Homedale progress in a holding pattern?

As business closes elsewhere, airport group eager to take off

Council balks at helping grant process

Debate sparks angry reaction from airport
supporters

A discussion on matching funds for a Homedale Municipal Airport grant veered off-course Wednesday as skepticism and frugality took flight at the Homedale City Council meeting.

The fireworks began after city Public Works Supervisor Larry Bauer, who also serves as airport manager, announced that the state Division of Aeronautics had unexpectedly offered Homedale a chance at up to $187,500 in grant money to help shore up under-developed areas of the airport's tarmac.

"The FAA jumped our grant (application window) by a couple of years," Bauer said, referring to the early arrival of the funding opportunity.

Bauer told the council that the city had to put up $62,500 in matching funds (about one-third of the grant total) — either cash or in-kind —

Homedale lumberyard closes shop

Signs on the door tell the story: Snake River Lumber on Pioneer Road has fallen victim to the downturn in the home construction industry.

SR Lumber dries up in construction drought

Homedale yard's closure blamed on lack of contractor business; buyer may be on horizon

The slumping economy has claimed an area business, but it could be making a comeback before too long.

Snake River Lumber owner Dave Holton confirmed Wednesday afternoon that the Pioneer Road business outside Homedale has closed its doors.

A sign on the showroom doors at the Pioneer Road business said the company had been closed since Wednesday, Aug. 6.

Holton said the slowdown in the construction industry precipitated the decision.

OCSO fees set to rise

The Owyhee County Board of Commissioners is poised to bring civil process fees in line with surrounding counties.

A public hearing has been called for 10 a.m. on Monday, Sept. 15, in Murphy to receive testimony on raising by $10 the fee charged by the sheriff's office for the service of court documents in civil proceedings such as evictions,

County rate of return not so bleak

Owyhee County government will receive more money in interest in fiscal year 2008 than was reported in last week's article on the FY 2009 budget, county Treasurer Brenda Richards said this week.

For a story in last week's edition of The Owyhee Avalanche, county Clerk Charlotte Sherburn said that the county would draw less interest in 2008 than it did on investments in 2007.

But Richards said last week that the gap isn't nearly as drastic as what the Avalanche reported in its Aug. 13 edition.

Richards said that with two months left in FY 2008, the

City presents transportation plan open house Thursday

Homedale residents will get a chance to chime in on what transportation needs are important to them during an open house at City Hall on Thursday.

Project Engineering Consultants will present the open house on the Transportation Master Plan from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at City Hall, 30 W. Wyoming Ave.

PEC civil engineer Ryan Lancaster announced the open house during Thursday's Homedale Chamber of Commerce meeting at Owyhee Lanes Restaurant.

Lancaster said input may steer how Homedale officials proceed in any future projects for road paving, drainage systems and sidewalk improvements such as American Disabilities Act-accessible ramps at intersections.

"The schools are concerned about sidewalks and safe walking paths, especially out toward Homedale Middle School," Lancaster said as an example.

✓ Fees: Commissioners set Sept. 15 for public hearing

divorce cases and lawsuits.

The hearing will take place inside Courtroom 2 at the Owyhee County Courthouse.

The fee now stands at $45, which includes $20 for service of the papers, a $20 return fee and $5 for mileage.

The commissioners will hear testimony on bumping the fee to $55, adding $5 to the service fee and $5 to the mileage charge.

"We just took a bunch of other counties in Idaho and did some averaging and came up with what we want to move to," Sheriff Gary Aman said.

Aman said the revenue generated by any approved increase would be "minimal" in relation to the tightening budgets he oversees.

"Costs are going up," he said, adding that the reason for the fee increase is primarily fuel costs but also is an effort to move service charges more in line with surrounding counties.

A complete copy of all fees that are earmarked for increase can be obtained from the County Clerk's office in Murphy from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Rules catch farmers off-guard

A Marsing Rural Fire District official says area farmers were surprised by new field-burning regulations put in place by the state earlier this month.

Roman Usabel said the fire district received a letter from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality dated Aug. 8, seven days after the agency began accepting burn permit registrations from farmers.

The timing couldn't have been worse, Usabel said.

Under new DEQ rules, farmers must register for a permit to burn crop residue 30 days before they want to burn. The problem with that, Usabel said, is that many farmers want to burn right away to put in a new crop.

"Some of them say they want to plant alfalfa next week," Usabel said on Aug. 12. "The only good thing I can say (about the new rules) is straw's valuable, so they're not going to burn it; they're going to bale it."

Producers also must pay the $2-per-acre burn fee at least seven days before the burn. Growers will be notified on the proposed burn date whether burning will be allowed that day.

DEQ is expanding air quality rules statewide, with the burning seasons set to begin Sept. 2. Burn days will be limited to weekdays during daylight hours, and the agency has prohibited burning bales of old hay and straw.

HPD searches for new officer

The Homedale Police Department will likely be adding another new face this year.

The department is taking applications for an entry-level police officer and posted the position online Aug. 12.

"We're pulling extra hours," Chief Jeff Eidemiller said Thursday, "It's a tough time right now to find a replacement officer."

The chief assured Homedale residents that they would not see a reduction in service.

Recent hire Steve Atkins will be continuing in a volunteer role, but will not be attending Idaho's Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Academy until the spring of 2009. Given that Atkins can, by law, only patrol with another officer, Eidemiller said the Homedale reserve officer had gone back to work part-time with his former employer, Campbell Tractor, until he could complete his Level 1 law enforcement training.

The department may face an additional personnel shortfall if Cpl. Perry Grant is reactivated for military duty, the primary reason Grant stated for his withdrawal from the Owyhee County Sheriff's race.

In other news, the department has its new software from Computer Arts in Meridian, Eidemiller said. The instructor from Computer Arts hasn't yet made contact with the department's operator, he said.

The system software was updated this summer following several years of incomplete reports to the state's crime statistics program.

Police, fire personnel to greet children during bowling event

Fun and games planned; HPD will fingerprint for ID kits, too

Police and fire personnel from Homedale and Wilder will be on hand Saturday to help with the first Bowling Blast Off community event.

Conjured up by Owyhee Lanes Restaurant owners Donna and Mike Marose, the event will feature several activities geared toward youth as well as a door prize raffle with proceeds benefiting the Homedale Youth Bowling scholarship fund.

The event takes place from noon to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

"The idea behind the entire day is to have families enjoy time doing something local, fun and to get to know the people involved with the fire department and police department," Donna Marose said.

"If we can draw kids into something positive when they are in elementary and middle school, we have a better chance of keeping them positive as they continue into high school."

Marose said the portion of North 1st Street East in front of the bowling alley will be closed to allow for an Astro Jump and other activities for the children. All activities are free, and door prize tickets are five for $1.

Each child will be able to bowl for one hour for free with assistance from youth bowling leaders, and there also will be free ice cream from Owyhee Ice Cream Co., free snacks, a clown and face-painting, fingerprinting and photos for children ID kits by the Homedale Police Department, a police dog demonstration by the Wilder K-9 unit and a Homedale fire truck open to tours.

All ages are welcome, and children will receive a punch card on which each activity is counted. Marose said children can bring the punch card back to Owyhee Lanes for the next month after the event for free bowling.

The youth bowling scholarship fund helps bring underprivileged children into the program and also helps pay for travel to state tournaments, Marose said.

Other sponsors include King Excavation, Sysco Foods of Idaho and the Homedale Youth Bowling League.

For more information on the event or sponsorship, call 337-3757.

Marsing mulls makeover for misdemeanors

Five contractors submit qualifying water project bids

Marsing's fiscal year 2009 budget was passed without comment on Wednesday evening at a city council meeting that saw no surprises.

The budget and the annual appropriations ordinance (taxes) were passed at the meeting's outset.

Sgt. Gary Olsen of the Owyhee County Sheriff's Office brought a draft of an addendum to the city's law enforcement services contract with OCSO as concerned the protocol for pursuing ordinance violations in Marsing.

The proposed addendum would stipulate that the city agents responding to an ordinance violation on an investigation of a property would, in a case where they feared for their safety, be accompanied by a deputy during the examination of the property in question. Any infractions would be investigated and written up by a city agent, the usual warning letter would be sent to the property owner, and then, should the situation not be resolved, the case would go straight into the hands of the on-duty deputy, who would issue the citation to the property owner. Second or further violations by the same address wouldn't even require a city agent to perform another examination of the property. They could simply take a picture, write the citation and have the deputy deliver it.

"We just want to avoid city staff being in an unsafe position," Olsen said.

As part of this official description of process, Olsen passed along the Sheriff Gary Aman's suggestion that the many misdemeanor ordinances on Marsing's books become infractions. Mayor Keith Green and the council agreed with the suggestion and will have City Attorney Stephanie Bonney begin work on the

A different kind of iron-on

Marsing and Homedale are both adding some thermoplastic crosswalks in high-traffic areas. Marsing has laid eight of the new pedestrian crossings, outlined by the reflective thermoplastic. The sections Homedale has purchased cost $560, with an added $250 in shipping to get the material here from North Carolina, Homedale Public Works Supervisor Larry Bauer said during a city council meeting last week. Homedale rented the required 800-degree bonding torch from Marsing to install the stripes, meant to last 10 years, on the pavement.

That shift from misdemeanor to infraction will allow the city to lighten the load on the county court system, as well as ensuring that a larger portion of any penalty for an infraction goes to the city, the council agreed. It will also allow those facing an infraction to mail their cited penalty in, via the county officers in Murphy, rather than appear for court. In the event that an individual received multiple citations, the infractions would result in a misdemeanor and a possible court appearance, Mayor Green confirmed.

Olsen reported that 365 man-hours had been expended in patrols and calls in Marsing during the preceding month, a number that he said was slightly low because of his being a man short. The department had to rotate a deputy into the jail in order to help out, given that the jail has two officers out for an extended time because of medical reasons, the sergeant said.

Departmental reports from City Engineer Amy Woodruff and Head of Maintenance Danny Martin noted that the water and sewer projects were on track and moving forward.

Five contractors prequalified for the water project's next phase, Woodruff said, and bids will open Aug. 28 on the city water tank and well installations. Final designs on the distribution plans for the system were 90 percent done, she said, and, with the bidding process upcoming, the city will know just how much money they have to work with by the end of August.

Martin reported that all the new crosswalks were in position in Marsing. He also informed the council of a request by Larry Bauer, Homedale's Public Works Supervisor, to rent the special bonding torch used to anchor the heat-sealing material used in the new crosswalks. Homedale had purchased some of the material for its own streets, but had not purchased the $800 torch used to bond the material to the asphalt, and had instead hoped to rent one, Martin said. As it turned out, no torches were available for rent, and Bauer had inquired of Martin as to renting Marsing's torch. The council was amenable to the idea.

After some discussion over what should be charged, it was decided to offer to rent the torch for $50 to the City of Homedale.

Martin asked the council for guidance on a request for irrigation water from a property located on Main Street in Marsing. The property owner pays irrigation water and maintenance fees, though there is no actual delivery system to bring any irrigation water to the property. Martin wanted to pass the request along, and expressed his concerns that multiple owners might all make similar requests, as many properties along north Main do have irrigation rights and pay the fees.

"When they ask, I need to know what to tell them," he said.

After discussion, the council decided to have city attorney Bonney look into the details of just what the city was responsible for, and what options were available.

During the public comment portion of the meeting, Marsing resident Jim Thomas brought up a concern with the many overhanging boughs of trees along city streets.

"I like trees, and Marsing has a lot of trees," Thomas began. He went on to point out that many of these trees are hanging low enough over streets that larger vehicles like delivery trucks or moving vans must swerve to avoid limbs. That, he said, was a chance for an accident. Mayor Green said he would look into the situation, as well as explore which ordinances might cover the problem.

Lyndell Jackson of the Snake River Scenic Byway spoke briefly. The Byway committee has managed to raise the $12,500 needed to secure the $50,000 matching funds grant from the state, and the project is continuing forward. She invited input on the next phase of the project, during which the locations for signs, pull-outs and restrooms along the route would be decided.

Ranchers turn out for state grazing lease meeting

Ranchers, growers and others turned out in force to give their views on state land lease applications Aug. 11 in Nampa.

Brenda Richards, Owyhee County Treasurer and Owyhee Cattleman's Association director, attended the meeting at the Nampa Civic Center.

"I went to the Department of Lands meeting, and they had a good presentation with a question and answer period," Richards wrote in a response to The Owyhee Avalanche.

The hearing saw a great turnout of those seeking to give input on the setting of standards in the lease renewal process for state grazing lands, and the room was filled to overflowing, Richards said.

"There were over 30 people in attendance, not including the State Lands people or Clive Strong and Attorney General Wasden from the Governor's office," she said.

The Idaho Department of Lands (IDL) is reviewing the process used in renewing leases, to update that process for any contested leases and to make sure that leased lands are bringing the best rate of return to the endowment fund as required by law, Richards said.

Comments will be taken by the IDL until Sept. 12, and the information from last week's meeting is available through to Idaho Department of Lands, Attn.: Grazing Subcommittee, P.O. Box 83720, Boise, ID 83720-0050.

Comments may be submitted via e-mail, fax, or mail. The subcommittee's e-mail address is grazing\_subcommittee@idl.idaho.gov.

✓ County: Interest earned in current year close to 2007 county has earned more than $178,500 in interest — $80,000 more than originally reported. Yet Richards said the county still will come up short of matching 2007 returns. “We have two months of interest left for this fiscal year, but I do not anticipate (remaining interest) to be over $13,000 total,” Richards wrote in an e-mail. That would put the county at about $191,500 in interest payments for FY 2008, only $8,500 off the $200,000 in returns for 2007.

“The longer-term investments we are able to make that are completely secure and backed are making the best rate of return,” Richards said.

Those investments are drawing and average of 4.37 percent.

Lower interests are still hurting the rate of return, though. The Local Government Pool investment, which is handled through the state, paid only 2.4777 percent in July, down 47.3 percent from the rate of return a year earlier, Richards said.

✓ Grant: Doubled leases floated as an idea to beef up airport's revenue to qualify for the full amount of the grant. He stressed that the city didn't have to accept the full amount of the grant, meaning fewer matching funds would be required for a smaller grant.

The council has until Sept. 5 to pass a resolution declaring the city's intent to pursue the grant.

Bauer said that leveling the seven acres adjacent to the airport — 3½ acres of which the council already has dedicated to airport expansion — would help generate about half of the needed capital for matching funds through the sale of excess city-owned gravel once the leveling work was complete.

The leveling project would cost about $15,000, and Bauer recommended leveling the entire seven acres even though only half of the parcel has been earmarked for airport use at this time.

Mayor Harold Wilson suggested paying for the leveling project with part of the carryover in the economic development line item established by the council under then-Mayor Paul Fink for fiscal year 2008. City Clerk and Treasurer Alice Pegram said the city brought all but $3,500 of that $40,000 fund forward for FY 2009.

"It isn't like the city doesn't have the money to do it," Wilson said.

— Ed Leavitt

Homedale businessman, prospective airport tenant

After a long, often heated discussion involving city officials and airport business owners, Wilson's request that the council appropriate money to level the land died for lack of a motion.

Wilson was defiant after the motion died. Before moving on to the next agenda item he said:

"Some day they'll (council members) realize that the workers down there (at the airport) are bringing money into the city."

Councilmen Dave Downum and Tim Downing voiced opposition to spending money out of the city's general fund to level the land.

"I'm against taking taxpayers' money and putting it into the airport," Downing said.

Downum suggested selling 3½ acres of U.S. Highway 95 frontage to help build money to develop the airport, which drew the ire of Kitfox Aircraft LLC co-owner John McBean, who suggested the council opposed the development of the airport.

"The property tax from the airport goes into the general fund, and now you're saying we don't have a right to it, and that bothers me," McBean said.

Another suggestion for raising matching funds was doubling the current airport lease rate from 2.5 cents per square foot to 5 cents per square foot as well as charging at $1,000 development fee to anyone who wants to build a new hangar on the 3½-acre expansion zone.

Wilson said, based on FY 2008 figures, doubling the lease amount would bring in $8,000 in FY 2009. McBean and Carl Johnson — another airport businessman in attendance — said they weren't opposed to paying twice as much for their land, with McBean calling such a rate "reasonable" and probably acceptable to future lessees. McBean also said there were three "solid" parties interested in building hangars right away and that there was little opposition to paying the development fee.

Wilson said the city would make the leveling investment back in a few years through increased lease payments and the development fee, but Downing questioned why development had to be rushed.

Downing said he talked to mayors who also have airports in their cities and he said none of those officials looked favorably upon drawing down the general fund to match a grant. He suggested waiting a few years to let the airport fund build with higher leases and development fees.

"I find it hard to believe there will be less demand four years from now at the airport," Downing said.

"The demand will be there, but you'll lose four that are interested now," McBean countered.

In all, McBean said he has heard from as many as a dozen people interested in building hangars in Homedale.

One of the people who wants to build at the airport, Specialty Inc. Wood Products owner Ed Leavitt, also attended the meeting. He angrily rushed out of the council chamber after debating that the city's original intent in buying the seven acres was for airport expansion and for no other purpose.

Invoking the closure of Snake River Lumber and Rafter 4 Feed Store, Leavitt argued that the city's focus on where to spend development dollars was misguided.

"One thing that I think that the city has gotta look at, too, (is) the rest of our town just keeps closing businesses and the airport's growing," Leavitt said. "Where do you want to put the money? The town's dying, but the airport just keeps growing."

McBean earlier had said that his company employs 10 workers, some of whom are shopping for homes in the area and others who have placed their children in the Homedale School District.

After he asked the council earlier in Wednesday's meeting to approve $1,000 to pay a retired engineering specialist to help Homedale pursue the feasibility of a Local Improvement District to rebuild downtown infrastructure, Wilson seemingly sided with Leavitt's sentiment:

"What's going to benefit the city more?" he asked. "Sidewalks or employing 10 people at the airport?"

✓ Snake River: Owner says lack of expansion opportunity played a part

"It's basically due to economic conditions," he said. "(The lumber yard) was primarily based for home building. Any type of building was the primary income. We haven't been able to make a profit for some time."

As many as 11 people — mostly from Owyhee County — worked at Snake River Lumber, which was formerly known as Jump Creek Lumber until about three years ago. Jobs were steadily trimmed during the past year, Holton said, until the final decision.

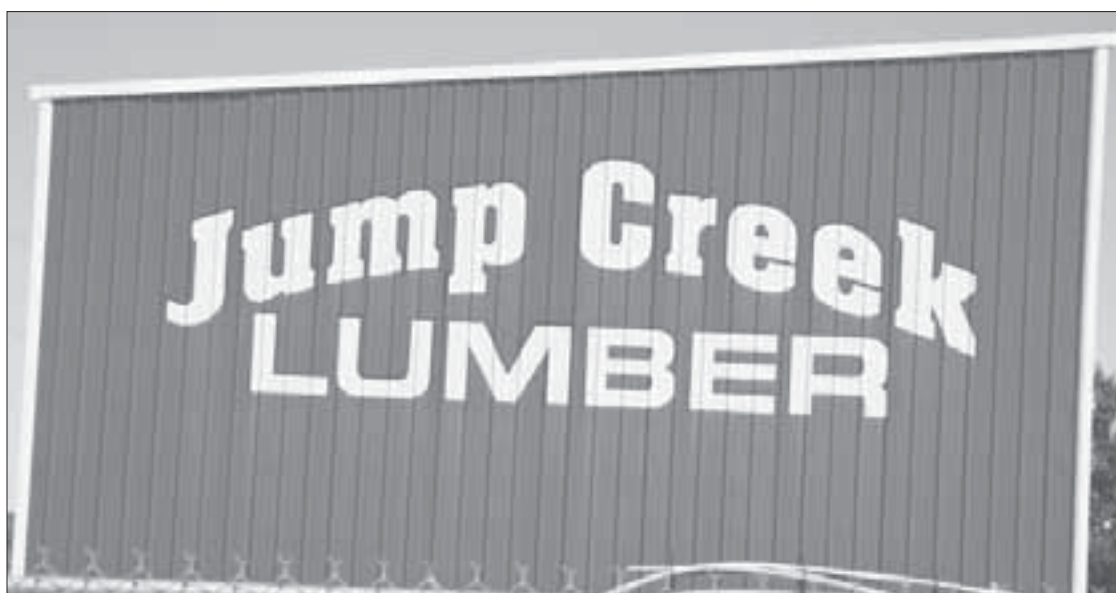

But the shutdown may not last long. Holton said there is a local buyer trying to make a deal for the business, and he expects resolution on the details within 30 days.

He declined to disclose the identity of the prospective buyer.

"We had been contemplating it for 90 days now, and things got to the point where we were negotiating back and forth and it didn't make sense to keep it open because we were losing too much money every month and there was no way to cut any more cost."

A 10-year Owyhee County resident, Holton bought the business about four years ago. It's located adjacent to Filler King, which owns the approximately three acres on which the yard is built.

Holton said while the yard is closed, a bookkeeper and a yard man — Paul Campbell of Mars-ing — remain on the payroll as the loose ends of business are tied up.

"Basically what we're trying to do is to finish up on all receivables and all payables and get a good count on inventory," Holton said.

He said that the inventory count could have an impact on whether the business transaction goes through. If a new buyer isn't found, Holton said the remaining inventory will be liquidated in a sale.

The disappearance of the lumberyard closes a chapter on Homedale business that grabbed headlines beginning two years ago when then-Mayor Paul Fink proposed leasing seven acres south of Homedale Municipal Airport to Holton for an expanded lumberyard and retail operation.

Fink's proposal was met with stiff opposition from other business owners clamoring that the city had to open the seven-acre parcel to public bidding for a lease.

"We wanted to convert the organization to more of a retail-type organization, and it's pretty hard to do retail in this location (Pioneer Road)," Holton said.

"We just thought if we could get it out there that we could increase the retail by a substantial amount of business because we didn't want it to stay just primarily a construction-related-type lumber company because we didn't feel that that was a sustainable-type business. It needed to change and convert more to retail."

Holton envisioned a home improvement center catering to contractors as well as weekend home improvement warriors, citing the contractor-only angle as "too volatile for long-term" viability.

He also said the makeup of the current location was too restrictive to allow expansion to a 10,000-square-foot showroom plus lumberyard.

Holton abandoned the idea of moving to the land near U.S. Highway 95 and set his sights on a commercial-residential-mixed development on the Trout Farms property on Kansas Avenue in Homedale. The owner of Holton Homes planned to build a retail lumberyard as anchor for a commercial center built next to a subdivision that would have featured approximately 80 home sites.

Holton said the deal fell through when the two sides couldn't agree on a price for the farmland.

While Holton has shuttered Snake River Lumber, he insists there is a market for the type of business into which he wanted the yard to evolve.

"I think it's still a much-needed entity out there," he said. "It's the right location, and if there's a change in the mix of product there, I think it would be a very viable business."

In fact, Holton is rooting for the resurrection of the business.

"My hope is it's sold, and it's fired back up," he said. "It's a pretty crucial need for the community."

Your finances Family well-being is priority over the credit sharks

Dear Dave,

I lost my job a few months ago. My wife works, but she doesn't make much money, and we also have three kids. I'm still trying to keep up my credit card payments, but next month I know I'll be late and they'll start adding fees. In all, I have about $60,000 in debt and that includes payments on a $20,000 car. I don't know how to handle the situation anymore.

— Geraldo

Dear Geraldo,

The first thing you need to do is sell that car. You can't afford a $20,000 car when you're $60,000 in debt. And really, the credit cards are the least of your worries. What you need is an overall game plan. You don't have a debt crisis as much as you have a career crisis.

You need to be delivering pizzas or throwing boxes at UPS tonight! You've got to do something to get some money going, even if it's not on the level of what you were doing before. A thousand or $1,200 a month doesn't sound like a lot, but it'll go a long way in keeping the wolf away from the door.

And when you're not working, you need to be pounding the pavement looking for a real job. With a wife and family, you've got some big responsibilities, man. There are good jobs out there, but you've got to get out and make it happen.

What you've been doing is honorable, but right now the credit card companies can wait. They'll fuss and threaten, but your family needs to come first. Take care of the basics before anything else — food, clothing, shelter, transportation and utilities.

Then, you can take care of the credit sharks with whatever is left!

— Dave

Dear Dave,

My little brother is getting married soon. Together, he and his wife will make about $35,000 a year. The other day he told me he's working on a deal to buy a $70,000 trailer, and has already put $500 toward the purchase. The deal isn't final yet, so what can I do to convince him this is a bad idea?

— Doug

Dear Doug,

Go knock him in the head and stop him!

Seriously, take this kid on a ride around town and let him have a good look at the trailers people bought in the last few years. You can practically see the money draining out of them.

A trailer is just about the largest purchase you can make that will go down in value. It's like a car you sleep in! If you bought a $70,000 trailer three years ago, it would be worth about $30,000 now. That's not what I call a wise investment.

If he were my little brother and I had the money, I'd pay him $500 just to walk away from the deal. He's looking at the trailer like it's a dinky little house, but here's the difference. If he buys a small $70,000 home, at least the thing is going to go up in value.

I'm not badmouthing people who live in trailers here, Doug. I'm badmouthing trailers. Call them trailers, mobile homes — whatever. They're a bad place to stick your money!

McRae has golden memories, but no golden ticket

Kara McRae of Homedale tried her singing voice in the Salt Lake City audition for American Idol at the end of July. While she didn't make it past the first round of judges, nor get the coveted golden ticket, she has no regrets about the trip, nor does her mother, Debbie McRae.

"There were some crazies that got in — I mean some really weird ones — but the best part was when we were in line for hours and hours, there were amazing, talented musicians. People were singing and jamming, and you're thinking 'Why are we even here?' — these people are so amazing," Debbie said. "But you know what? None of them made it either."

It was an early start, though. "It went great. We headed up on Saturday, and woke up at three in the morning, then lined up at the Energy Solution Arena at 4:30, so we were right in the front of the line, behind about 200 people," Kara said. She said that approximately 7,000 people turned up to audition.

"Right about seven, the line started to move. In line, we heard a bunch of great people, like everyone was singing. It was pretty intimidating because there were a lot of people that were better than I thought that there would be," Kara said.

That first day, Monday, July 28, Kara registered. Tuesday, July 29, was another big day with a 3 a.m. wakeup call. This time they stood in line until about 9 a.m., though the wait went quickly when surrounded by talented singers and musicians, she said. Since she was again in the front of the line, Kara and her mother both got to do the "welcome to the American Idol" cheering crowd scene that opens every city/season of the popular Fox television show.

"We did it, like, a hundred times, so you might see me," she said.

The contestants then joined into large groups and sang one of the mandatory songs, "Ain't No Mountain High Enough", popularized by Marvin Gaye and Tammi Terrell in 1967. Then it was time to meet with the producers.

"They'd call us by section, and luckily I was in the pregnant section, I don't know why, but our section got to go first because they were worried about the pregnant people," Kara said.

Two- or three-hundred people sang before Kara, and of those she only saw two or three go through with the coveted golden ticket in hand. Singers would sing in groups of four, each individual singing for the producers, who would then decide who would make it to the first round of the show and meet the Big Three — Simon Cowell, Randy Jackson and Paula Abdul — who await the contestants on-set in Hollywood.

"Right before I went, there was this really weird guy. I heard him sing and he was awful, and he was all dancing and he was really bad ... and he got through," Kara said. "I guess you have to be wacky to get through."

Kara sang "The Way I Am" by Ingrid Michaelson.

"I thought it went pretty good, but I didn't get through, unfortunately," she said.

Still, not making it to the next round was minor compared to the fun of being at American Idol.

"It was such a good experience, and I plan on going, like, every year. My mom and I were thinking we may even have to go to two cities next year," she said. "It was so much fun — it was a blast, even though we had to wake up at three in the morning."

"We will do it again because we had so much fun standing in line," Debbie agreed. "I told Kara, 'You couldn't pay to have this much fun.'"

Earning a Bachelor's in Elementary Education from Westminster College in 1986, Moylan has spent the bulk of her career at St. Mark's Catholic School and the Caldwell School District.

Their Future Starts Today

Idaho Power's legacy of low-cost electrical service spans nearly a century—powering the homes, farms, businesses and schools of our communities. Today, we are working to ensure future generations enjoy the same comfortable and secure lifestyles we do.

As all of us use more electricity, it becomes more valuable, more precious and more expensive.

To keep pace with growing demand, Idaho Power must invest $100s of millions annually in our electrical system. This inevitably results in higher prices.

The future calls for wise energy use, planning and responsible spending today to build an electrical system meeting the needs of our energy future.

Old-time fun in the sun

The Jordan Valley Junior Rodeo went off without a hitch Saturday, with more than 100 local youths from age 9 to 18 competing in calf roping, cow riding, breakaway roping, team roping and barrels. Competitors received buckles, some cash prizes for older kids, tack and more.

Mtn. View Nazarene fair in chutes again

Music, roping and worship will share space Saturday, Sept. 7, at the Owyhee County Fairgrounds in Homedale for the second Mountain View Church of the Nazarene Family Fair and Roundup.
Admission is free.
Organizers are hoping that the team roping and breakaway roping events will be held on-site this year. A year ago, rainy weather forced the roping to Gene King's arena outside Marsing.
“We had a great turnout considering the weather,” event publicist Jo Howell said. “Between 600 and 700 people came to all the different events.

The gates open at 9 a.m. with a Cowboy Church service in the rodeo arena from 10 a.m. to 12:10 p.m.
Roping sign-in will take place between 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., with the roping events running from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
For information on entering the roping competition, call Michael-ann Seiders at 989-6517.
A day of country gospel and bluegrass also is on the slate, with several local musical groups providing entertainment throughout the day.
Concessions will be sold, too, with proceeds going toward Mountain View mission work.

Chemical co.’s subsidiary buys Dairyland Seed

Homedale plant manager expects business as usual after Dow takes over

No major changes are expected at the Dairyland Seed Co. plant on West Idaho Avenue in Homedale in the wake of Dow AgroSciences gobbling up the alfalfa seed conditioning facility’s 101-year-old parent company.

Indianapolis-based Dow AgroSciences announced in an Aug. 8 press release that it had acquired both West Bend, Wis.-based Dairyland Seed Co., and its affiliate, Bio-Plant Research of Camp Point, Ill.

Doug Gross, operations manager at Dairyland’s Homedale plant, said no changes in the local work force was to be expected. Gross has served at the Homedale plant since 2000 when Dairyland acquired the facility through the bankruptcy dispersal of AgriBioTech assets. The Homedale plant employs 16 full-time and part-time employees.

A subsidiary of the Dow Chemical Co., Dow AgroSciences officials said the company would continue to market seeds under the Dairyland name.

“Dairyland Seed has a product portfolio and brand that strengthens our corn, soybean and alfalfa business in the U.S. and globally,” Dow AgroSciences president and CEO Jerome Peribere said in the Aug. 8 press release.

The agreement includes all Dairyland crop genetics, brands, plant breeding programs in hybrid alfalfa, hybrid corn and soybeans as well as Dairyland’s research, processing and production locations.

In addition to Homedale, Dairyland also has other locations in Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois and California.

Dow AgroSciences said the closing of the deal is expected later this month. No other details were released.

City requests Master Plan feedback

Sage Community Resources has developed three surveys to poll different segments of the people who visit, live or own businesses in Homedale. The surveys, available at local businesses and also being delivered to residents, must be returned to one of many collection points by Sept. 12.

Surveys will help Homedale build revitalization strategy

Development assistance group sets Sept. 12 deadline for responses

Homedale is working on a Master Plan, and last week enlisted the Chamber of Commerce’s help in putting together a picture of what the future should be.

Pat Engel, Business and Community Development director for Sage Community Services, passed out surveys to business representatives at Thursday’s monthly Chamber luncheon held at Owyhee Lanes Restaurant.

There are three surveys — business, resident and customer — that will help Sage formulate ideas for a design plan for downtown revitalization.

“It gives businesses a feel for what customers want to see downtown,” Engel said.

The master plan is vital in putting Homedale in a good light for any future grant applications, Engel said.

The city is preparing to apply for a $450,000 grant from the Idaho Department of Commerce to start building sidewalks, curbs and gutters in town.

“Our job is to get you to the table and present your case and start implementing plans,” Engel said of Sage’s role in the grant application process.

The residential survey will be sent to residents, while business leaders at Thursday’s luncheon were asked to help distribute the customer survey and fill out the business survey.

The deadline to return surveys is Sept. 12.

Engel asked businesses owners to have their up-front personnel persuade customers to fill out the surveys. Chamber president Gavin Parker suggested 10 businesses take 10 surveys each, and he also said that Chamber secretary Robin Aberasturi would e-mail copies of the survey to both Chamber and non-Chamber businesses to get better coverage for the survey responses.

The city is putting a note on residents’ water bills to tackle the residential survey, and city maintenance personnel will distribute residential surveys, too.

Engel said there would be survey collection locations at Paul’s Market on East Wyoming Avenue, Bowen Parker Day CPAs on East Wyoming, Owyhee Lanes Restaurant on North 1st Street West and City Hall on West Wyoming Avenue.

Engel said responses would be confidential, but stressed the importance of getting the public feedback. She mentioned the Transportation Master Plan that Project Engineering Consultants is working on for the city when stressing how crucial returning the surveys is.

“It’s really important to weigh in,” Engel said. “Just like the transportation thing, there will be some

Council hires retiree to gauge popularity of LID proposal

The Homedale City Council at its Wednesday meeting hired a former employee of the Caldwell engineering department to start getting a feel for downtown business property owners’ support of a Local Improvement District levy.

The council approved $1,000 to pay Gene Enebo $20 per hour for 50 hours of work.

Enebo’s contract is part of an overall plan to apply for a Idaho Department of Commerce community block grant to help finance downtown infrastructure improvements. Homedale has backed out of the grant process twice before, so the state agency is looking for private investment, officials said. An LID is one way to get that investment.

A former Caldwell engineering supervisor with 23 years’ experience, Enebo said there are two ways the City Council can establish an LID:

- In what he characterized as the most favorable way, the city can acquire a petition from folks who are in favor of an LID. If 60 percent of those polled are against the district, it cannot be created.
- The council can pass a resolution of intention to enact an LID and set up a public hearing to get testimony on the plan.

decisions made that are important to downtown.”

The three-page customer survey tries to get an idea of the demographics of people who shop in Homedale, including age group, whether they reside in town, how often they visit downtown and the reasons they find themselves there. The survey also asks folks to characterize their shopping experiences and also provide suggestions as to how the experience can be improved. Perhaps one of the most important questions is on the final page and deals with how the customers think other people perceive downtown.

The business survey is a page shorter than the customer survey and tries to build a makeup of each business as far as who owns buildings and who leases and whether business owners live in Homedale or not.

Engel said once data is collected and disseminated, the Master Plan design phase will begin. She expects workshops to be held in September or October.

Library wraps up summer reading

Trevor Romans, an 11-year-old participant in Lizard Butte Library’s summer reading program, hunts up a book on the final day. Janna Streibel, director of the Marsing library, handed out certificates of completion at the end of the “Catch the Reading Bug” summer, which ended Aug. 12. Streibel said the response to the six-week summer course has spurred her to possibly create two sessions — each for 50 children — for next summer’s reading program.

Next on the library docket is a six-week “Every Child Ready to Read” course for boys and girls ages 6 and younger. The course starts on Oct. 14 and will run every Tuesday at 6 p.m. until Nov. 18.

For more information about the library and its programs, call 896-4690 or e-mail lizardbuttlibrary@yahoo.com. The library is located at 111 3rd Ave. W., in Marsing.

Homedale's Owyhee Publishing finishes expansion

And the walls came down...

Top left: Crews tear down a portion of the building at Owyhee Publishing, Homedale, as the firm readied for expansion of its printing facilities. A new, larger addition replaced the old portion, originally part of the Cone Cafe, built around 1949. The Owyhee Avalanche rents the front portion of the East Idaho Avenue building being expanded.

Top right: Don Frank Construction, the contractor on the project, began laying pipe for the expansion in the second week of construction.

Left, right upper and lower: With the foundation prepped, workers raise scaffolding and begin the construction of the new expansion's walls in week three. The addition adds 1,500 square feet of space to the company's production area.

Bottom left: By week six the walls are in place and work is slated to begin on the roof. The expansion mirrors the existing press room's footprint and adds roughly 15 percent to the company's floor space.

Bottom right: Ben Krehl pilots the Lektro claw, stacking 1,600-pound rolls of newsprint in the new addition earlier this month. In the end, construction took less than three months from the initial demolition to the last touches of drywall and paint.

Teams visit Homedale for Saturday jamboree

Football season starts Aug. 29 at Vale

Rob Kassebaum has come up with a few new twists for his second year as Homedale High School football coach.

He has consolidated all the team's fundraising efforts into one project — a full color program to be sold during home games, beginning with the home opener Sept. 5 against Nampa Christian.

And Saturday, the varsity and junior varsity teams will host the Homedale Trojan Football Jamboree.

Homedale begins the season Aug. 29 in Vale, Ore.

The jamboree features five other teams in addition to Homedale, including fellow 3A Snake River Valley conference teams Weiser and Payette. Also scheduled to attend are 4A Emmett and 2A Western Idaho Conference squads Nampa Christian and Cole Valley Christian.

Admission will be charged and concessions available.

Both varsity and JV scrimmages will be held beginning at 6 p.m. at DeWard Bell Stadium and adjacent practice fields. The schedule is:

- 6 p.m. — Homedale vs. Cole Valley, west side of stadium field; Payette vs. Nampa Christian, east side of stadium field; Homedale JV vs.

Trojans football coach Rob Kassebaum teaches during practice.

Emmett JV and Weiser JV vs. Cole Valley JV, practice fields

- 6:45 p.m. — Payette vs. Emmett, west field; Weiser vs. Nampa Christian, east field; Homedale JV vs. Cole Valley JV and Payette JV vs. Nampa Christian JV, practice fields

- 7:30 p.m. — Homedale vs.

Emmett, west field; Weiser vs. Cole Valley, east field; Homedale and Payette vs. Emmett JV and Weiser JV vs. Nampa Christian JV, practice fields

The scrimmage is played on a 40-yard field with each offense keeping the ball for 15 minutes based on a running clock.

The Trojans' game-day program will feature full-color photos of each Homedale player as well as a list of all donors as the Football Booster Club, general information about the school and the team and roster inserts of that night's opponent.

According to an informational handout from Kassebaum, the programs probably will be priced at $1 on game day and will feature "first-class recognition of players and boosters."

Players are expected to sell $200 in sponsorships, and each sponsor will receive a program once it is printed.

The proceeds from the program will be used to purchase basic spirit pack items, taking pressure off family expenses; purchases home jerseys for next season to replace the home jerseys 2008 senior players will be allowed to keep; offset playoff travel costs; pay off the program's new blocking sled; and fund other items as needed.

Levels of sponsorship range from $30 to $400 for a full-page in the program.

Flag football signups planned

The second year of Homedale Flag Football is ready to go.

Signups will be taken from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday at Homedale Elementary School.

The program is open to boys and girls in first through fourth grade. Sponsored by the NFL, the program is administered by Homedale Youth Sports Inc.

The registration fee is $45 per child. League coordinator Brad Dines said no age verification documents are necessary because grade levels can be checked through the school.

Dines said practice will start as soon as the teams are determined, probably Aug. 30. The first action will come Sept. 13 with a jamboree and team photos. All games will be played at Homedale Middle School again.

The league welcomes inquiries from those interested in coaching, too, Dines said.

Dines said there were about 100 children involved in the league a year ago, including teams from Jordan Valley, Wilder and Greenleaf. He said there is a chance that Parma could join the fray this year. Homedale teams comprised about 60 percent of the participation in 2007, he said.

Homedale High School football players will serve as referees.

Marsing volleyball

Brutal agenda trains Huskies for tough teams

The girls on the Marsing High School volleyball team will be digging and spiking soon at a gym near you; and you'll likely to see some familiar faces, according to coach Loma Bittick.

But with just eight home dates, road trips will be the order of the season.

"I have some returning players this year — setter Kaitie Kent; hitter Miranda Clausen; defensive specialist Kaya Stahle and hitter Rebecca Cossel," Bittick said.

Cossel is a sophomore, while the other three returners are all seniors.

"They have been leaders this summer. Along with the returning players, we have some promising juniors and sophomores who played tournaments and team camp with us.

"The girls have worked hard this summer and we are eager to get teams aligned and get started this week," Bittick said.

The 2A Western Idaho Conference will likely see some challenging play this year, Bittick said.

"Nampa Christian and Melba are returning some key players and will be tough, as well as Parma, which has strong net players," she said.

The Huskies won't be hitting the floor cold, thanks in part to the Marsing Jamboree, which will start at 6 p.m. Tuesday

"Our jamboree will be a good warm up for the teams — giving us a chance to get the nerves settled a bit and see some areas to work on," Bittick said.

The Jamboree also will mark the first of only eight home dates on the Huskies' schedule. Marsing will forsake home-and-home non-conference match for the most part this year in favor of intense tournaments through the season.

Marsing football

Veteran players lace up for not-so-new coach

The Marsing varsity football team looks to do well and hold its own with others in the 2A Western Idaho Conference this year, first-year head coach Jake Walgamott said Thursday.

"I feel our football team is doing very well. We got a late start this summer putting in (time on) offense and defense, but I think we are going to be able to compete with everyone we play," he explained.

The core of the team will see nine key players returning to the gridiron for the new head coach, who takes over for his one-time boss, Don Heller, whose contract was not renewed by the Marsing school board.

Walgamott previously was a Huskies assistant under Heller.

Mike Moore, Ricky Miller, Martin Galvez, Logan Glenn, Jose Paramo, T.J. Placenia, David Rios, Ethan Salove and Sean Finley will bring savvy and experience back for the Huskies this season, Walgamott said.

Walgamott said the old hands will be joined by 10 new faces: Ty Shippy, Brian Galligan, Joey Buril, Brandon Walgamott, Taylor Morris, Sammy Olvera, Francisco Martinez, Mitch Green, Hugo Estrada, and Arnold Martinez.

The Huskies, 4-4 a year ago, will see their opener on Sept. 5 in a dogfight with the Elgin Huskies. Elgin was second in the 2A Blue Mountain League in Oregon and finished 6-5 after a first-round loss in the state playoffs. But the other Huskies are something of a mystery as far as Marsing football is concerned.

"Elgin is an unknown opponent. I think that we are going to be able to have success against them," Jake Walgamott said.

And, after last year's late-season win against then-unbeaten Nampa Christian, fans know the Huskies are capable of surprises.

Firemen fight fire at Hetrick farm

Homedale volunteer firemen fought a fire all morning last Thursday at the Ira Hetrick farm in Owyhee Heights which destroyed a hay stack, straw stack, corrals, small shed; and endangered a nearby granary. A five or six month old calf, trapped by the fire, was burned to death.

The fire is believed to have been caused by an electric fencer, according to Fire chief John Matteson. The firemen were called to the Hetrick farm Friday when the smoldering hay and straw burst into flames a second time. More water was pumped on the blaze and Mr. Hetrick obtained a water tank to keep a check on the fire after the firemen left.

Fair and rodeo officials on TV

A good presentation of officials of the Owyhee County fair and rodeo appeared on Periscope on TV channel 7 Tuesday afternoon.

Those appearing to advertise the fair and rodeo were Ed Mink, secretary-manager of the Owyhee County Fair; Roger Howard, fair board chairman; L. J. Matteson, Mac Parkins, Frank Ireton, fair board directors; Felisa Echevarria, parade hostess; Owyhee County Sheriff Jim Tucker, Rodeo board Director; and Chief Eagletail and Doc Blossom, Indians from the Duck Valley reservation.

Mr. Mink also appeared on TV over Home Town Report, when he was interviewed about the fair and rodeo.

Local softball team cops league title

Owyhee Motors-Paul’s Groceteria, first half winners of the softball league, won the championship title Monday night when they beat the second half winner, Marsing Boise Payette, 7-3.

Marsing Boise Payette and the Marsing Firemen played last Monday and tied 3-3. They played off the tie the following night to determine the second half winner, and Marsing Boise Payette own 6-2.

GRASSHOPPER RAVAGES. Jno. Farnaman, Esq, from Upper Jordan Valley informs us that grasshoppers are committing fearful depredations in that locality. The pestiferous pests made an the attack from the direction of Flint, a few days ago, in such numbers as to obscure the sun at noonday, destroying every green leaf and leaving fields and gardens desolate. Mr. Farnaman, Brainard and others had splendid looking fields of barley and other grain, almost ready for harvesting, that will not now pay for cutting. A meadow of luxuriant timothy hay, cultivated by Mr. F., is stripped of every green blade. Such an occurrence was never before heard of in this portion of Uncle Sam’s dominions. What a great sin have our people committed to merit this dreadful visitation of modern locusts?

VOLUME FOUR. To-day the Avalanche enters upon the fourth year of its existence, and, to-day, begins the second year of our connection with the concern. It has been our aim to present our readers with a paper that would fairly and faithfully represent a broad the varied interest — mining and otherwise — of Owyhee County. We shall continue to be governed by the rule laid down in our first number, a year ago, namely: To conduct our paper on strictly independent principles, without reference to party or clique and avoid partisan strife of every description. As a matter of course, we have our own political views and preferences, but, as heretofore, our columns shall remain free from party politics.

To use a current expression, things looked very blue twelve months ago; but, since then business has improved wonderfully — much better, indeed, than we had expected. Our subscription list has received large additions, and our advertising patronage has visibly increased; nevertheless it must not be supposed we are getting rich rapidly. We intend to make Owyhee our permanent home and as soon as business will warrant, we propose to issue a semi- or tri-weekly, and when we are favored with telephone communication with the outside world, we will probably print a daily.

Thankful for our friends for the liberal patronage awarded us, during the past year, and to our contemporaries in the territory and elsewhere, for courtesies shown us, we will strive to merit increased favors, ever mindful of “Trust to luck, trust to luck, stare fate in the face Sure your heart must be always if it’s in the right place.”

GIANT POWDER. Thos. Ewing & Co., are agents here for the Giant Powder which will doubtless soon be generally employed for blasting purposes in our mines. It is used here by the Woodstock company almost to the entire exclusion of common powder. The Golden Chariot Company have also adopted it and would not now do without it, especially for sinking shafts, and in places where water is troublesome. For the benefit of those unacquainted with this new blasting agent we give a brief description of its general properties: It is ungrained, of a grayish brown color, specific gravity about 1. Insoluble in water, it is said not to be affected by time, exposure to air or moisture. It burns in the open air to ashes without exploding and produces no smoke. This powder is almost entirely free from accidents and can only be exploded by a violent explosion in it, confining it in a strong tight vessel, sufficiently, or by a percussion shock sufficient to produce heat and violence equivalent to an explosion. Cartridges are made of various sizes. Less than ordinary sized holes are required. The hole is charged in the usual manner, the fuse inserted into a large percussion cap which is then inserted into a piece of priming cartridge and all put into the hold on top of the charge. No tamping is required, but when practicable the hole is filled with water. Much less time required in preparing a blast than with common powder, which together with its greater effectiveness and freedom from accidents will no doubt bring it into general use. The Giant Powder can be had at Thos. Ewing & Co’s store, also pamphlets containing directions for suing it &c.

On the edge of common sense

A Korean beef

Juxtaposed on opposite pages of the BBC International newspaper were two stories: "... thousands of people (in Seoul, South Korea) protesting against resumption of U.S. beef imports ..." and "The U.S. announced that it will send half a million tons of food aid to North Korea."

How can two so closely connected groups of people hold such strong opposite opinions about the safety of U.S. food exports? Easy. It's the haves vs. the have-nots. South Korea is a strong democratic nation, our ally, who owes its existence to the U.S. and the United Nations. It has the luxury to be choosy. Their protest against American beef, as stated, is the fear of Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE), but it is really to protect their highly subsidized isolationist agricultural trade policy. That's not a crime, but they should not hide behind food safety as a reason.

Whereas North Korea, an oppressed country led by a dictator, lost an estimated 1 million people to starvation in the 1990s and is facing another famine. The government has nuclear weapon intentions, a cruel disregard for its own people, and has been threatening invasion against South Korea since we pushed them back in 1951. More than 33,000 American soldiers died protecting South Korea.

So the question that bubbles up like acid indigestion in many of us when we hear South Koreans shouting, "We don't need U.S. troops and we don't need U.S. Mad Cows!" is, "Why did we help the ingrates in the first place?"

Four days after Sadaam's statue was pulled down in Baghdad, there were anti-U.S. Iraqis protesting. I realize now they were Sadaam's cronies, but still. When the French politicians curse us, the British press demeans us, and when our closest friends, the Canadians, accuse the U.S. Department of Agriculture of conspiracy to falsify our BSE findings ... it all hurts.

So much of our blood and our wealth has been spent protecting freedom on this planet. One cannot imagine a world today if the U.S. had refused to intervene. Paris would be a German suburb, South Korea would be a Japanese or Communist slave state, and Abu Ghraib would still be the real torture chamber it once was under Sadaam.

Why is such a powerful country, the United States of America, so generous in spite of such deliberate insults and bashings? In my opinion, it is directly related to the strong religious beliefs of our founding fathers, in which we still abide.

We do not do good deeds to "show off". We help the downtrodden, be it the homeless in San Francisco or the starving in North Korea, because Christ said, "As you do for the least of these my brethren, you do unto me." And we turn the other cheek to the "What have you done for me lately," because we are directed to show forgiveness and mercy to all who offend.

It is the embodiment of God's grace. And the saving grace for all the Frances, South Koreas and Iraqs of the world who are free people today because America believes.

Memorable marching melodies

When I hear the music, those memories from 42 years ago come flooding back.

I am a child of the Rock & Roll Generation. But not all Rock & Roll is created equal. And the songs people like or dislike often are tied to what they were doing when those songs were popular.

There are several songs from the distant past that cause me serious flashbacks. All of them were popular during a 10-week period in July, August and early September 1966.

I was 21 that year. The summer of '66 was the hottest, and driest in the Seattle region since the 1890s. And I was a member of the first basic training company to train at Ft. Lewis, near Tacoma, since World War II.

Military trainees today are as isolated as we were back then. There were no weekends off during Basic. And we weren't allowed to associate with members of the other training companies because of a meningitis outbreak. There wasn't any TV. Our only link with the outside world was the Seattle radio stations — the most popular being KJR.

There were two types of songs played on KJR. One was the "sitting around the barracks in the evening thinking of home" songs like "God Only Knows (How Much I Love You)," by the Beach Boys. And there was "Distant Drums" by Jim Reeves — "Oh, won't you marry me? Let's not wait. For the Distant Drums might change our wedding date." Those songs made you think of home. And thinking of home wasn't a good idea.

But the most memorable tunes were the marching songs. Some had been sung by our fathers and uncles when they were training during World War II. But other songs were popular rock tunes. If a Top 40 hit had a good rhythm it could help keep you in step, take your mind off the heat and the dust (and home), and make the time go faster.

It's a day in early August. The 192 members of B Company, 1st Battalion, 1st Training Brigade are returning from the firing range, which is a couple of miles from our barracks. The temperature is hovering around 95 degrees with at least 45 percent humidity. Our platoon is near the head of the column. The platoons farther back are eating a lot of dust.

A Drill Instructor counts cadence to try to keep all the left feet hitting the road at the same time:

*"Yo lep, yo lep
Yo lep, right lep*

Lep yo lep now pick up the step Yo lep yo right yo lep!"

One of the marchers chimes in with material from a KJR hit:

"Hot town, summer in the city Back of my neck getting dirty and gritty Been down, isn't it a pity Doesn't seem to be a shadow in the city"

"Ain't no use in goin' home Jody's got your girl and gone," chants the Sergeant.

Another trainee picks up the count with the aid of the Rolling Stones:

"Under my thumb The girl who once had me down Under my thumb The girl who once pushed me around" "Hup tomp threep fourph"

"Lep, right, lep," barks the D.I.

And as we pass another training company's area, we all sing out:

*"Everywhere I go
There's a Bravo Man there
Everywhere I go
There's a Bravo Man there
Bravo Soldier
Bravo Soldier
Everywhere!"*

*"Hold your head and hold it high
B-1-1 is passin' by
It's the Ft. Lewis Boogie
It's a crazy song."*

It was both the worst and the best time of my life.

I suppose today's soldiers sing, too. But I can't for the life of me understand how you could stay in step while singing rap or hip-hop.

Accuracy In Media ABC drops ball on Dems' deceptions

by Cliff Kincaid

ABC News "chief investigative correspondent" Brian Ross has been reporting on John Edwards' adultery, but seven months ago Ross was telling the American people that the story of Edwards' cheating was a campaign "dirty trick" by sinister and unknown forces.

By including it in a January ABC story on political "dirty tricks," Ross was saying that he believed Edwards had been unfairly targeted and accused. Ross, who is well-respected in the business and has broken some important stories, has egg all over his face on this one.

The Brian Ross story about the Edwards allegations being a political "dirty trick" may help explain why so many reporters in the mainstream media shied away from it. After all, if Brian Ross wasn't going to take it seriously, why should they?

Edwards, who endorsed Barack Obama for president after dropping out of the race, covered up the affair for two years, even while appearing as a family man on the campaign trail. This reflected confidence on his part that the affair could be concealed with the help of the major media. The National Enquirer, which broke the story last year, cornered Edwards at a hotel in July before a secret meeting with his mistress. It then published a "spy photo" of him holding his alleged "love child." This forced Edwards to admit at least some of the truth.

With Edwards now admitting the affair, reporters and commentators in the mainstream media are acknowledging that they were deceived and blew it. But why is it that they always seem to miss big scandals involving Democrats? In this context, why haven't they yet reported on the relationship that Obama had with a Communist Party USA (CPUSA) member by the name of Frank Marshall Davis, a subject of an FBI investigation and several official inquiries into Soviet-sponsored activities in the U.S.? Davis was so deeply involved in the CPUSA that he recruited

Sali stays on course as a fiscal watchdog in House of Reps

As state treasurer for the state of Idaho, I am encouraged by the fiscally responsible role Rep. Bill Sali has taken in U.S. Congress. Is attempts to reign in wasteful government spending and eliminate the deficit have not gone unnoticed by me as a taxpayer.

In Bill’s 18 years as an elected official, he has never voted in favor of a tax increase. Low taxes are meaningless in the long term unless we also cut government’s insatiable appetite for spending our money. That is why Bill Sali has my enthusiastic endorsement and will get my vote in November.

As a member of the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, Bill has consistently fought for the small government principles he promised to champion when we first elected him. He has called for an end to secret earmarks and he has sought to hold Congress accountable for the big-spending agenda of Speaker (Nancy) Pelosi (D-Calif.) and the Democratic leadership.

In politics, actions speak much louder than words. Rep. Sali’s legislative record is absolutely consistent with promoting fiscal responsibility and it serves as a beacon of hope for those who wish to see government return to a manageable size.

Former school staffer grateful to be a part of Homedale High

It is with mixed emotions that I find myself not involved in the beginning of a new school year for the first time since the fall of 1984 — just yesterday! But I have some very fond memories to keep me company.

At the time of my retirement last fall, I could not have imagined the two wonderful surprises that were yet to come my way. First was the tremendous honor of being asked to speak at the graduation ceremony in May for the Class of 2008, for the second time of my school career. And second was the unbelievable full-page tribute featured in the 2008 yearbook, which came to my attention during the summer, prohibiting me from being able to say “thank you” to the yearbook staff.

I cannot express adequately in words my utmost appreciation to all of the students involved in the above gestures. No plaque, trophy, certificate nor other material acknowledgement could have been more meaningful than the honors bestowed upon me by the students who were and are the ultimate reason for a school’s existence.

Many, many thanks to the entire community of Homedale for the numerous years I was allowed to serve you and your students in the education environment of the school district. I always did and forever will consider your children my own.

✓ Dems: Mainstream bias blatantly obvious

members for the Moscow-funded and controlled party and had personal connections to other top party members such as Harry Bridges and Paul Robeson.

The John Edwards affair is a chilling reminder that Democratic cover-ups can succeed, with the help of the media, and that even the most sophisticated “investigative” reporters are prepared to overlook potential Democratic scandals. Edwards is out of the race, but Obama is running ahead in most polls for the highest office in the land and seems confident that the media will not blow the whistle on his Marxist associate.

Obama’s cover-up

The implication of the Edwards scandal is that, if ABC News’s top investigative reporter could take Edwards’ side, without any serious checking of the facts, then other candidates may be concealing scandals and hoping and planning to get away with it. That is certainly the case with Obama, who is far more of a media favorite than Edwards ever was and has, with the help of the influential Associated Press (AP), carefully concealed his relationship with an identified CPUSA member.

Obama’s communist connection, which he failed to disclose in his 1995 book, Dreams From My Father, by referring to Davis only as “Frank” and ignoring his communist affiliation, is a far more serious scandal than an Edwards “love child.”

Controversy over the Obama-Davis relationship is growing, at least in the conservative-oriented media. Rush Limbaugh, who on Aug. 7 commented on our exposure of the dishonest Associated Press story about Davis, put a link to the AIM column on this matter on his Web site.

Also heavily drawing on our material, Investor’s Business Daily published an Aug. 5 editorial, “Young Obama’s Red Mentor.” The paper noted that the “cryptic references” in Obama’s book to this communist mentor “were — and still are — designed to protect Obama’s background from the scrutiny it deserves.”

Two recently published books, The Obama Nation by Jerome Corsi and The Case Against Barack Obama by David Freddoso, also include information about the Frank Marshall Davis story.

If the major media do not follow-up, perhaps the Enquirer ought to do so. At least this would give the Frank Marshall Davis story some needed national attention. But any such story from the Enquirer might be dismissed, as were the Edwards allegations, as coming from a super-market tabloid and being, therefore, inherently unreliable and unbelievable.

But, in the wake of the Edwards’ admissions, the Enquirer has proven itself, once again, to be both reliable and believable. Indeed, it looks like ABC may want to replace Brian Ross with someone from the National Enquirer, which broke the Edwards story in October and published a follow-up story on Dec. 12, 2007. This demonstrates how long the rest of the media were twiddling their thumbs. It looks like they didn’t want to know if the story was true.

No dirty trick here

At AIM, we didn’t dismiss the charges against Edwards. Roger Aronoff and I noted in a Jan. 7 column that while Edwards had denied the Enquirer story, this didn’t mean that the allegations were untrue.

Our column criticized Brian Ross’s ABC 20/20 story insisting that this was shaping up as possibly the dirtiest presidential campaign in history, and that one of the dirty campaign tricks was the National Enquirer account of Edwards allegedly fathering a “love child” out of wedlock.

“Grocery store check-out lines,” Ross said, showing the supermarket tabloids. “There have been National Enquirer headlines claiming a love-child scandal involved Senator John Edwards or a member of his staff, forcing Edwards to issue a strong public denial.” Ross showed Edwards saying, “The story is false, it’s completely untrue, ridiculous.” It is clear that Ross believed the denials coming from Edwards, his staff and other Democrats.

Now who looks ridiculous? In addition to Edwards and his lackeys, the list includes Brian Ross and all of the other reporters in the liberal media who took Edwards at his word.

Same story, different election cycle

The lesson, which is learned and relearned every election cycle, is that the major media are easily manipulated by Democratic Party politicians.

The “love child” story clearly did not belong in a report on alleged “dirty tricks” because it was not known at the time whether it was true or not and where the story had come from. It may have come from associates of Edwards’ mistress, who wanted public accountability and truth from Edwards and were astounded by the media’s eagerness to believe Edwards’ lies.

By refusing to investigate the story immediately and thoroughly, the major media were covering up for an adulterer and a liar, who happened to be a major Democratic presidential candidate and could have become the Democratic presidential nominee.

Media failure

Consider the magnitude of the deception. Ross was quick to accept Edwards’ denial. But what had Ross done at that point to investigate the charges? It looks like nothing at all. He had simply assumed it was false. He had taken the Democrat’s word. This is what is called media bias. But it benefits all of the major Democratic candidates, including and especially Obama.

The labeling of the “love child” story as a dirty trick was provided in the context of Ross acknowledging that he had been used by the Republicans in 2004 to publicize documentary evidence that Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry had given back some of his Vietnam War service medals, despite Kerry’s previous denials. Why was it a “dirty trick” to provide this truthful information? All that Ross could come with was that the Republicans didn’t want their role in providing the information to be publicly acknowledged. But the story was true and exposed Kerry as a liar. Ross should have been able to dig up the information on his own. Perhaps he had no interest in doing so.

The media have a well-documented political bias, and it shows through in Ross’s amateurish handling of the allegations against Edwards. Simply put, he was a tool of the smooth-talking Edwards, who made a fortune by manipulating juries as a trial lawyer. However, Obama is a far better talker than Edwards. That helps explain why he is poised to accept the Democratic presidential nomination.

Now the truth

Yet, Brian Ross just keeps reporting the Edwards story as if his credibility has not suffered a lick. On Aug. 8, Ross was on ABC World News Tonight reporting on Edwards’ admission of infidelity and his interview with Bob Woodruff of Nightline about his deception. It would have been appropriate at that point for Ross to have apologized for his report that claimed the Enquirer story about Edwards was a dirty trick. But no apology was forthcoming.

Edwards “repeatedly lied” about the affair, Ross and his colleagues are now reporting. Yes, but seven months ago these lies were called a “strong public denial” in the face of sensational allegations from a questionable super-market tabloid.

It looks like the Enquirer has a better “nose for news” than “investigative” journalist Ross, who labeled the Edwards adultery story a political dirty trick.

More lies?

Edwards told ABC that he knew the child was not his because of “the timing” of the pregnancy and the affair. And he claims that he didn’t know that a campaign aide was paying his mistress to live with her child in a mansion.

Edwards’ 2008 national finance chairman Fred Baron has acknowledged providing “assistance” to the mistress, Rielle Hunter, and others. But if it’s not Edwards’ kid, then why is Baron paying for these other unnamed “individuals?”

The Dallas Morning News reports that Baron, who is based in Dallas, is now raising money for Barack Obama.

Brian Ross should get to the bottom of all of this. But he should first apologize for putting his trust in Edwards.

In addition to clearing up the Edwards mess, Ross should subject Obama to the scrutiny he deserves and bring the Frank Marshall Davis connection to national attention. Otherwise, his title of “chief investigative correspondent” will become nothing more than a joke.
