Homedale's Christoffersen plays big role in West's East-West Shrine Game victory

Tyler Christoffersen may have found his niche on the football field.

After a season of playing outside linebacker for Homedale High School, the senior was switched to safety for the East-West Shrine Game at Bishop Kelly High School in Boise on Nov. 25.

The switch was necessitated by a lack of depth in the West team's defensive secondary and the fact that Christoffersen, who is 5-foot-9 and weighs 155 pounds, is small for a linebacker.

"In a sense, I like it better because I was a small linebacker for the season anyway," Christoffersen said. "As a free safety, I could pretty much fly around."

Although Christoffersen admits he had to learn pass coverage as a safety and had to learn a new way of looking at the field, he performed well enough to earn the Defensive MVP award in the West's 22-21 victory over the East.

"There's a big difference because as a linebacker you're used to stepping out, but as a safety, I had to make sure nobody would get deeper than me," Christoffersen said.

"I had to change my steps and the view of the field from what I'm used to."

A crash course in the art of playing safety — there were only three practices for the all-star game — seemed to be all Christoffersen needed.

"It was a good fit for Tyler,"

MVP

Homedale defensive coordinator Dave Hart said. "He has great speed and was able to cover man-to-man, and he still had a good concept of zone coverage."

Hart served as defensive line coach for the West squad, the head coach of which was Dave Young of Nampa's Skyview. Christoffersen's head coach, Thomas Thomas, helped Young with the offensive line.

Christoffersen nailed down the MVP award — and the $250 college scholarship awarded by the Shriners — with several key tackles in the game and a yeoman's effort in the fourth quarter.

"We were trailing in the fourth quarter and we wanted to just win it, so our defensive backs coach (Nathan White from Eagle) said I wouldn't be coming out in the fourth quarter," Christoffersen said. "He wanted to go for it all."

Hart said Christoffersen made some great open-field stops, including fighting off a block and dropping an East receiver for a loss on a screen play. Thomas said some of Christoffersen's open-field tackles prevented touchdowns by the East.

In the second quarter, Christoffersen made a spectacular open-field tackle on an East punt returner. The Homedale player was the only defender standing between the returner and the end zone.

Christoffersen learned that he had won the MVP award after the game when he was called into the coach's office.

"It makes me feel really good," he said. "I was really surprised because I didn't think I could get it."

"I played my hardest. I was really shocked, but I was happy."

Christoffersen's award may carry added significance because he was a 3A player going up against the best the larger schools — 5A and 4A division programs — had to offer.

"It was good to see the 3A and 2A players have an impact on the game," Hart said. "It's good

Huskies grapple with thin roster

It's no secret that it takes a special type of athlete to be a wrestler. But it also takes a special person to be a wrestling coach, especially if he's trying to revive a program.

Rick Folwell is facing just such a task as he starts his third season as Marsing High School's coach.

And, he's facing an uphill battle.

He has just nine wrestlers — not nearly enough to put an athlete in each weight class — and only one senior.

"Going from six seniors to one senior to try and lead the team is going to be tough," Folwell said.

At the end of last season, Folwell was looking forward to a 2005-06 campaign in which a slew of seniors would be on board. But events conspired against the Huskies, and — for many non-athletic reasons — those half-dozen dwindled to 171-pounder

Parma pulls away from Homedale in opener

Things looked to be in Homedale High School's favor 14 seconds into the final quarter of Thursday's boys basketball opener.

The Trojans, taking the floor for the first time under the guidance of coach Brad Hill, trailed by only a basket but had already reached the one-and-one foul shot bonus against Parma.

But Homedale forgot one simple adage in its 58-50 non-conference loss to the Panthers: When you're tall, go inside with the ball.

"Our guards weren't aggressive enough looking to go to the basket," Hill said. "Our strength is inside, and everybody will tell you that. I mean, look at how big we are."

The bulk of the Trojans' scoring came from their Big Three — 6-5 center Garrett Sweet and 6-3 forwards Erik Corbett and Ryan Rupp.

Sweet muscled his way to several kisses off the glass as part of his 17 points, but he hit only five of his 15 shots.

Rupp scored eight points and grabbed six defensive rebounds to keep Parma from getting many second-chance shots.

"Once we got down six or seven points, I think we started to rush our shots," Corbett said. "We didn't really give our offense a chance to set up and get it into the post."

Corbett used his long arms to corral long rebounds from the Trojans' perimeter players, who hurried their jump shots against Parma's zone. Corbett's offensive putbacks helped him score 16 points; he converted three of them in the second quarter alone.

The senior hit three of four foul shots during a 15-second span to pull Homedale back within a basket at 39-37 in the fourth quarter.

But the Trojans' defense was unable to halt the Panthers' offense. Parma senior Trent Weber hit two baskets, and Brian Merrick easily sliced through the lane for another score to fuel a crucial 6-1 run over the next minute.

Merrick scored 11 for Parma, which was led by 16 from 6-4 senior Jesse Chaney, who drained three of his teams four 3-point goals.

"We never could get the stop we needed," Hill said. "We'd give up a second-chance basket or miss the front end of a one-and-one and just could never get over that hump.

"I thought the kids played really hard, though. I never thought they quit."

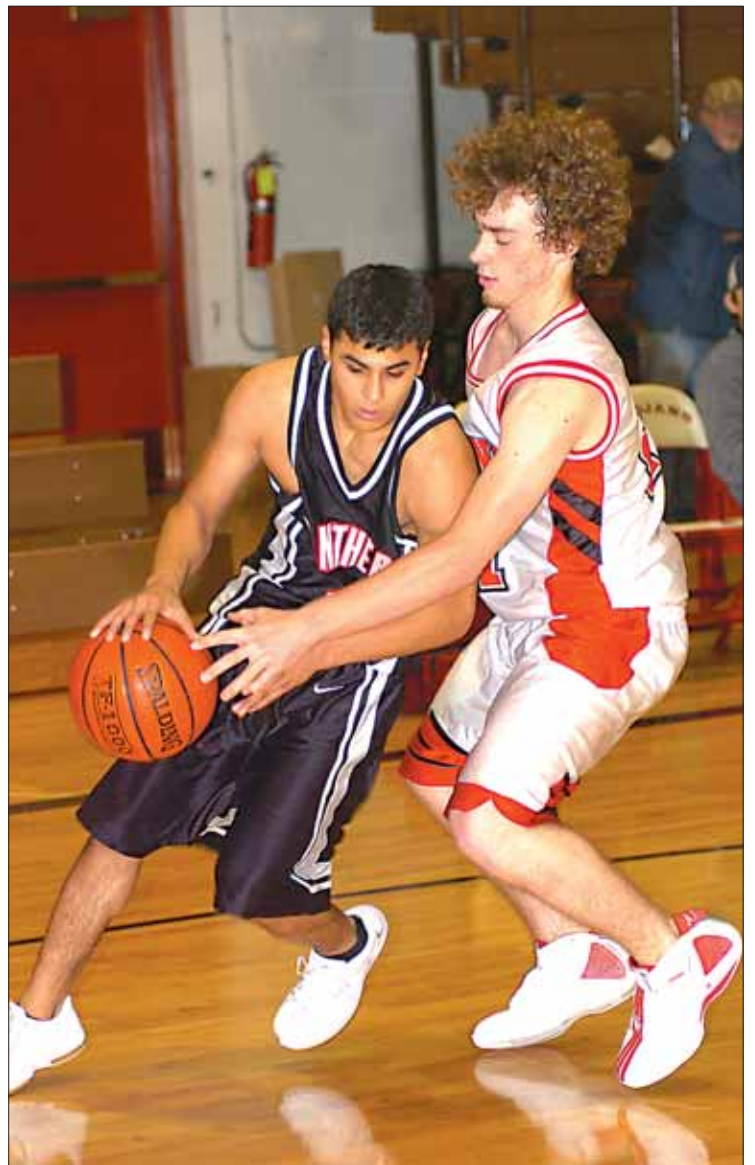

Not even in the face of a 13-2 first-quarter run that Parma used to take control early. Trent Timmons nailed trey and four free throws in two minutes to push the Panthers to a 16-9 advantage 5 minutes, 6 seconds into the contest.

Parma lived on the perimeter, but was able to exploit the Homedale man-to-man defense for inside baskets at crucial junctures. Kevin Weilmunster's putback pushed the Parma advantage to 26-17 after a 7-1 spurt in the second quarter.

"They're still learning the concept of my man-to-man defense and they're not quite there," Hill said of his new charges. "They don't understand help side, so we're late rotating across and rotating down."

"But I thought in the second quarter we went to zone for a while, and went back to man. I thought we played man well in the second half."

Trojans girls split two non-league games

For the second time in three games, Homedale High School's girls basketball team was taken down to the wire on Nov. 29 on the road against Melba.

But the Trojans got two free throws from Hailee Garrett and a basket from Cheyanne Andrade in overtime to beat the Mustangs 36-33.

It was the second consecutive win for coach Mike Greeley's team after the Trojans had opened the season with four straight losses.

Homedale owned a nine-point lead with 3 minutes left in the fourth quarter, but turnovers in the waning moments helped Melba climb back into the game, Greeley said.

The Trojans, who fell to 2-5 with a gritty 27-21 loss to Nampa Christian on Friday night, grabbed the lead in the second half against Melba behind scrappy play and rebounding.

"Michelle Uria retrieved several loose balls that were major possessions during our run for the lead in the third and first part of the fourth," Greeley said.

The victory also was a measure of revenge for Homedale. On Nov. 17, the Trojans lost to visiting Melba 38-37 on LesAnn Harris' 3-point goal in the final seconds. Harris, who scored 11 in the first game, managed just a first-quarter free throw in the rematch.

The Trojans trailed the host Mustangs 17-12 at the break after a sluggish first half. Jessica Mooney dropped in all of her team-high eight points in the first 16 minutes for the bulk of Homedale's scoring.

"Jessica kept us in the game with consistent scoring in the first half," Greeley said.

But — like the Trojans' defense — Garrett awoke in the third quarter with her first points of the contest as the Trojans lit off on a 12-4 run to snatch a 24-21 lead heading into the fourth quarter.

Homedale collected six steals in the third period, including three of Garrett's team-high five. Hailey Hall also blocked two shots in the third quarter. Nicole Leavitt had Melba's only field goal in the third as part of her game-high 15 points. Leavitt also drained a pair of 3-pointers in the first quarter.

Melba's 5-foot-10 junior, Roni Woodall, scored five of her nine points in the fourth quarter as the Mustangs forced overtime.

Andrade and Hall scored seven points each for Homedale, while Garrett and Jordan Warwick finished with six points apiece.

Hair-raising experience

Hailee Garrett flies in the air as she is fouled during a fast break lay-in attempt against Melba.

Marsing boys doomed by turnovers

Tino Rios fired in three 3-points goals as part of his 17 points on Nov. 29 as Nyssa High School spoiled the season opener for the Marsing boys basketball team.

The Huskies were playing without injured Shea McClellin during the 42-32 loss in Oregon. The junior was Marsing's leading scorer last season.

Senior Brian Smith nailed three 3-point goals in the second half for the bulk of his team-high 13 points, but the Huskies couldn't overcome the damage caused by 18 turnovers.

"We had too many turnovers," Marsing coach Brian Thompson said. "We need to learn how to take care of the ball."

Smith was the only Marsing player in double figures against the Bulldogs. Aaron Salvas scored six points and grabbed eight rebounds for the Huskies. Teammate Johnathan Cossel snagged seven rebounds, including six on Nyssa's end of the floor.

Steven Sparks added nine points for the host team.

Marsing's Thursday non-conference road game against Council was postponed and has been rescheduled for Jan. 14.

Jordan Valley High School's girls basketball team began the season with three victories last week, culminating with a championship game win over host Adrian in the Adrian Tipoff Tournament on Saturday.

The Mustangs claimed the tournament championship Saturday with strong rebounding in a victory over the Antelopes.

Jordan Valley held a 41-34 edge on the glass against Adrian as senior Lauren Cuvelier grabbed a team-high eight rebounds to go with her 16 points.

Angela Larsen scored 17 points to lead Jordan Valley (3-0), and she was one of three players (along with Bailey Kershner and Michelle Elsner) to collect seven rebounds.

The Mustangs came out of the gates fast, outscoring Adrian 17-3 in the first quarter.

Jessica Orosco scored all nine of her points in the third quarter to lead the Antelopes. Sarah McPeak and Paige Branstitter added eight points each.

JV 81, Harper 21
In Friday's first round of the Adrian tournament, Cuvelier was perfect from the foul line to rack up 19 points in the Mustangs' lopsided win.

Cassie Trautman added 14 points, and Bailey Kershner and Angela Larsen scored 12 each.

Megan Mackenzie poured in eight points.

"Our team played really well — both defense and offense," Elsner said. "Our forwards had a really good game rebounding and putting the shot back up."

JV 66, Greenleaf 31
Although fairly rusty from having only five practices, the Mustangs managed to beat the Grizzlies by 35 points on Nov. 28.

"We had a goal of getting 40 points and less than eight turnovers by halftime," starting junior Michelle Elsner said.

Jordan Valley led 39-20 at the half.

Sam Caldwell led Greenleaf with eight points.

Starting junior Bailey Kershner led the Mustangs with 20 points, including a pair of 3s, six rebounds, and nine steals. Angela Larsen, starting junior, added 17 points, nine rebounds and nine assists; senior Lauren Cuvelier had 16 points, six rebounds, and six steals.

"Everyone on the team had good stats," Cuvelier said, "because we played as a team. There are a lot of talented and experience players on our team, and we've pretty much been playing together since middle school. It will be exciting to see how far we can go."

Jordan Valley JV wins
The Jordan Valley junior varsity started out the season right with a 37-29 victory over Greenleaf on Nov. 28.

The Grizzlies held a 21-20 lead at one point in the third quarter.

"When our team started playing defense and rebounding more, our offense really started to work, and we were getting some pretty good shots and fouls," junior Chelicy Payne said.

One coach, two teams ready to go at Adrian

Already leading girls, Mills takes over boys team for the season

The alarm has been sounded. The Adrian High School boys basketball team could be dangerous this season.

“We’re quick and we’re big,” Antelopes first-year coach Gene Mills said. “I’m impressed with these kids. We’re going to be a force when we get our game together.”

For all the size and speed, though, Mills hadn’t settled on a starting lineup in the days before the Adrian Tipoff Tournament.

But who could blame the guy?

After all, he’s trying to run two varsity programs. He’s in his second season as the coach for the Adrian girls basketball team, too.

“Sometimes my energy really gets drained,” said Mills, who is also the high school principal and the Adrian schools superintendent. “But the teaching staff is excellent here, and the kids are really well-behaved and they don’t require a lot of my time.”

With a less-intensive administrative schedule, Mills decided to take on both basketball teams — straight out of a football season that saw Adrian make the Oregon state playoffs for the first time since 1990.

Still, overseeing two teams in such an intense sport as basketball — and that includes four hours of practice each day — would have most coaches tearing their hair out, or at least pitching a tent in the parking lot.

Mills says he’s coaching the boys team for the 2005-06 only to give assistant Brent Ishida some experience before he takes over the squad next season

“This is a one-year deal,” the coach said.

And for all the potential Mills sees in that one year, there could be a lot of mystery, too, for a program that endured a 2-18 season a year ago.

But Mills sees a fire burning that could reduce memories of the 2004-05 season to ashes.

“A lot of kids are showing they’re going to get the ball,” the coach said. “They’re battling every day in practice, and I just kind of sit back and smile.

Two starters return from last year’s squad — 6-foot-1 senior point guard Brett Buchholz, who was a second-team All-Old Oregon League selection, and 6-2 wing-post Logan Branstiter, another senior.

“Brett obviously looks to have a good year,” Mills said. “Logan spent a lot of time on basketball this summer, and he looks pretty improved over last year.”

Another senior, 6-3 wing Chris Schumacher, is one of three exchange students who Mills thinks will make an impact this year. Schumacher, an all-league stud from football, played basketball for the Antelopes a year ago but never started.

“He was never in a starting role, but I thought he was one of the best players in the league as far as a rebounder,” Mills said.

The Antelopes other foreign-exchange athletes — 6-4 senior Paul Vallejo from Ecuador and 6-0 junior guard Mat Lorenzi from Hungary — are among about five players who are trying to nail down the remaining starting slots, the coach said.

“Paul has excellent skills and quickness, and he works well around the basket,” Mills said.

Lorenzi is similar to Vallejo in that they both played basketball in their native countries before coming to Eastern Oregon.

“He’s got great skills, too, and he passes the ball really well,” Mills said. “He works on his game and brings a lot to the floor.”

Kade Thomas, a 6-2 junior wing from Ridgeview, leads a cluster of returners with more size for the Antelopes.

Macario Beltran is a 6-3 senior wing whom Mills called the best player on the Adrian junior varsity a year ago.

Aaron Langley is a 6-0 sophomore guard who brings his athleticism from the football field, and 6-1 junior guard Joseph Witty was a starter for the Antelopes last season.

The size and quickness Adrian brings to the floor will help the Antelopes adhere to Mills’ philosophy of setting up the game from the defensive side.

“Everything goes from playing good defense, especially on the ball,” he said. “We like to transition in when we get the ball, and if it’s not there, we can go into the half-court.”

— JB

Young Antelopes girls squad brings experience to the table

Don’t be fooled by the baby faces. Adrian High School’s girls basketball team could compete in the Old Oregon League.

“Experience and confidence are the biggest things,” second-year coach Gene Mills said. “We’re going to shoot the ball better and we’re going to play good defense.”

And, although Mills won’t classify the 2005-06 season as a transition year, he warns to look out for his squad next season.

“These kids all played together last year, but these kids have a year under their belts,” he said. “They’ve just matured a lot over the last year.

“And their best year will be next year when some of the other teams have graduated their seniors.”

When the veteran coach says “other teams,” Mills really means Jordan Valley, which has a ton of veteran talent.

“They’re going to be hard to beat, but it can be done,” the coach said of the Mustangs. “We’re probably as good as the rest of (the teams in the OOL).”

After the Antelopes went 5-15 a year ago, Mills devised an ambitious summer schedule that he says improved the players’ skills and attitudes and self-confidence.

Confidence will be a big factor for Adrian, which won’t have a senior in the starting lineup at the beginning of the season.

“They’re just better basketball players all over, and I think they’re going to create a real bond amongst themselves,” Mills said.

Leading the rotation for Mills is 6-foot sophomore post Paige Branstiter, whose defensive rebounding could ignite a fair amount of fast breaks.

“She’s athletic and she just looks great,” Mills said. “She has a nice outlet pass. She rebounds and puts the ball out there like the big kids.”

Key to the transition game will be 5-8 junior wing Sarah McPeak. Mills calls her the Antelopes’ best shooter and defender.

“She’s just a totally unselfish player,” Mills said. “I suspect she’s going to have a great year.”

Running the offense is 5-4 junior point guard Kat Sillonis. She and fellow guard Ryann Bowns (5-5, junior) have improved shooting touches, according to Mills.

Adding to the speed is 5-9 senior Andrea Garner, who will come off the bench to spell Branstiter.

“Andrea’s really looking good this year,” Mills said. “She’s getting up and down the floor and playing good defense.”

Stephanie Hutchings, a 5-6 junior starting wing, plays bigger than her size and has a tremendous work ethic, the coach said.

“She plays really hard and really intense,” Mills said.

Sixth man Amanda Simpson typifies the unselfish nature of the team. The 5-7 junior can play anyway, according to Mills, and she will be a utility player off the bench to fill any gaps on a given night.

to show the difference between 5A and 2A isn’t players’ abilities, but the number of good players and depth.”

Christoffersen had a shot at two interceptions in the game, something a bit different from the regular season when he primarily was charging the line to make stops on the run or hanging back to stop the screen pass.

And with Bishop Kelly quarterback Cody Hawkins directing the East for part of the game, it was a certainty that Christoffersen would see quite a few passes.

“They threw a lot,” he said. “They tried to go deep a few times.”

One assignment for Christoffersen was guarding Bishop Kelly receiver Stew Tracy. The Homedale senior knew what he was in for because his cousin, Kyle Christoffersen from Vallivue in Caldwell, had competed against Tracy in the 4A track field state meet.

But Tyler Christoffersen held his own against Tracy. On one play, with Tracy running a deep post pattern, Christoffersen actually beat the East receiver to the football but was unable to make the play for the interception.

Christoffersen said he missed another pickoff opportunity when he and Weiser’s Sam Lancaster clipped each other while going after another pass from an East quarterback.

The senior, who has shifted his concentration to repeating as a state champion in wrestling, has a dream of continuing his football career in college. And he feels that his performance in the East-West game may have turned a few heads.

“I really hope so,” he said. “I’d love to play football in college.

“A lot of people think I’d go to wrestled, and I would. But I would rather play football than wrestle in college. Hopefully I did get a few people to look at me.”

Adrian girls pound Notus

Amanda Simpson came off the bench and scored all nine of her points in the first half on Nov. 28 to help set up an easy season-opening win for the Adrian High School girls basketball team.

A 5-foot-7 junior, Simpson scored seven points during the Antelopes’ 19-point second quarter to fuel a 66-41 non-conference victory over visiting Notus.

Kat Sillonis led the Antelopes with 13 points, while Sarah McPeak and Ryann Bowns scored 11 points each for Adrian.

Tanya Green, a senior who recently transferred to Notus from Texas, scored a game-high 18 points to lead the Pirates.

Wrestling

Ricky Branin.

But there is silver lining in the situation. Folwell has a core of young wrestlers whom he can take under his wing and create a foundation.

“With kids that are starting out or in the past have tried things that haven’t worked and they’re still trying to find that thing that will work for them,” Folwell said.

“They’re going to be able to go out, ‘Hey that didn’t work. I’m going to keep going until I get was does.’ And they’ll hopefully stay in a learning mode.”

With only nine wrestlers in the fold, attrition is a real concern. But Folwell hopes to get to a point where those worries lie with the Huskies’ opponents more than the Huskies.

“The reality is the way we’re going to have a chance to beat people is conditioning — if we can outlast some people, if we can learn quickly, especially some of the younger guys,” Folwell said.

“Our biggest strength is we can be in good enough shape to hang with some guys.”

Marsing’s wrestlers began to taste success late last season, showing some of the stamina that Folwell hopes to see again this year.

Things began to click for Branin at the District III tournament, where he collected two victories.

Junior Michael Tuckness, a returner at 189, was able to reach the state tournament a year ago despite wrestling against heavier opponents. Wrestling up a weight class, Tuckness won his first two state tournament bouts at 215 pounds as a sophomore. His first loss was to Melba’s Ben Pratt, who finished fourth at State.

“He’s tough. He went to some camps, and he’s working hard and should do well this year,” Folwell said.

Junior Daniel Ineck will return to wrestle at 160.

The rest of Folwell’s team will come from the freshman and sophomore classes at Marsing.

Freshman Mike Moore, a 140-pounder, leads the younger wrestlers. He has a background in different wrestling disciplines — including freestyle — and could be a leader for the underclassmen.

“He’s one of our better wrestlers,” Folwell said.

The sophomores include returning wrestler Kris Young at 140, Chaz Covey at 130 and first-year wrestler Derek Dayton at 189.

“He’s a strong kid,” Folwell said of Dayton. “He’s strong but inexperienced.

But Dayton and the others — including freshmen Carlos Ceballos (189) and Andre Heidt (160) have one thing in common.

“The guys who are here want to work,” the coach said.

The work begins Friday and Saturday in the Nyssa, Ore., tournament.

“This is a well-run, well-established tournament,” Folwell said. “All the big schools go there.”

Pilots hammer Huskies

The Marsing High School girls basketball team was under the weather and overpowered Friday night in a 65-38 non-conference road loss to Glenns Ferry.

The Pilots bombed the Huskies with a 25-7 second quarter to jump into the driver's seat. Glenns Ferry's Ashlea Grankow, a 5-foot-9 junior guard, scored eight of her nine points in the pivotal period.

“We did have problem with size inside, so I decided to try a half-court trap,” Marsing coach Don Heller said. “And in the second quarter it killed us.” Alisha Crane, the Pilots' 5-10 junior post, poured in 34 points. Rachel Anchustegui added 11 points for Glenns Ferry.

“I usually don't make any excuses, but my girls have been pretty sick with colds lately,” Heller said.

“The second half, we went back to man and did much better,” Heller said.

The Huskies (1-3) tried to climb out of a 40-18 halftime hole by returning to its bread-and-butter man-to-man defense in the second half. But Marsing managed just 10 shots in eight minutes, and Glenns Ferry outscored the Huskies 16-9 in the third quarter to ice the game.

Samantha Wilson scored a season-high 15 points to lead the Huskies. She cashed in on nine of 15 foul shots and hit three second-half field goals.

MJ Usabel hit only was 1-for-8 from the floor and 6-for-14 from the free-throw line for eight points.

Marsing shot 10-for-46 (21.7 percent) from the floor against Glenns Ferry.

The Huskies' game scheduled for Nov. 28 at home against Nyssa, Ore., has been rescheduled to Jan. 21.
