COMMENTARY, 10-11B

CLASSIFIEDS, 14-15B.

Dozens of entries make parade a dazzler

Longtime rodeo board member honored

Constance Hyer, left, rides along with her husband, Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo Parade grand marshal Wendell Hyer, during Saturday's procession down Idaho Avenue in Homedale.

Mountain View Nazarene ends Paul's two-year reign as Sweepstakes winner

According to first-year director Laura Anderson, attendees of the 2007 Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo Parade said that this year's event was longer than those in recent memory. That is entirely possible, as more than 70 riders, drivers and floats officially entered the parade this year, and many others participated without officially entering.

Mountain View Church of the Nazarene's float, one of 17 floats in this year's parade, won the sweepstakes award. The Paul's Market floats had won the previous two sweepstakes awards.

Complete parade results will be published in the Aug. 22 edition of The Owyhee Avalanche.

The parade also included 12 police, fire and ambulance entries, 13 other motor vehicle entries and more than 30 horse-related entries, including three wagons, three riding clubs and five Queen/Royalty entries.

An Honor Guard from Mountain Home Air Force Base and a flag presentation by Wilder Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 11065 led the parade.

A draft horse and carriage with grand marshal Wendell Hyer and his wife, Constance, followed the colors.

Anderson said that the parade would not have been successful without the efforts of volunteers

Oregon cowgirl wins queen honors

New queen makes an appearance

Randi Turner, the 2007-08 Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo Queen, waves to onlookers near the start of Saturday's parade in Homedale.

Ontario product wins over two contestants with Owyhee ties

The judges went outside Idaho last week to select the 2007-08 Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo Queen.

Randi Turner of Ontario, Ore., became the 63rd woman to be crowned queen. She was announced as the winner during Friday's rodeo performance.

The daughter of Tate and Lisa Turner, Randi Turner beat out Dixie Kent of Marsing and Jonnie Burns of Wilder to succeed Danielle Kidder as queen.

Turner also was named Miss Congeniality.

Kent was first runner-up. The daughter of Lucky and Bonnie Kent, Dixie won the horsemanship and speech portions of the competition. She rode Kizma during the horsemanship contest.

Jonnie S. Burns, the daughter of Tony and Kelly Burns, was second runner-up.

The interview and speech portions of the contest were held Aug. 6 at the Tumbleweed Theatre at the Owyhee County Fairgrounds in Homedale.

Turner now is eligible to compete in the Miss Rodeo Idaho contest.

She will reign over next year's Owyhee County Rodeo.

Fair and Rodeo Parade

Fair and Rodeo Parade sweepstakes award winner—The float by Mountain View Church of the Nazarene won the 2007 sweepstakes award, ending a two-year reign by Paul’s Market entries.

Fair and Rodeo Parade community/non-profit runners-up — The Homedale High School cheerleaders showed their spirit in the 2007 parade, taking second place in the community/non-profit float division.

Fair and Rodeo Parade community/non-profit first place — Dust Devils Rocks, the community/non-profit float by Homedale’s Dust Devils 4-H club, rocked the judges and rolled up first place honors in its category.

Fair and Rodeo Parade commercial champion float— Alliance Title’s entry, decked out in the parade’s theme colors of green and white, won the commercial division.

Homedale softball team at Fair and Rodeo Parade — Homedale’s U12 Babe Ruth softball state champions, who finished the season with a 22-2 record, saluted fans during the Fair and Rodeo Parade.

Kelly Aberasturi, Bud Anderson, Autumn Burns, Joann Mason, Linda Mason, the Rev. Ross Shaver and Shelley Shenk.

Anderson also expressed appreciation to the following: Homedale Floral for the donation of grand marshal floral arrangements; J.B. Salutregui for announcing the parade free of charge; and the Basque – n – Dobbins Carriage Service for the carriage and driver for the grand marshal.

As always, the parade would not have been possible, Anderson said, without the financial support of the fair and rodeo boards or the tireless efforts of the parade participants.

Finally, Anderson said that the parade would not have been a success without a great turnout by the community.

“We appreciate everyone’s help and support so much,” Anderson said.

Hirsch to open Homedale store

Officials of the P. N. Hirsch Company announced Tuesday that the Idaho Department Store of Homedale will be converted into a Hirsch Value Center in early September, Rodger Hinton, representative to Falk’s ID, said.

Wallace H. Bailey, manager of the Homedale store, is retiring after 36 valued years of service with the company; 21 of the 36 years have been spent in Homedale. Other employees will be remaining in the new operation.

“The company feels that Hirsch Value Center will better serve the community with an enlarged selection of merchandise in all departments,” Ken Hatfield, of Hirsch, said. Remodeling of the building will be started in the immediate future.

The P. N. Hirsch Company, a Division of Interco, operates over 375 department stores in the Northwest, Midwest and South.

Garbage vote set for tonight

The Homedale City Council will vote on a proposed ordinance, to make it mandatory that all residents pay for garbage hauling, at the August meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight.

The controversial subject has been discussed by the council for about a year, and input for and against has been received.

Marvin Hill, who presently hauls garbage from within the city on a franchise basis, has been operating under an extension for several months. Hill said he will “seriously consider” discontinuing the service in Homedale if the council does not pass a mandatory ordinance.

If the ordinance does pass the contract will be put out for bids.

Bids let on Succor Cr. Bridge

J & D Construction of Boise was low bidder on the installation of a bridge on Succor Creek, according to Iris Parker, secretary of the Homedale Highway District.

Parker said bids were opened at the regular meeting of the district last Wednesday, August 4.

The low bid was $43,946, and is for the installation of an old Idaho State Highway bridge, which was formerly near Eagle. The bridge cost was $10,000, Parker said.

The bridge will replace one that washed out early this spring, she said.

4-H demo winners picked

The Owyhee County 4-H Home Economics Demonstration Contest was held Monday, August 2, at the Lions Club Hall in Grand View.

4-H’ers from all parts of the county participated in the contest.

The Junior, Intermediate and Senior division trophies were sponsored by the Extension Homemakers Council. Sharon Huter of Homedale was the Junior winner, Rachael Gottsch of Grand View was the intermediate winner, and Dorothy Gottsch of Grand View was the Senior winner.

The Owyhee County Fair Board Medals were awarded as follows: Junior Division, Gold, Sharon Huter, Homedale; Intermediate, Rachael Gottsch, Grand View; Senior, Dorothy Gottsch, Grand View.

Around the valley

W. E. Liddell, Homedale, returned recently from a two week visit with his son, Sgt. Don Liddell and family, Fort Myer, Arlington, Virginia, across the Potomac River from Washington D.C. During his stay, Mr. Liddell was shown all the points of interest in the area.

Idaho CowBelle President Pinky Cossel, Marsing, along with Virginia Stanford, Jordan Valley, Virginia Miller and Jerry Coleman, Melba, recently attended the American National CowBelle mid-year convention in Denver. The ladies are all members of the Owyhee County CowBelles.

Homedale men to attend tourney

A group of men making up a Homedale softball team will attend the softball league tournament at Caldwell tonight, Friday, and Saturday evenings, beginning at 7 p.m. They will play against the Marsing firemen tonight.

Those participating are Johnny Fisher, Frank Matteson, Mac Tolmie, Jack Thomas, Harold Tolmie, Johnny Landa, Ralph Lineberger, Carl and Robert Hays, all of the Owyhee Motors and Paul’s Groceteria team; Jim Miklancic, Ray Mansisidor and Johnny Krzesnik of the Catholic’s team; and Paul Simon of the Firemen’s team.

The remainder of the second half of the softball league season includes these games:

Sunday, August 18, Marsing Firemen vs. Marsing Boise Payette; Martin’s Feed store vs. Homedale Firemen; and Catholics vs. State Line Grange.

Thursday, August 22, Marsing Firemen vs. Owyhee Motors-Paul’s Groceteria; Martin’s Feed store vs. Homedale Firemen; Wilson’s Jewelry vs. State Line Grange; and Catholics vs. Marsing Boise Payette.

Scores of the games played Sunday are the Owyhee Motors-Paul’s Groceteria, 12, Catholics, 7; Martin’s Feed store, 10, State Line Grange, 9, in an eight-inning game.

Monday games and scores were Marsing Firemen 5, and Homedale Firemen, 0; Marsing Boise Payette, 10, and Wilson’s Jewelry, 0.

Ten compete for Fair Queen title

A total of 10 queen candidates are now competing for the Owyhee County Fair queen title.

Candidates and their sponsors are Sharon Malmberg, sponsored by the Royal Neighbors, Beverly Swinney, Marsing saddle club, and Roberta Wade, sponsored by the Sunny Slope Grange, all of Marsing; Virginia Wilson, sponsored by the Wilson Sage Hens; Shirley Titmus, Owyhee Wranglers and Business and Professional Women’s club; Linda Costley, Jaycees and Jobs Daughters; Anita Maher, 4-H Livestock club; Linda Pegram, American Legion auxiliary; Jean Cearley, St. Hubert’s Altar society; and Rosalie Needs, State Line Grange.

Three of the girls who have turned in their votes are Linda Costley, 125; Shirley Titmus, 100; and Sharon Malmberg, 75.

Homedale locals

Mrs. Frank Pierce took her father, Fred Stredder, to the Caldwell hospital last Wednesday after he suffered a serious heart attack. She reports that he is recovering.

Stan Carlow attended Silver City lodge Saturday night. The Carlows’ daughter, Nina, suffered a badly cut foot last Wednesday while wading in the yard. The cut required stitches.

DAILY MAIL. This public convenience has been promptly inaugurated between Hunter’s Station and Boise City. At present a daily stage is run from here to Boise – and from anything we can learn to the contrary it will be a daily permanently. The stages on the Railroad line make their regular every-other-day trips and in less than four days from Silver to Hunter’s. The mail is carried daily, but each alternate day is taken on a pony. Some dishonest or unreasonably suspicious people say that the pony does not go through, but only “in and out” at the ends of the route – which is wholly false, as everybody who has any considerable correspondence knows and the evidence of its falsity is brought by every pony mail in the shape of letters and papers which would not have arrived by the previous mail. Just as soon as the travel will justify the step, the stage line will be increased to a daily. When Hill Beachey commenced carrying the tri-weekly mail he more than fulfilled his obligations to the public by making seven trips in two weeks instead of six as required. Since August 1st, the mail has been carried daily and will be as long as Hill Beachey is in any way responsible for its transportation.

BULLY. A Dalles correspondent of the Walla Walla Statesman writes, July 29th, thusly:

The Owyhee Avalanche, a journal published in the interest of the Humboldt Route, is jubilant over the fact that a daily mail service has been established between the Idaho country and Sacramento, via Hunter’s Station; the contract of which has been awarded to Hill Beachey. In addition to this boast comes the announcement that Wells, Fargo & Co. have put daily messengers on the route and will send all treasure from Idaho, Boise, Lemhi, and Owyhee by that line. The citizens of the Basin are not all surprised at the above intelligence, having all along been cognizant of the fact that Beachey was backed up by Wells, Fargo & Co.

The above averages well, but contains one or more plain falsehoods. The Avalanche is published in the interest of Idaho in general and Owyhee and its proprietors in particular. The people here and the Avalanche give their influence and encouragement to the establishment of the Beachey Route on grounds of common necessities, and their success proves their wisdom, and they will sustain it with vigor and expose any efforts to cripple it. If Hill Beachey is backed by Wells, Fargo & Co., it only proves him to be the right man — whom our citizens and the Avalanche have favored and will continue to aid and assist. The simple and jealous correspondent pays Beachey a fine and deserved compliment, and shows that W. F. & Co. know which route to ship Idaho treasure by and put on messengers accordingly.

On the edge of common sense

Goodbye, Jim

A rodeo legend died last month. Jim Shoulders, 16-time world champion in bulls, broncs and all around ... Unequaled in the annals of rodeo.

I knew Jim in the same way I knew Casey Tibbs and know Harley May. As a tribal elder. They had achieved their rodeo pinnacles before I was old enough to appreciate their accomplishments. I missed their heroics, but I was a recipient of their wisdom. And they had time to talk to me.

That is different than my acquaintance with Larry Mahan and Ty Murray. I followed their careers and take pleasure in their success. They reign now as chieftains, retired but still actively involved and influential ... still busy.

In 1994, I was invited to be part of a Nashville version of a cowboy Christmas television special. It took place in Lebanon, Tenn., on Charlie Daniels' Twin Pines Ranch. He was the host. Chris LeDoux was the main guest star. Other Nashville acts were included, as well as Jim Shoulders and me. Jim asked me what I was doing there. I said a Christmas poem. I asked him what he was doin' there. He said, "Bein' me."

The stars, their entourages, agents, film directors, sponsors, make-up women, guitar tuners, the Nashville press and adoring fans covered the studio set like the circus midway it was! Jim and I had important-looking badges, but most didn't know who we were. He set up court. I don't know how else to describe it. He picked a corner and invited me to sit beside him. He started telling stories. People passing would cruise by, then slow down like they were passing a car wreck. They were like schools of fish that he'd hook 'til they had to go do Linda Davis' hair or Charlie's moustache.

He was most adept at spontaneous repartee, thinking on his feet. I particularly remember on the several occasions when innocent Nashvillers would ask him what we were doin' there. He would variously explain we were union flossers, Chris LeDoux's wine taster, a priest's special envoys from Yucatan, scouts for the Henryetta Warriors and/or sock testers for Justin Boots.

By 11 p.m., even the janitors had gone home. The camera crew stood me against a tree and instructed me to do a poem. Jim had stayed. I asked if he could be in the picture.

"Why," they asked.

"Because," I said, "I do some dangerous lines, and he's my stunt poet."

They looked puzzled. Jim smiled.

We took each other home.

Notre (not the football team) Dame

We're standing in line outside Notre Dame Cathedral. We've already seen the interior of the church. Now we're waiting to go up and get a view from the top of the building.

It rained on us all during our 1¾-mile walk from Concord Place to Notre Dame, and it's not letting up. Sara has an umbrella that keeps closing on its own. I have a hat. I peer up through the rain at the famous "flying buttresses" that support the cathedral roof.

"Well, it's certainly bigger than the Alamo," I say to no one in particular. The young couple in line right behind us starts laughing. Turns out they are from Los Angeles. They are on their honeymoon. The woman is obviously a Southern California girl as she shivering even though she is wearing a hooded coat.

We stand in the rain for nearly an hour before our group is admitted. We climb a narrow circular stone staircase. About every 10 steps we make a complete revolution and gain maybe 10 feet in altitude. There are people in front of me and more people behind me. After about 200 steps, my muscles, such they are, are screaming for a break. But the staircase is too narrow for people to pass. If I stop, everyone behind me stops, too. I keep climbing. My heart, in its search for more oxygen, climbs up into my mouth, sits on my tongue and goes "THUMP! THUMP! THUMP!" The paramedics would have a tough time getting someone out of here.

After 300 steps we emerge into a room where we catch our breath. Eventually, the guide opens a small door, and we step outside onto a stone walkway that links the two church bell towers. It has stopped raining. From here we can see most of Paris — although low-hanging clouds limit visibility somewhat. Below, we see hundreds of tiny figures waiting in line to see the church interior.

The L.A. newlyweds approach us. They say the batteries in their digital camera are dead and ask if we have any extras. We don't, but I get their e-mail address, shoot a picture of them with Paris in the background and will e-mail it to them when we get home.

The most interesting thing about the top of Notre Dame is the Gargoyles — really ugly stone creatures that are supposed to ward off evil spirits. I shoot several pictures. Then Carl and I duck through another tiny door, climb some wooden stairs and inspect one of the cathedral bells. It is about 10 feet tall, as big around as a medium-sized room and weighs 13 tons. We speculate on how the builders got the bell up here 800 years ago.

Back out on the ramparts, we reunite with Sara and Judy who have climbed another 100 steps to the very top of one of the towers. Carl and I decide our view is good enough.

Back on the ground, we consult a map and after some wandering find the subway station. You have to use a computer terminal to buy your tickets. Since none of us read French, this turns into an interesting exercise. Sara finally figures it out. We get our tickets, then discover if we had pushed the right button we could have read the instructions in English.

The subway is relatively clean and packed with people. It is Saturday afternoon. I cannot imagine how crowded it must be on a weekday at rush hour. We talk among ourselves about how we will know when to get off. The Parisians around us obviously have us pegged as out-of-towners and give us blank or bemused stares. It only takes about 15 minutes to cover the three miles to our stop. A young man by the door holds it to make sure it doesn't snap shut before we get off. I give him my best "Merci."

A five-minute walk gets us back to the hotel, where we exchange stories with other tour members who weren't as daring. We are pretty proud of our adventure and the fact that we navigated Paris on our own.

Before arriving in Paris, I wasn't too excited about visiting the city. Now I wish we had more time.

Feds coddle California college

by William Perry Pendley

On April 5, 2005, the University of California at Santa Cruz (UCSC) hosted a job fair for students seeking to learn about post-graduate employment opportunities. Along with representatives of 60 companies such as Broadcom, Infineon, and American Express were Army, Navy, and Marine Corps recruiters. Within moments, however, 100 student-protesters infiltrated the job fair, surrounded the recruiters' tables, linked arms to deny access to those tables, and chanted anti-military rants. Meanwhile, another 200 student-protesters remained outside the building, barricading the entrances and cheering in support of their compatriots.

After what one reporter called "an hour of chaos and tension," during which the job fair came to a halt, UCSC officials asked the military recruiters to leave and advised protesters that they could distribute their anti-military literature.

On April 11, 2006, UCSC again hosted a job fair. Once again, recruiters from the Army and National Guard joined with other prospective employers; however, this time the U.S. Armed Forces representatives were placed in a separate room, apart from the other job fair participants, a room guarded by a dozen campus police. It was not enough; a riot broke out as protestors, who, according to one press report, included students and faculty, blocked the entrances and demanded that the recruiters be ejected from campus. Police responded as the violence escalated: one arrest was made and an automobile belonging to a recruiter was damaged. As in the previous year, the recruiters were

Retired generals: Iran is winning the Iraq war

By Andy Selepak

A group called the Iran Policy Committee held a press conference last month to declare that Iran, not the U.S., is winning the war in Iraq. The event featured the release of a new book, Baghdad Ablaze: How to Extinguish the Fires in Iraq.

Speakers agreed that while the Bush administration has handled the Iraq war badly, giving Iran a chance to exploit the conflict and make tremendous gains, an immediate pullout of U.S. forces would make the situation worse, giving Iran even more power.

The book was written by Georgetown University Professor Raymond Tanter; Lt. Gen. Thomas McNerney, U.S. Air Force (ret.); Maj. Gen. Paul Valley, U.S. Army (ret.); and R. Bruce McColm, the president of the Institute for Democratic Strategies.

Tanter and McColm, as well as William A. Nitze, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of State, and Jed Babbin, the editor of Human Events and former Deputy Under Secretary of Defense, were at the press conference.

McColm said a key mistake was de-Baathification, a purge of Saddam loyalists in the Iraqi government and military forces, which led to a political and military vacuum in Iraq that Iran has exploited for its own purposes. Babbin said that one of the big mistakes the U.S. made was occupying Iraq for the long term, rather than just draining “the swamp” and deposing the Saddam regime.

Babbin said the administration’s War on Terrorism is misleading because it needs to be a “War Against States that Sponsor Terrorism,” adding that “Iran is the central terrorist nation in the world” and is not being adequately confronted by the U.S. for its military interference in Iraq and the region. He said, for example, that U.S. military commanders know that explosive devices coming into Iraq to kill U.S. soldiers are from Iran.

McColm said Iran’s objective is to create an Islamic Republic in Iraq, in order to complement and facilitate the activities of Hezbollah in Lebanon and Hamas in Gaza. An Islamic Republic in Iraq would create a Shiite Crescent of influence and provide Iran with a direct land route to Syria to supply terrorists in Syria, Lebanon, and Gaza with military equipment.

However, McColm said, Iran faces problems of its own. He said that because of its failure to modernize its oil industry, Iran may not be able to export oil by 2015. Hence, the regime could lose international influence and stature. In addition, the regime faces serious internal opposition and dissent at home.

In Iraq, he said, Iran funds religious schools and mosques, especially in the Shiite-dominated south. Iran also has provided medical, charitable, and welfare assistance to the local Shiite populations that are in desperate need of such services in the face of an ineffective Iraqi government. Iran has seven Arabic language television stations that broadcast pro-Iranian messages to Iraq and influence elections there.

McColm said U.S. policy in the past actually encouraged Iranian influence in Iraq, mistakenly thinking this would help stabilize the country. McColm said U.S. policy should be to strengthen Iraq’s status as an independent nation and get it more involved in the global economy.

A big question is how U.S. forces could eventually be withdrawn. Tanter said there are several problems. One, the U.S. occupation of Iraq has become an excuse for terrorists to grow in power and influence. Two, Iraqis don’t like the U.S. occupation and want their own forces to provide security. And three, Iran is providing Sunni and Shiite insurgents with training, weapons and funding.

Internally, the big problems include the failure to devise a strategy to share the country’s oil reserves, creating a democratic government where people and not parties are represented, and dispelling years of distrust and violence between Sunni and Shiite. A failed state in Iraq could mean a more powerful Iran, and a Shiite Crescent that will supply Hamas and Hezbollah with the means and military might to strike against Lebanon and Israel.

In order for the U.S. to leave, speakers said, Iraqi forces must be bolstered and Iran’s infiltration of weapons, intelligence operatives, and radical ideology into Iraq must be stopped.

The Iran Policy Committee offered the following six steps to ebb the flow of violence, decrease Iran’s growing presence in Iraq, and eventually bring home U.S. troops.

- Prevent Tehran from infiltrating its paramilitary and intelligence forces into Iraq by stopping them at the border and/or arresting them in Iraq.
- Isolate the Iranian regime diplomatically and economically to constrain its influence in Iraq.
- Enlist the Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK), the Iranian opposition in Iraq and the only militia that supports the U.S., to wean Sunnis from the insurgency and break the cycle of sectarian violence.
- Empower the Iranian people by de-listing the MEK from the Foreign Terrorist Organizations lists of the United States and the European Union.
- Win Iraqi support to take down Iranian proxies in Iraq, including disarming the militias.
- Support Iraqi economic growth, while decreasing Iran’s role in the Iraqi economy.

De-listing the MEK appears to be a critical point. The Clinton administration designated the MEK as a terrorist group, one of many concessions the U.S. made to Iran. But Tanter believes that U.S. support for the MEK can force Iran to back down in Iraq and help stabilize the situation there.

Some speakers suggested that Iran also could be confronted by its Sunni Arab neighbors.

In a statement released at the event, Gens. McNerney and Valley said, “With renewed threats to the Sunni Arab world, blatant interference in Iraq, and a nuclear Iran on the horizon, there are signs of a Sunni Arab awakening. As proposed in Baghdad Ablaze, such a realization of the Iranian threat could be the basis for greater cooperation between the United States and the Sunni Arab world to isolate Iran. The Iranian threat to the Sunni world is approaching the same gravity as the threat to Israel.”

asked to leave the campus, which they did, to the regret of at least one student, who said: “It’s frustrating. I’m not a Republican. I’m not a conservative. I don’t support the war. It’s about finding a career.”

There was one difference: the riot at UCSC made national news. Bill O’Reilly of Fox News opened his show the next evening with footage of the disturbing images from California, which included darkly clad, mask-wearing, noisy protesters marching shoulder-to-shoulder across the UCSC campus. Much of O’Reilly’s discussion with his guests concerned the Solomon Amendment, which requires colleges and universities, on pain of losing federal funds, to grant military recruiters the same access allowed other prospective employers. Just one month earlier, the U.S. Supreme Court, in an 8-0 ruling, had upheld the constitutionality of the federal law, to which various unidentified law schools and professors had objected. One of O’Reilly’s guests, noting the unanimous ruling, stated that he had urged Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld to withhold the $80 million that UCSC receives annually.

Nonetheless, the Department of Defense took no action regarding the inability of its recruiters to appear at UCSC job fairs. Then, in January 2007, the UCSC cancelled a job fair scheduled for later that month given safety concerns related to its expectation of the type of protest that took place in 2006. Finally, on April 25, 2007, UCSC “anti-war activists held a celebratory rally” after learning that Army and Marine Corps recruiters had pulled out of the April job fair, just one day after UCSC officials had warned them that as many as 400 students would protest their presence on campus. While one student had the courage to speak out against the inability of military recruiters to appear on campus (“There’s actually quite a few moderate and conservative students on this campus who are likely to be in the closet for fear of reprisal.”), there was no comment from the Defense Department.

There will be one now. On July 25, 2007, Young America’s Foundation (YAF), a non-profit organization committed to ensuring that young Americans understand and are inspired by the ideas of individual freedom, a strong national defense, free enterprise, and traditional values and one of the nation’s most active groups on America’s college campuses, sued Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates. YAF’s demand is simple: declare UCSC in violation of the Solomon Amendment and withhold the federal funds that it would otherwise receive until military recruiters can appear safely at its job fairs.

THANK YOU
We would like to thank everyone for the cards, flowers, food, thoughts, and prayers for Jack Dickey and family. We especially want to thank the Homedale Police Department, all of the fellow officers and friends, for the Honorable services that they provided. The Officers at Post, the Bag Pipes, the Flag Ceremony, and Taps that was played, were a real honor. We can't even begin to tell you how proud we were to have our Dad remembered that way. Thank you and God bless you all! Barbara and Chris Norton, Irma and Dick Shenk, Dave and Maureen Dickey, Rita and Chick Jacobsen

Owyhee County Fair and Rodeo

Explosion halts rodeo — Arcing power lines throw off sparks and ignite the power pole outside the Rodeo Arena press box during Wednesday's first night of action. It was the first of two consecutive nights during which power went out to the arena and prolonged the event until the early-morning hours. Photo by WT Bruce Photography

Tough draw on a Saturday night — Josh Seid flies out of the chute aboard #226, nicknamed Bloodsport. Seid was bucked off and — despite the second-best score in the long go — received no score and hurt his leg. Photo by WT Bruce Photography
