VOLUME 21, NUMBER 43

HOMEDALE, OWYHEE COUNTY, IDAHO

SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS

Beet season begins

Sugar beets are harvested from a field off Market Road south of Homedale on Friday. Amalgamated Sugar Co. has begun the winter campaign at its Nampa plant, and sugar beet farmers in Owyhee County are working diligently to get truckloads of beets into the factory for processing.

Election ballot gains clarity

The cities of Homedale and Marsing will hold elections for city council seats, but as of Monday, no one had filed as write-in candidates for the City of Grand View. The Gem Irrigation District also will hold an election on Nov. 8 for one of its two district elections.

Write-in candidates had until 5 p.m. Tuesday to declare candidacy, but those results were not available at press time.

The Marsing City Council incumbents, Rob Howarth and Tony Purtell, did not file for another term, but LeRoy H. Peck, Soila Contreras, Teresa Martinat and Rick Sherrow will campaign for two four-year seats.

In Homedale, the City Council seats held by Dave Downum, Cindy Sims and Kevin Barlow are up for election with Downum being the only incumbent to file. Tim Downing and Aaron Tines also will campaign for one of the city's two four-year terms. Bill Page is the only candidate for the two-year term.

Wilke CAFO permit receives approval from P & Z board

Owyhee County Planning and Zoning Commission voted to approve a conditional use permit for Wilke Farms with special conditions, which will be addressed in a statement of findings of fact on Nov. 23.

PandZ Administrator Kay Kelly issued a statement saying that the commission approved the permit based on the applicant's testimony and to the Odor Management and Pest Control Plans, the Nutrient Management Plan presented to the Commission, compliance with the Settlement Agreement between Helen Kettle and the Applicant and to compliance with local, state and federal laws.

"The Commission directed the Administrator to work with counsel to complete the decision document with findings of fact, conclusions and special conditions to support the decision so that the written decision can be issued on Nov. 23," Kelly stated.

Wilke Farms applied for a conditional use permit for operation of a confined animal feeding operation, with up to 9,000 animals to be involved. The Planning and Zoning Commission took the case under advisement in order to study the testimony of several witnesses and the numerous documents admitted into evidence.

Homedale scares up safe Halloween for kids

Everything is in place for Homedale's second annual Safe-N-Sane Halloween Celebration, and there is a new fun twist this year.

As was the case last year, businesses will open their doors to trick-or-treaters from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Monday. Participating businesses will be signified with orange Jack O'Lanterns on their storefronts. The celebration is open to children 12 and younger.

Homedale City Clerk Susan Mansisidor, who devised the Halloween idea last year, said more than 300 children turned out for the 2004 celebration.

A full list of participating businesses will be available at City Hall on Monday.

Greater good

Homedale Middle School students DD Gardner, left, and Zachary Lowder, right, and Zachary's mom, Donna, pose with a makeshift check outside the school. The check symbolizes a $406.25 donation DD and Zachary will makee after their fund-raising drive for the victims of Hurricane Katrina. Last month, the two sixth-graders put together a charity drive with donation cans placed around town.

HMS Katrina relief effort collects $400

Homedale Middle School sixth-graders DD Gardner and Zachary Lowder wanted to get involved in something worthwhile, so they decided to raise money to help victims of Hurricane Katrina. “Our teacher (Pat Warren) told us to get together and figure something out,” Zachary said. The two 11-year-olds came up with the idea of placing donation buckets in classrooms at the school, and Zachary’s mother, Donna, also convinced Homedale businesses to place buckets. The result of a two-week drive in September was $406.25, which DD and Zachary will present to the Red Cross. “They were jazzed,” Donna Lowder said of how the children reacted to such a successful charity drive. “It was good to see kids help out like that, too.” About $265 of the total amount came from the community donation buckets. The rest of the money was raised through pocket change chipped in by Zachary and DD’s fellow middle school students. “I was thinking we’d get about $100, but not this much,” DD said. DD and Zachary don’t plan to let her civic-mindedness end with helping the Katrina victims. DD already is working on an elaborate survey to convince school leaders to place school supplies in the campus store.

One deer season ends, but youth still can hunt in limited Owyhee area

The two-point buck deer hunting season in Idaho Fish and Game Units 40 and 41 ended Sunday, but junior hunters still have an opportunity to participate in the quest for deer until Nov. 24 in a limited portion of the two units. The hunt restrictions go beyond geography, too. The youth hunt, which ends Nov. 24, is doe-only. Within C.J. Strike Wildlife Management Area, hunters can use only short-range weapons, such as muzzle-loader, shotgun with slugs or buckshot, or archery equipment, according to Jon Rachael, a regional wildlife manager with the Department of Fish and Game’s Southwest Region office headquartered in Nampa. Those restrictions don’t apply outside of the wildlife management area, though. Rachael said the extension of the youth hunt until Nov. 24 serves a purpose beyond allowing junior hunters to enjoy the thrill of the chase. “We’re trying to address some long-term problems that some landowners have had with late-season depredation of crops, especially corn and alfalfa,” Rachael said. The Fish and Game representative said that this is the time of year that many deer meander into the lower country and river bottom area to forage. The youth hunt is open to anyone ages 12 to 17 with a junior hunting license. No adult hunters are allowed to take does as of the closing date on the season last Sunday, Rachael said. The area open to the youth hunt is a very specific region. The boundary of the area starts at the Oregon border on the Snake River and goes upstream to C.J. Strike Dam Road. The boundary then heads south on C.J. Strike Dam Road to Highway 78 at Rimrock High School, where it runs east along Highway 78 to Highway 51. The boundary then goes south on Highway 51 to Shoofly Cut-off Road and then west on Shoofly Cut-off Road to Mudflat Road. From Mudflat, it moves north to Highway 78 then continues west along the highway to the powerline that crosses the Snake River about 3 miles south of the Walter’s Ferry Bridge at the 22.5 mile marker. From there, the boundary goes west along the powerline to the Oregon border to the Snake River. A map of the boundaries in both Units 40 and 41 is available on the Internet at <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/ifwis/huntplanner/hunt.aspx?ID=5685> For more information any hunts, consult the Fish and Game’s 2005 big game hunting rules handbook.

Hunters receive minor injuries in recent spate of accidents

Owyhee County Sheriff Gary Aman said two bird hunters received minor injuries in hunting accidents in the past two weeks in the county. He said luckily, both hunters were not seriously injured, but the potential is there for a major incident. On Oct. 15, opening day of pheasant season, Nampa Police Department reported that Andy Glen, of Nampa, had sustained an accidental gun shot would in his back while bird hunting near Jump Creek. Aman said Glen received minor injuries and went to the hospital on his own. On Oct. 23, Michael Caldon of Nampa was taken to a Nampa Hospital with a wound to his hand. Caldon also went to the hospital on his own and was treated and released. On the opening day of deer season in Canyon County, a Meridian man was shot in the back. The incident serves as a reminder to hunters about the importance of wearing hunter orange clothing in the field, a spokesman from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game said. Thomas Link was hunting along the Boise River in Canyon County on opening day of deer hunting season. In the past 10 years the Idaho Department of Fish and Game has documented 79 hunters who were injured by firearms. In 10 of those cases, the victim died. Of those fatalities only one victim was known to be wearing orange while three were wearing camouflage, and one was wearing brown. The type of clothing worn by the remaining five is unknown. Three people who shot and killed other hunters said they thought they were shooting at a game animal. Idaho state law does not require hunters to wear orange, but Fish and Game Hunter Education Coordinator Ron Fritz strongly recommends it. “The best thing hunters can do to avoid accidents like this is to wear hunter orange” Fritz said “It’s a simple way for hunters to say, ‘Hey, I’m not a deer.’ ” Fritz went on to say that during the hunting season, anyone going into an open hunting area should dress to be seen. “Hikers, mountain bikers, and anyone else going into the back country during hunting season should wear hunter orange,” he said. That goes for animals as well. Fritz suggests everything from horses to dogs be adorned in something that is bright orange during the hunting season.

Homedale sets sights on cleaning crowded alleyways

In the continuing campaign to spruce up the city, Homedale officials announced last week that they will begin an “Alley Cleanup” campaign.

“The alleys are public right of way and need to be unblocked not only for garbage removal, but more importantly for safety,” Homedale City Clerk Susan Mansisidor said. “Winter will be upon us before we know it, with a possible increase in fire hazard from the use of heating equipment and Christmas lights.”

Mansisidor said residents are allowed to place their garbage cans in the alleys, but nothing else.

Residents have two weeks from today to clean up the alleys before the city begins code enforcement patrols and issuing citations.

“The alley is not a personal storage or dumping ground,” Mansisidor said.

The city clerk said that most residents have responded favorably to previous attempts to rid the city streets of garbage, weeds, broken-down vehicles and discarded furniture and appliances. The alley cleanup is an extension of the effort.

“This is an attempt to clean Homedale up and make our citizens proud of where they live,” she said.

116th BCT brass asks families to be patient

Guard troops must go through demobilization before coming home

116th Brigade Combat Team leadership is asking for patience and continued support from families and loved ones through the final phase of the BCT’s nearly 18-month deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom III.

Recent reports that some 116th BCT elements may be arriving back to their Fort Lewis, Wash., demobilization station as early as this week have caused some to conclude that their loved ones will be home within a week or two, a perception that not only is inaccurate, but could cause unnecessary anxiety.

“Demobilization is the last hurdle the families will have to endure before their loved ones return home,” said 116th BCT Executive Officer Lt. Col. Robert Lytle. “It is very important for each family member to understand that this is a very deliberate, very methodical and very necessary process.”

Because Fort Lewis is only a few hours’ drive from many 116th BCT soldiers’ homes, families may be tempted to come and visit during demobilization. 116th BCT leadership discourages this, pointing out that the more focused the soldiers are on getting through the process, the sooner it will end and they can go home.

“The focus of the demobilization station is to ensure soldiers are taken care of medically, financially and legally before being released from active duty,” Lytle said. “We ask loved ones to let us focus on that mission so we can get every soldier home as soon as possible, equipped for reintegration into their normal lives.”

According to Lytle, the unit is scheduled to leave Iraq in “phased military movement” — meaning that not everyone will leave at once.

“We send what we call a ‘Torch’ and an ‘ADVON’ group of soldiers whose mission is to prepare the way for the rest of the unit,” he said. “Our objective is to expedite the most timely return of our soldiers. The focus is to get them through as rapidly as possible, while ensuring they have resolved any medical, legal or Army pay issues.”

Because 116th BCT soldiers have been deployed to a combat zone, they are now eligible for federal veterans’ benefits, including education assistance, home loans and reduced-cost health insurance. They are also eligible for a variety of other benefits from state, local or private sources.

“Part of what we do at the demob station is brief soldiers on new benefits available to them,” Lytle said. “It’s important that each soldier be aware of anything that might benefit themselves or their family.”

The 116th BCT is comprised of headquarters and staff sections, two armor battalions, a mechanized infantry battalion, a support battalion, a field artillery battalion, an engineer battalion, and various intelligence, signal and specialized units. The 116th BCT is one of several Army National Guard units deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom III.

Fourth dead cow connected to shooting

The Owyhee County Sheriff's Office and a county rancher still are looking for information about the shooting of cattle earlier this month on Silver City Road.

Three cows were discovered shot dead on the road two weeks ago. A fourth cow was found dead several days later, also with a bullet in it.

The Owyhee County Sheriff's Office, Owyhee Cattlemen's Association and the victimized rancher of the cattle are offering a $4,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons responsible for the shooting.

With the discovery of the fourth cow, the loss of property is valued at more than $5,000.

Sheriff Gary Aman said suspects are being sought on charges of felony malicious injury to property.

"People wonder why the local ranchers are locking up their private property and not letting access to the public," Aman said, referring to Access Yes participation opening private land for hunting.

Aman said that the unidentified rancher participates in the Access Yes program.

Aman said the cattle were shot with a 30-06 caliber rifle and that the brass and one bullet recovered were in good enough condition to run ballistic tests.

Anyone with information on the Silver City Road shooting can call the Owyhee County Sheriff's Office at (208) 495-1154.

Homedale Elementary honored

Homedale Elementary School is among six schools in Southwest Idaho recently honored by the state board of education for their performance in meeting academic goals in the past two years.

Homedale Elementary joined Melba High School and Melba Middle School, South Middle School in Nampa, Mill Creek Elementary School in Middleton and Notus Junior-Senior High School on a list honored by the Idaho State Board of Education last week for progress on the spring 2004 and 2005 Idaho

Standard Achievement Tests.

"On behalf of the State Board of Education, I applaud the hard work our schools are doing to ensure every child learns," Laird Stone, vice president of the State Board of Education, said in a statement released last week.

Each of the schools received commendations for additional yearly growth. To be eligible, a school must increase the percent of proficient or advanced students by at least 10 percent in either reading or math in any subgroup.

Highway cleanup crew finds $13,000 check

Highway cleanup is a common community service, but a recent sprucing up of a stretch of Highway 55 between Hoskins Road and the Snake River also helped out two companies in Utah.

Francisqa Raphino and Dezarae Henman, two girls from Nampa's Syringa House, found a check worth more than $13,000 while helping the Canyon County Sunrise Rotary Club clean up Highway 55 on Oct. 15.

The check was found in the Sunnyslope region near Ste. Chapelle Winery, according to Rotarian Brett Tolmie, a former Homedale resident.

The check for $13,760.32 written by one Utah firm and made payable to another company from that state was drawn on a Zions Bank account. Raphino called the Nampa branch, and the check was returned to bank branch manager and vice president Victor Barrera at the branch Tuesday.

"I told them, 'Thank you for being honest,'" Barrera said.

Barrera said that if the check had fallen into the wrong hands, a counterfeiter easily could have fleeced the businesses of their funds. He added the bank gave the girls gifts to show their gratitude for the honesty.

"For them to follow through with doing something the right way, it's a really good thing," Tolmie said.

Tolmie said the club recently enrolled in the Idaho Transportation Department's Adopt-a-Highway program and members are responsible for cleaning up that stretch of Highway 55 twice a year.

Six girls from Syringa House were involved in the project. Linda Smith, the director of the girls home in Nampa, is a Rotarian.

Tolmie said the club historically has had members from Owyhee County. Right now, though, there are no county residents on the membership rolls, although Tolmie and Chris Batt both grew up in Homedale as did former member Chris VanSlyke.

The Rotarians are always on the lookout for new members and new community service opportunities — such as benefit breakfasts to which children sell tickets as fund-raisers for their schools, Tolmie said.

For more information on the Rotarians, call Tolmie at 465-3303.

Learning about nature

Students from Marsing Elementary School took part in a harvest festival last Thursday to celebrate the benefits of after-school programs as part of more than 7,000 National Lights On! rallies held across the nation. Top: Judith McShane from the University of Idaho Owyhee County Extension Office shows students the critters they can find in compost. Right: Two Marsing Elementary students study plant foliage with a magnifying glass looking for organisms.

After-school program rallies for National Lights On!

Marsing celebration spotlights need for after-school programs

by Bridget Morrisroe-Aman

Last Thursday at Marsing Elementary School, more than 100 children, parents, teachers and community leaders joined a Lights On After-school rally — one of 7,000 such events held across the nation to emphasize the importance of offering after-school programs in communities.

At the the Harvest Celebration in Marsing, students enjoyed several activities set up at different areas around the school that emphasized academic, life enrichment, and recreational areas of learning.

There was an activity using 4-H Global Positioning System devices, a Green Tomato Toss, Potato Bowling, and a Garden Exploration booth with magnifying glasses for the kids to observe plants, soil and insects.

The students, parents and teachers enjoyed pizza, cookies, soft drinks, along with salsa and chips with vegetables harvested from the Marsing Community Garden.

Youth in the 4-H after-school and summer activities planted the produce in May and June, to harvest this fall. The community garden is a product of a collaboration started by 4-H after-school staff and Marsing FFA teacher Jason Nettleton.

All grades from kindergarten to fifth grade were able to enjoy all the activities.

A University of Idaho Master Gardener volunteer, Jan Aman, led “Creepy Crawlers” an activity where youth looked at insects through magnifying glasses.

The Green Tomato Toss and Potato Bowling proved to be among the most popular events with all age groups.

The nationwide events marked the sixth annual Lights On After-school Day, organized by the After-school Alliance with National Presenting Sponsor the JC Penney After-school Fund. California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger is its national chair again this year.

Throughout October, an inflatable Traveling Light Bulb has criss-crossed the country collecting children’s art that now is being displayed on a mural on Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C.

There has been an after-school program for children at Marsing Elementary since 1992, largely through the efforts of long time Marsing Elementary teachers Jan Odlum, John Barenberg, and Debbie Elizondo. The U of I Extension office has also supported after-school efforts in Marsing by conducting 4-H after-school and nutrition education activities during and after school.

This is the first year that the Marsing program has been funded with a 21st Century Community Learning Center grant. The increase in funding has allowed the program to focus more on individualized academic instruction, provide bussing home to students, and increase enrollment for deserving Marsing students.

“We are all so proud of our after-school program and of our students,” principal Lillian Stewart said.

“There’s no reason learning should stop at 3 p.m., particularly if the alternative is unsupervised time in front of a television set, or any of the dangerous or unhealthy behaviors that can ensnare children in the afternoon hours.”

celebration, call 337-4641.

There will be a costume contest this year again. The winner will have his or her photo displayed for the next year at City Hall.

This year, the senior class at Homedale High School has got in on the act, too.

Members of the Class of 2006 will hold a carnival in City Park to coincide with the celebration. A list of businesses participating in the Halloween celebration also will be available at the carnival.

The carnival will feature complimentary hot chocolate as well as carnival games and other attractions.

Tickets to participate in the carnival games are $1 each or six for $5.

Proceeds will help fund senior class activities.

Among the attractions will be an Astro Jump jump house, caramel apples and other carnival-like games, such as a cake walk.

City officials urge parents to refrain from using downtown parking spots for safety reasons. Park at either end of town and begin your trick-or-treating from that point.

All pedestrian and traffic laws will be strictly enforced.

Also planned in Homedale on Monday is a Harvest Festival sponsored by the Homedale Assembly of God Church.

The festival will start at 6:30 p.m. and feature a fish pond, cake walk and air hockey.

Organizers ask that no scary costumes be worn by festival attendees city clerk Lani Race said Monday, and he could not be reached for comment. But Spang said earlier this month that if no one files as a write-in candidate for Grand View’s vacant City Council spots he intends to appoint three people after the election date passes to save the city election costs.

If Spang cannot appoint the three positions, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne will have to step in and make the appointments.

The Gem Irrigation District will hold an election for one of its two division positions. Dale Chrz filed for Division 2 and will run unopposed. But in Division 1, David VanWassenhove, the incumbent, will go against Elmon Thompson.

To qualify to vote in an irrigation district election, the voter must be at least 18 years of age, a resident of Owyhee County and own land within the Gem Irrigation District. The voter must have lived in the county for at least 30 days.

Old-time envelope budget system still can work for some expenses

Dear Dave,
How does the envelope system work? Also, how much money do you recommend to save for emergencies?
— Dale via e-mail

Dear Dale,
The envelope system is grandma’s old-fashioned way of budgeting money. Back in the old days when people were paid in cash, they would take the money and divide it up in different envelopes according to the categories in their budget — food, clothing, gas — and whatever else they needed.
When a particular envelope started getting close to empty, they stopped buying because the money budgeted for that category was gone. If you wanted a shirt, but the clothing envelope was empty, you didn’t buy the shirt. It’s a very simple cash system that keeps you from overspending.

Today, we don’t use it that way for every category, we just use it for a few — food or clothing, for instance. These are two areas where we tend to bust the budget, so use this cash method as the only source of paying for these areas so you don’t overspend the category and blow the budget. Of course, for other areas you would continue to use checks or electronic draft.
A fully funded emergency fund is three- to six-months’ worth of expenses. Think of it as your rainy day fund.
Trust me, if you live very long you’re going to have some rain in your life, financially speaking. The emergency fund is your umbrella, your protection in these cases — a way to prevent you from getting soaked.

— Dave
Dear Dave,
We’re trying to work our way out of debt and have a household income of around $54,000 and three children. We’re trying to cut every corner we can, and I was wondering if we should cut my husband’s long-term disability insurance? It costs about $28 a month and is provided through his employer.
— Kimberly

Dear Kimberly,
Don’t do it! Long-term disability insurance is very inexpensive and a great buy. You’re paying out only about $300 a year, and in return it will pay you 60-70 percent of his salary should he become disabled. Statistics show that a 32-year-old is 12 times more likely to become disabled than to die before the age of 65.

Disability is probably the most under-insured type of financial planning out there today. Everyone needs to have long-term, not short-term, disability insurance. Chances are you won’t ever use it, but in the event that something bad happens it can help save you from financial disaster.

Straighten up and fly (Old Glory) right

To a newspaperman, the most dreaded phone calls always start with, "There's a problem with something in your paper." But sometimes those phone calls can be enlightening, as was the case when former Owyhee County commissioner Dick Bass rang us up last week.

Bass pointed out that the United States flag and the Idaho state flag were inverted in the background of a photo depicting the swearing in of new county treasurer Brenda Richards.

He explained that Old Glory is supposed to be placed to the right of the state flag, but it was stationed to the left of the flag in this photo.

And he was absolutely right.

According to usflag.org, there are many rules to follow when displaying the colors of the United States. And I'm sure more than a few people are unaware of them.

Like me — before the phone call from Bass.

The Flag Code is federal law, and it outlines how and when the U.S. flag should be displayed.

The placement of the flag in the photo run on Page 2A of the Oct. 12 edition of The Owyhee Avalanche violated the rule that states that "when flown with flags of states, communities, or societies on separate flag poles which are of the same height and in a straight line, the flag of the United States is always placed in the position of honor — to its own right."

In other words, when facing the U.S. flag when it is displayed with other flags, you should see the Stars and Stripes to the left of any other flag. In the photo, the U.S. flag is on the right from that perspective.

There are other rules worth noticing, especially as the sports fans among us move indoors to watch basketball and wrestling in the winter months.

According to the Flag Code,

Improper placement

The United States flag is in the wrong place in the background of this photo showing new Owyhee County Treasurer Brenda Richards, right, being sworn into office by Owyhee County Commissioner Hal Tolmie during an Oct. 3 ceremony in Murphy. According to the Flag Code, the U.S. flag should stand to its own right in all settings involving other flags. Here it is inverted with the Idaho state flag.

when the U.S. flag is "displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union (field of stars) should be uppermost to the flag's own right, that is, to the observer's left."

And the rules go on.

Conduct during the playing of the National Anthem at sporting events is varied. Some people — yes, like journalists — merely stand at attention facing the flag, either silently or singing the anthem.

But the majority stand facing the flag with their right hand over their heart, which is correct.

When reading the letter of the law, you find that even proper observance is sometimes lacking a detail or two.

For example, when a ballplayer removes his cap for the Star Spangled Banner, he usually places the headdress over his heart. This technically is incorrect, according to the Flag Code.

A civilian should always place his right hand over his heart when saluting the flag, according to the code. The cap is to be held in the right hand, but not placed over the heart. Because the right hand is supposed to be placed over the heart, the cap should rest at the left shoulder.

Obviously, there is an exception for football players. A helmet on the shoulder wouldn't be too comfortable.

It's amazing what you can learn from one phone call. But it's disturbing that this knowledge about the symbol of our nation isn't more widely known.

For more information on the Flag Code, go to www.usflag.org.

— JB

On the money

The flags outside Homedale City Hall are fly in their correct places Friday afternoon. The United States flag stands to its own right, taking the place of honor next to the Idaho state flag. For good measure, the U.S. flag also stands higher than the state flag, which is the preferred location, according to the Flag Code. In no instance should a flag of any state, county, community or organization fly higher than the U.S. flag, the code says.

On the edge of common sense

Sliced bread

“The greatest thing since sliced bread.” This common expression that many of us use represents a milestone in convenience. In the late ’20s and early ’30s, sliced and wrapped bread became widely available.

I’m not a cook, so it is difficult for me to imagine the mechanics of how that inventive someone devised the method to slice a loaf as thin crusted and weak-knead as Wonder Bread. Did it involve machetes? Table saws, piano wire, laser beams? Can you imagine two bakers and a candlestick maker trying to mash a wad of dough through a harp, or the grill of a ’53 Buick, or a window at Alcatraz?

Unwrapping nature’s goodies has always tested the ingenuity of man, be it coconuts, spuds or watermelons. But there are still several seemingly simple tasks that require considerably more effort than their benefit warrants: dentistry, peeling the shrink-wrap off of CDs, sharpening a paring knife, or house-training a rabbit.

The J.R. Simplot Co., along with others, learned how to peel potatoes with lye and scrubbers. The Gallo Brothers no longer have bare-footed cloggers dancing in a vat of grapes. Citrus scientists gave the orange a navel, which made hand-peeling much easier. Freestone peaches, seedless grapes, spineless prickly pear, polled cattle and chicken nuggets are the result of deliberate genetic selection to improve the convenience of our food preparation. (Note: this assumes that the nuggets are made from free-range boneless chickens)

But there are still some monumental obstacles to be conquered in our quest to make life easier. The pomegranate for instance: a delicious fruit that is as difficult to eat as Styrofoam peanuts. Watching someone eat a pomegranate is akin to watching a mother chimpanzee pick lice off her baby and pop them in her mouth!

Maybe the answer lies in breeding a pomegranate with the juicy seeds hanging on the outside! And a large stem that could act as a handle. It would be like eating a lumpy tapioca Popsicle.

How about eating crabs? If the purebred livestock people could be put in charge of the crab industry, in a short time we’d have two-legged crustaceans with claws as big as a ham. The shell would come off as easily as a Hershey wrapper. All the rest of the crab — as well as old gummer crabs and corriente crabs — would be ground into crab cakes. Think of it as efishant crabs.

And maybe someday we’ll breed a CD or DVD wrapper with a navel. Might be a job for the Orange County Choppers.

Chalk it up as wasteland

This year has been devastating to the southern Gulf states. One can only imagine the tragedy, the loss, the anxiety, the suffering. One hurricane after another.

The news has been filled with videos, live shots, and still photos of the havoc wreaked upon this area of the nation.

Lives have been lost, homes destroyed, businesses washed away, families separated, and on and on. We sympathize with these fellow Americans.

But at some point the rest of the nation should not be required to build, rebuild, and rebuild again. The latest hurricane, Wilma, is the fifth this year alone. And the federal government keeps pouring billions and billions more into the region. It’s an endless, continual liability on the taxpayers of this country. And there’s no reason to believe it will end — ever.

The federal government should issue an ultimatum to these states: “This is all you get. You know the risks of living in such a dangerous area, so all future losses are yours and yours alone.”

This nation has more pressing issues — particularly the war against terrorists — than to keep handing out free money to a handful of states that know the hurricanes are coming year after year.

It is somewhat understandable that the taxpayers repair and maintain government installations in these states, including federal highways, bridges, etc. But the limited federal powers outlined in the U.S. Constitution do not allow reimbursements for private and state losses because of disasters. The founding fathers knew that such a clause could bankrupt the coffers of the government. And with continued doling out of billions of dollars every time we have such a disaster, that is what lies ahead — bankruptcy.

Those who choose to continue to live in this region need to accept responsibility for their choice, and not expect the rest of us to continually bail them out.

They should either accept the responsibility or chalk up the area as a wasteland and turn it in to a wilderness area.

Wayne Cornell

Not important ... but possibly of interest

When the business where I work made arrangements for employees to get flu shots, I was first in line. One nurse gave me the vaccination. Another nurse stuck another needle in my other arm to draw a blood sample. Then I went back to work.

It wasn’t always that way.

I was the kid who, at age 5, locked himself in the bathroom after learning the doctor was coming to give me a penicillin injection to cure my inflamed tonsils. I had an edge there because even an angry mother usually won’t spank a kid with tonsillitis.

It also was me who fainted and fell down a flight of stairs at the old Meridian High School gymnasium after receiving a polio inoculation, scaring the begeebers out of the other grade school students waiting to get the vaccine.

And it was yours truly who, when in my early 20s, got a shot with no visible ill effects. Then I stepped into a soundproof booth to take a hearing test. The technician gave me some headphones and told me to listen very carefully and push a button when I could no longer hear a tone that gradually increased in frequency. Right in the middle of the test, the shot caught up with me. I woke up standing on my head in the confined booth, earphones askew, with a frightened audio technician bending over me, thinking he had killed me with sound.

When I arrived at Fort Lewis, Wash., for my basic training, I knew I was going to get vaccinations for smallpox, plague, malaria, measles and assorted other exotic diseases. My greatest fear was that I would topple over during the immunization process, embarrassing myself in front of my peers. Therefore, I was relieved when I learned no needles were involved. The inoculations were to be administered using the latest technological breakthrough — air guns.

The air gun was a brilliant idea. It was placed against the patient’s arm, and high-pressure air forced the medicine under the skin — no needles, no pain (they said). Whatta deal!

I watched with new confidence as the soldier in front of me stepped up to receive his first high-tech shot from a medic armed with an air gun. The technician placed the gun against the man’s arm and pulled the trigger. Actually, he didn’t pull the trigger-he “jerked” the trigger. When he jerked it, the gun went PSSSST!!!, and the nozzle slipped down the man’s arm, making a neat cut a least an inch long. Blood started running down the victim’s arm. The man immediately behind me, who also was watching the procedure, slumped to the floor in a dead faint.

Unfortunately, the incident turned out to be the rule rather than the exception.

A few years after I returned from basic training, area health officials announced the first flu vaccine was available. I went to the local hospital to get it. When I looked up to the head of the line, I saw a male nurse holding an air gun. I wasn’t too concerned, figuring the gun would be OK in the hands of a civilian. I was wrong.

I haven’t seen an air gun in about 20 years. During that time, I have had many needles stuck in my arms. And I have never felt the need to pass out or lock myself in the bathroom.

There are some things in life you can’t appreciate until you have experienced the alternative.

Bruneau phone system approved

Loan for the construction of the Bruneau-Grand View-Oreana telephone system has been approved by the Rural Electrification administration to the extent of $146,000, reports John Rinard, member of the telephone committee of the Bruneau river soil conservation district.

Mr. Striegel, manager of the Gem State utilities corporation, who will install the system, received a telegram last Friday stating that the loan had been approved for that amount. Striegel explained that a large amount of legal and planning work was ahead yet before actual construction could begin. He stated further that several more construction and planning actors would have to be “ironed out” with the REA officials and he would push the negotiations along as fast as possible.

The loan was approved pending the complete securing of the necessary equity by the stockholders, concluded Rinard, and there are a few persons with outstanding stock purchases that should be made directly to the Gem State utilities corporation, Richfield.

Trojans swamp Parma Friday 32-6

Homedale’s improved Trojan eleven jolted Parma out of the running for the Snake River Valley B-football league title at Parma Friday night by powering to a 32-6 victory.

The Trojans crossed the Parma goal line in every quarter and were never headed after posting a 13-6 lead over the Panthers at the half.

Quarterback Norm Leslie scored twice from the one-yard line and from 18 yards out and Bill Carson duplicated his two touchdown effort with runs of seven and one yards. Chuck Dunn picked a Parma fumble out of mid air and sprinted 25 yards for the final Homedale six.

Parma’s single tally, in the second stanza, was registered by halfback Taylor Phillips from the five.

Cub scouts tour local fire station

Cub Scout members of den No. 2 and 3 visited the local fire house on the regular meeting day last Thursday. They were accompanied by den mothers Mrs. Earl Breach and Mrs. Mary Cegnar, who were assisted by Mrs. Elmer Ross.

Bruce Smith, a member of the fire department, showed them through, explaining the various functions and gave them a treat by letting the boys hold on to the hose and turned on the water. The boys also enjoyed the honor of wearing the firemen’s hats.

Succor Crik Sam Sez: “I’ll be out trickin’ and treatin’ this week end, but I won’t need no mask. With a map like mine I kin ply a bein’ a spook the year round.”

SHOCKING MASSACRE. Again it is our painful duty to record one of the most terrible Indian massacres that has ever taken place in our midst. From M. S.W. Strong, of Jordan Valley, and others, we learn the following particulars: On last Monday morning, Sergeant Denoile and wife and Sergeant Nichols, of Camp C. F. Smith, started in a four-horse ambulance from Camp Lyons, on their way to Fort Boise. They had proceeded about nine miles, arriving at a point half-way between Camp Lyon and Reynolds’s Creek, when they were attacked and fired into by a party of Indians, who lay concealed among the rocks near the roadside. Denoile, who was driving, immediately threw up his hands, exclaiming: “My God! I am shot!” dropped the reins and fell from the ambulance. The horses then ran at full speed about half a mile. Nichols, who was armed with a Henry rifle fired several shots at the savages in the interim. The horses then became in some manner entangled in the harness and one of them fell. Nichol’s leaped from the ambulance, as also did Mrs. Denoile, who appeared perfectly frantic. The Indians were then only two or three hundred yards away and Nichols endeavored to persuade Mrs. Denoile to take shelter with him among some rocks a few yards distant; instead of which she started back towards her murdered husband. Nichols to save his own life, found shelter in the rocks and commenced shooting at his pursuers. He finally succeeded in getting out of sight of the Indians, and arrived in a spiteful plight a short time before dark at Carson’s Ranch, on Reynolds Creek. He says the last he saw of Mrs. Denoile she was in the hands of the fiends. How terrible! How heartrending the thought! The lady was near the period of giving birth to a child, and if she were not immediately murdered, her fate at the hands of those devils incarnate will be infinitely worse than death. The horses were taken, the ambulance burned, and Denoile’s body stripped and dragged some distance from the roads, as we have recently learned. The atrocity was committed between ten and eleven o’clock in the forenoon.

The party made three other attacks during the day, but without killing any one else. About noon a Mr. Hardy came along on horseback near the scene of the outrage. The Indians fired on him and killed his horse. He escaped into the rocks, and with two six-shooters kept the devils at bay till at last he made his escape.

At two o’clock Mr. Strong came along the same road with a wagon and two horses. He was also assailed and had both of his horse badly wounded, but succeeded in making his escape unhurt to Reynolds Creek.

The last attack the devils made was on three ox-teamsters, near sundown, but the men fought them off and they disappeared in the darkness, uttering demoniac yells, after spending nearly a whole day in their fiendish work. Different accounts are given of the number of murderous band, ranging from ten to thirty. Maj. Hunt, of Camp Lyon, did not hear of the occurrence till Tuesday night, and he deserved credit for his promptness of action. He only had ten men in Camp, but immediately dispatched five of them to the bloody scene to recover the dead body, and if possible get some trace of the woman. The Major at once started for Camp Three Forks Owyhee to inform Col. Coppinger, and Wednesday night they were encamped at Flint with sixty men. Attending the next morning to go by way of Eves saw mill to Wagontown and if possible on the trail of the murderers; since which we have heard nothing from the command.

DANGEROUS CARELESSNESS. It is truly astonishing to see what tranquil indifference some people evince for the welfare of their fellow men. As an example of downright and criminal carelessness we mention the fact of a neighbor of our taking up a plank of the side walk in order that he might stow wood away in a subterranean passage, and after doing so, with the utmost disregard of consequence, he folded his arms and walked away without replacing the plank. An unfortunate hombre came along soon after, and not noticing it, “put his foot in it,” (the hole in the sidewalk) spraining his ankle in a serious manner, which has confined him to the house for a number of days, and it is doubtful he ever will entirely get well. In our opinion, the perpetrators of such criminal neglect should pay dearly for their absence of mind.

LAND OFFICE. R. H. Brown, Esq., of this place, who, our readers will remember, was appointed Register for the Land Office, established by the last Congress, has lately been over to Boise City for the purpose of making arrangements to open the office. John C. Carroll, is Receiver, and these two gentlemen will be ready to do business some time in November next. This will be welcome news to the people of Boise Valley, and, in fact, to farmers generally who intend to permanently locate in the country.

LISLE LESTER gave one of her chaste and pleasing entertainments at the Court House on Tuesday evening. It consisted of a set of beautiful selections from the poets, any one of which, when embellished with the charming elocution of Lisle Lester is worth more than the price of admission. She left here on Wednesday evening on the Humboldt Stage, on her projected tour through Nevada, Utah and Colorado. We wish her a pleasant journey and safe return to Owyhee.

ACCIDENT. J. M. Abbott was seriously injured recently in R. H. Brown’s saw mill on Reynolds Creek, by a board or plank that, through the inattention of a workman, was knocked against the circular saw, while in motion, which threw is with great violence against Mr. Abbott. He injuries, though severe, are not of a serious nature, and we are please to know that he is fast recovering.

OUR READERS will remember that the cause of our being late to press with the last issue was blamed on the printers and Thos. Ewing’s liberality. The main cause can be learned by finding out who it was that went through the sidewalk on the day of publication. Printers can stand some things but when it comes to piling it on thick – we pass.

ANOTHER MURDER. In order to complete our record of blood this week, we must chronicle still another horrible murder by Indians. William Black, of the firm of Black Bro.’s, residing in the town of Oro, was shot and fatally wounded by Indians on Thursday evening about seven o’clock. He died yesterday morning. It is astonishing with what audacity the “noble red men” perpetrated the bloody act. At the time, Mr. Black has just stepped out of his door with a candle in his hand and was walking round the corner of his house, intending to go down into the cellar from an outside entrance. Another house in situated about 40 feet distant. The Indians were between the two houses, and shot two arrows at Mr. Black, one of which produced a fearful wound in his breast, near the heart, causing his death. The funeral will take place to-day. The moccasin tracks in the morning showed that there were five of the murderers in town and several on the mountain near by. Signal fires are seen almost every night on the mountains, at a short distance from town. Mr. Black was an old pioneer on this Coast and gained the love and esteem of all who had the good fortune to become acquainted with him. His sad fate has cast a gloom over our entire community.

STILL LATER. W. L. Burnhamand J. McCourt, who were of the party of six men that went out on Wednesday to the scene of the massacre, between Camp Lyon and Reynolds creek, have just returned. They found the body of Denoile which as partly stripped but not mutilated. They are of the opinion that Mrs. Denoile was carried off alive. They found a ribbon apparently belonging to a lady’s hat, a German bible, portions of a woman’s dress and sixty dollars in greenbacks. Some of the articles were five miles apart. The Indians went towards the Owyhee, and Col. Coppinger and Command are after them.
