends precisely the amount of UV rays per minute required to achieve a perfect tan without burning. A smart person wears sun block!

The world is made up of the tough and the strong, the quick and the fast, the intelligent and the smart. Not to mention the idealistic and the pragmatic, the over-confident and the cautious, the ready and the hesitant, the blinded and the blind, the patsy and the hard sell, the forgiving and the grudge holders, the bashful and the watchful, and, of course, the wordy and the taciturn.

We are all in there somewhere, in various degrees. I like to think of myself as a coyote who likes Brussels sprouts but who gets caught stealing second base!

Letters to the editor

Fair gives us hope for future

All year we watch the news on TV and read the headlines of the daily newspapers telling us what is wrong with our society, and we come to believe the end of our civilization is just around the corner.

Then for one week in August each year we get to go to the Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo. Where else can you see two little girls, each sporting a ponytail, walking along holding each other’s hand? Where can you see two little boys carrying a very large bucket half-full of water between them and in the free hand of one boy he is holding the lead rope which has a sheep on the other end?

We walk a little further and see a 1,200-pound steer in the show ring with a 70-pound exhibitor on the lead rope and the mother of the exhibitor is on the end of the same lead rope.

We also saw a 240-pound pig being driven (followed) by a little boy who could barely see over the top of the pig.

These children are the fortunate ones in society. Most children never have these opportunities.

Not important ... but possibly of interest

Three days each week, my partner in life picks up our granddaughter at a local daycare and brings her to our home. Gracie stays with us until her mom gets off work and picks her up — usually about 6 p.m. Therefore, Gracie usually eats dinner with us.

Last week, we were eating dinner but things weren’t going well. Grace, who apparently wasn’t very hungry, was “lolly gagging” around — spending most of her time smearing food on herself, her high chair and everything else within reach, rather than eating.

Grace is two months into her 2s now, and she is a very normal 2-year-old. She is constantly testing her boundaries. If she were to find a frog, the last thing you should tell her is “Don’t pick up the frog!” And you certainly wouldn’t want to warn her “Don’t lick the frog!” Whenever I tell her not to do something, she does whatever I told her not to do — which she probably would have never thought of doing if I hadn’t mentioned it in the first place.

If you have raised children and/or have grandchildren, the above statement probably makes perfect sense. If you plan to have a family someday, you will not understand it until you tell your child “Don’t lick the frog!”

So, when Gracie made a mess instead of eating, my mate decided it was time to lay down the law. After wiping the food smears off the furniture and the kid, she removed Grace from the chair and told her to go play if she wasn’t going to eat. Then she sat down to finish her dinner.

Like a lot of families nowadays, we usually don’t eat at the real dining table. When there’s just two of us, we eat at the kitchen counter, seated on bar stools that are quite a bit taller than a regular chair. True to the reverse thinking of a normal 2-year-old, the minute she was dismissed, Grace ran over to Grandma, who had resumed eating at the counter, started dancing around, making fussing sounds, her arms outstretched, pleading “Up! Up! Hold you, Grandma!” In the past, in such situations, Grandma had allowed Grace to sit on her lap and eat from her plate.

“No Grace,” said my partner, holding firm. “Grandma is eating. When I’m finished, I’ll hold you.”

Gracie’s pleadings and Grandma’s refusals continued, as I carried some dishes over to the sink.

I had just started washing the dishes when Grace started yelling, “Grandpa! Grandpa! Help me! Help me!” Thinking she must have caught her head between the stool legs, or something of that sort, I stopped washing and walked around the end of the counter to where my mate was still eating. Grace was perfectly fine — just grunting and fussing as she tried to shinny up the leg of my partner’s stool.

“What do you want Grandpa to help you with?” I asked the struggling angel. She looked over at me and stopped climbing for a minute.

“Grandpa,” she said. “HELP ME WITH GRANDMA!”

At the moment Grace made her exasperated demand, Grandma had a piece of watermelon in her mouth. She sort of got caught between choking on it or spitting it across the room.

I considered trying to explain to Grace that I wasn’t likely to be much help because on numerous occasions in the past 38 years I’ve wished I had someone to HELP ME change Grandma’s mind.

Prior to the incident, Grace often came to me when she needed help with something — apparently believing her grandpa could fix just about anything. Now she usually looks at me, then runs over and asks Grandma to lend her a hand. She’s figured out where the ultimate power lies.

Our economy

Trade with Asia could expand Idaho ag’s reach

Idahoans have a rich history of confronting change head on. We’re the ones in control, pulling the levers and dictating our future.

This has always been the story of agriculture in Idaho. At the beginning of the 20th century, the pioneers who settled some of the rugged sagebrush country of this state knew in their hearts they could turn the desert into the most valuable farmland in the world. They did it with ingenuity, perseverance and homegrown determination.

We’re still the creative, hardworking people we always were, but we’ve adapted to a very different marketplace than what existed 100 years ago.

Our farms and ranches are now global businesses with customers throughout the world.

Today’s Idaho farmer understands the need to be a player on the world stage. He’s savvy about the information-driven world in which we live. He understands that to be competitive, he must engage in a way his forefathers did not. That’s why we at the Idaho State Department of Agriculture have so much time and energy invested in international trade. It’s why we work closely with the governor and the agriculture community to build trade partnerships overseas.

Agriculture is a venture that is in transition throughout the world. We don’t know what farming and ranching will look like in five, 10 or 25 years. Developments in biotechnology may change how food is grown. Scientists are continually searching for ways to improve the quantity, quality and health benefits of our crops. Researchers are turning to Idaho farmers to not only feed the nation but also provide clean, sustainable fuel.

Just 10 years ago, no one could have imagined Idaho would have a $4.4 billion food industry, a growing economic sector for the state.

But we know this: The world will always demand good, quality agricultural products, and that demand will only grow larger during the next five decades. We can’t consume everything we produce — and 95 percent of the world’s population is outside the U.S.

During our recent trade mission to Asia, we found that people — from Tokyo to Shanghai to Taipei — want the commodities that we produce in Idaho. We have the best beef, the best wheat, the best potatoes anywhere. In October, we’ll hit the road again to Mexico with a strong story to tell about Idaho agriculture.

But it’s not enough that we sit back and wait for destiny to intervene and for these markets to come to us. We must go to them. We must invest in marketing and trade and get the word out about what we have to offer, build new relationships and maintain old friendships. Seven years ago, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne had the foresight to recognize the need to pursue relationships with trade partners overseas. That investment is paying off dividends today.

At a recent press conference in the governor’s office, state Sen. Dean Cameron made an important observation: There are three main ways to balance a state budget. 1) We can raise revenue. 2) We can cut services. 3) We can look for ways to expand economic opportunity in Idaho. These trade missions to Asia and Mexico represent a positive, smart way to boost the state’s economy.

New jobs don’t just happen. We have to go out and work for them. Agriculture is one place we can make that happen. Our products can compete in these emerging markets.

Idaho already has a thriving agricultural sector. With the same gusto of the pioneers who settled the western frontier that Idaho once was, we’ll make Idaho agriculture even stronger.

— Pat Takasugi is the director of the Idaho State Department of Agriculture and continues to farm more than 1,400 irrigated row crop acres of alfalfa seed, onions, wheat, pea seed, grass seed and garden bean seed near Wilder and Homedale.

Jaycees install one lighted pole

Homedale Jaycess erected one pole and installed lights on it Sunday at the athletic field adjacent to the Homedale fairgrounds, according to President Garland Carson. The pole will furnish lighting for the parking area during the Owyhee county fair.

The lighting fixtures on this pole were donated by George Johnstone, Homedale, as a memorial to his brother Jim, deceased.

John Batt’s pole wrecker was used to put up the 90 foot pole, which stands 80 feet in the air and is buried 10 feet in the ground. The pole was wired Tuesday.

Fairgrounds ready for 3-day county fair starting today

The tempo of activity and excitement at the Owyhee county fair grounds in northwest Homedale reached its peak this morning (Thursday) with the opening of the three-day county fair.

The banging of hammers on exhibit and concession booths has given way to the excited chatter and laughter of fair crowds and the beat of carnival music. The exhibit halls have blossomed with colorful displays and the stock barns are filled. Rows of colored pennants between the buildings lend a festive air to the proceedings.

“This promises to be the largest and best fair Owyhee county has ever had,” declared Harold McJunkin, secretary-manager of the event, who with Ruth Burton, clerk, has been registering livestock and exhibits.

“Entries have come from Weiser to Boise and all the area between,” Mr. McJunkin said.

Buildings added.

A new commercial building and lavatories have been added this year. The commercial hall is 30x80 and will accommodate 20 display booths. The lavatory building is of cinder block construction, modern and spacious, and is centrally located.

Besides the new building, the fairgrounds also has two exhibit halls, each 24x32 feet. They contain the community, agricultural, open, educational, 4-H, needle work, flowers and miscellaneous booths. Two 30x120 foot barns accommodate 90 head of stock each.

Besides the six buildings and several lean-tos, the fairgrounds also has a stock scales and facilities for watering livestock.

Margaret Uria leads queen race

According to scores handed in Tuesday evening to Vic Uria, Margaret Uria is now in the lead for fair queen with 200 ticket sales. Judy Dobbin, Marsing, is a close second with 185.

Runners-up are Nancy Parker, 113; Linda Arnold, Wilson, 11; Patty Bergeson, 105; and colleen Tolmie, 75. Bonnie Scott, who was third last week with 144 was not available for her score.

The contest will close at 7 p.m. Friday when all the candidates will meet at the Gem Irrigation office.

The queen will be crowned during the parade Saturday by Major General John E. Walsh of the Idaho National Guard. She will lead the parade, followed by her court, all riding in convertibles.

Bid accepted for servicing buses

The bid submitted August 8 to the school board by Owyhee Motor sales for oil, gas and grease jobs for school buses was accepted for one year at a special meeting held Tuesday, August 9 by the school board.

Walt Adams was hired by the board as foreman of bus operations.

Charles Zollinger, superintendent of schools, was instructed to obtain information a premium for a blanket surety bond to cover the clerk-treasurer, three principals, superintendent, and the hot lunch chairman.

TO THE READERS OF THE AVALANCHE:

With this issue our connection with the Owyhee Avalanche wholly ceases. The change of proprietors is purely a business one — other parties wishing to buy at our own price.

We have spent two full years in the business of publishing a newspaper in Owyhee, and the very nature of the work compelled a careful acquaintance with every mine, and almost every tunnel and shaft in this mining district, and our belief, formed thereby, that is possessed many veins of gold and silver quartz of extraordinary richness if firm and weekly strengthened.

Our chief aim at the outset was to inform the outside world of the mineral wealth of Owyhee, and the files of the leading mining and news journals in California, Oregon and New York will prove that we have, in a reasonable degree, succeeded. Vast improvements in our lines of communication have received valuable aid from us. We have, each week, presented our readers with a careful collection of local items, and a summary of news from the other Idaho journals. In looking back over the management and matter of the Avalanche, we fin but little that we would care to change.

Our successors are men who combine the essential merits of practicalness, industry and intelligence. The public can rest assured that they will represent the interests of this section of Idaho, and everything that pays tribute to it, in a manner advantageous to the common welfare and with credit to themselves. A paper faithfully devoted to local affairs is of incalculable value to the community in which it is published, and the people can expend a portion of their means no more judiciously than by liberally sustaining their local press.

In conclusion, we will say that our patrons have never been annoyed by editorial complains of any kind, nor by duns for cash due or importunities to lend up additional aid; nor will we at the close make an exception to our former course. We have an advertisement in this paper which means what it says and to which we direct attention.

With these remarks and a sincere desire that Owyhee will enrich her citizens and justly acquire the position in the mining work that Virginia and Gold Hill, in Nevada, now do, we respectfully bid our readers an editorial adieu.

JNO. & JOS. Wasson.

EASTERN DATES to the 9th came to hand by yesterday’s mail. Election returns who an increased Radical majority in Tennessee, and in Kentucky the Democratic Governor is elected by a majority of over 45,000. The President has suspended the official relations of Secretary Stanton with the Cabinet. Stanton declines to resign until the next session of Congress. The Indians have cut the telegraph and captured trains on the plains – and but little news was received this week.

THE WHISKY. We started, a few weeks ago, that five and one-half tuns of ore from this mine yielded near a thousand dollars, and the statement should have been nearly fourteen hundred. Since the last crushing, the proprietors of the mine have timbered up the main shaft in solid style, and are now proceeding downwards with the purpose of giving the mine proper form and system, and make it pay greater profits in proportion to the labor bestowed upon it.

A DAY OR TWO ago we observed several freight teams formed in line in front of the Post office. Out of curiosity we approached and discovered innumerable boxes and bundles heaped up on the sidewalk and in the house. We asked Clemmens what he had there? He answered, “Everything!” and from appearances we judge he has the best stock of books, stationery &c., of all kinds, that ever came into Owyhee.

OUR FRIEND John Grete has a notice in another column. We are sorry that John is so much “under the weather” as to occasion him to close Music hall for a short time, for his smiling “phiz” will be missed; and besides he has such a way of concocting beverages behind the bar that everybody likes him, and will think the time of his retirement long.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL children are in a course of training under their teachers for public exhibition about September 1st. the teachers and pupils are manifesting much interest and are determined to make the occasion one of real entertainment. A programme of the exercises will be published in due time.

THE DEMOCRACY of Ada County have elected our old friend and brother typo, Jud. Boyakin, to the grane and responsible position of Probate Judge. Well done, Jud; we always were aware that you had “large expectations.” Continue to ascend the ladder of fame and you will never be a re-Probate Judge.

ALL PERSONS wishing teeth extracted, inserted or filled in good shape, visit Dr. Billings immediately. He goes to Boise City in a few days.

WEATHER has been delightful during the past week. Sunshine most of the time with refreshing breezes, and neither too hot nor too cold.

IN REFERENCE to the above we are happy to say that we enter upon the proprietorship of the Owyhee Avalanche in full confidence in the uninterrupted propriety of Idaho Territory and especially of Owyhee County.

It will be our earnest endeavor to convey to the readers of the Avalanche the earliest reliable intelligence, of whatever of importance that transpires, whether local or foreign. We will regularly and particularly present our readers with a correct summary of local news; and shall, also, record a faithful, and impartial history of the progress of the various mines.

The patronage already granted the Avalanche, although of only two years duration, speaks well for its favor with the public; no effort on our part shall be spared to sustain the character it has secured, and make it worthy of Owyhee County, which at no distant day, is destined to be the foremost on wealth and importance, and the gateway to Idaho Territory.

The Owyhee Avalanche will be conducted on purely independent principles. In our discussion of political parties and public men, we shall confine ourselves within the limits of legitimate criticism, dealing out even handed justice to all, without surrendering our independence of opinion, or engaging in portion strife.

With this general statement we send forth No. 1, Vol. 3, of the Owyhee Avalanche.

Hoping to receive a liberal share of public patronage, we subscribe ourselves.

W.J. Hill.

H.W. Millard.

SLY THIEVES. We are informed by a gentleman from Boonville that the store recently occupied by Caldwell & Son in that burn was entered rather burglariously on last Monday evening and robbed of goods to the amount of $150 belonging to Philip Stich, besides a watch and revolver belonging to Caldwell. The thief, or more probable the thieves, effected an entrance through a window in an adjoining butcher shop, and in so doing they passed over a sleeping Celestial beneath the window without waking him. They then passed into the store through another window, selected what they wanted, opened another window and gained the street unmolested. The burglars were very sly and apparently used to the business. In an adjoining room were three men and a bulldog, who knew nothing of the robbery until the next morning.

Parties are in search of the thieves, but up to the present time they have been unsuccessful.

An illustration featuring a newspaper on the left with the word "CLASSIFIEDS" in large, bold, red letters. Below the title, there are several blue rectangular boxes, some containing faint line drawings of cars. To the right of the newspaper is a two-story house with a green gabled roof, beige siding, and white trim around the windows and door. The house has a central front door with a small porch and two large windows with arched tops. The entire scene is set against a white background with a red circular shape partially visible behind the newspaper.

Livestock costume contest lightens mood

Livestock dress-up

After the livestock sale on Saturday, 4-H and FFA members took some time to relax by dressing up their animals in “people” clothing and parading around the arena. This page of photos is a highlight of a few of the contestants in the “beauty” contest.
