Court filing alleges wrongful termination; constitutional rights violations

Five former Owyhee County Sheriff's Office employees are seeking unspecified damages in a lawsuit filed against Sheriff Daryl Crandall, OCSO and Owyhee County.

The lawsuit brought by former OCSO Sgt. Jim Bish, former Chief Deputy Bruce Cameron, former Deputy Chris Even, former Records Manager Sgt. Sherry Olson and former administrative assistant Tiffany Walker was filed Thursday afternoon in the Third District Court in Murphy.

The lawsuit alleges wrongful termination, breach of contract, violation of free speech rights and due process, defamation and, in the case of one defendant, emotional distress.

No dollar amount is attached to the 24-page document, but the five former

Marsing businesses will need licenses

Marsing's new business license ordinance, A-173, was approved Wednesday during the monthly Marsing City Council meeting. The ordinance will require business owners to purchase a license each year, with the permits being valid from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31. Initial plans are for the license requirement to begin Jan. 1, 2010.

Candidates can file for election soon

The filing period begins Monday for citizens hoping to run for one of two seats opening on the Homedale City Council. Two four-year positions will be on the Nov. 3 ballot as the terms of Dave Downum and Tim Downing wind down. Neither Downing nor Downum have said if they'll run for reelection.

For the second year in a row, the Owyhee County budget has been slashed drastically to guard against further slips in revenue.

"We have really cut, but with the figures for projected revenue, we're really, really being conservative. And I don't think we've been conservative enough," Board of County Commissioners chair Jerry Hoagland said.

But, Hoagland said Friday, the commissioners have yet to discuss how a lawsuit filed by former employees against the county, sheriff's office and Sheriff Daryl Crandall could affect the fiscal year 2010 budget. Commissioners will hold a public hearing on the FY 2010 budget at 10 a.m. on Sept. 1 in Murphy. The proposed budget has been set at $6,982,442 - 6.7 percent Homedale public works supervisor Larry Bauer hunts for a water leak Thursday morning.

Homedale sewer work starts soon

City set to circulate LID petition; Santa Fe could see double-wides

The Homedale City Council accepted another ultra-low bid for an infrastructure project at its Wednesday meeting.

By unanimous vote, Cascade Pipeline Corp. was awarded the contract for a sewer rehabilitation job that includes building nearly five miles of sewer force main from the wastewater lagoons into Homedale.

Andrew Kimmel of Project Engineering Consultants, Inc., told council members that Cascade's $691,481 bid was 40 percent lower than estimates.

Kimmel also said Cascade should receive notice to proceed Monday after contract review by city attorney Michael Duggan and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Rural Development. He also said that the contractor has asked for more time to complete the project than the 120 days allotted in the request for bids.

Kimmel also told the council that a change of scope was necessary for the planned municipal water pipe bursting project. The alteration was announced after a 1¹/₂-inch pipe was discovered along West Idaho Avenue between Sixth and Seventh streets. City crews spent Thursday morning fixing a leak on that stretch of pipe. The new project scope of work now calls for new six-inch water line from Sixth Street West to Johnstone Road, new valving and an additional fire hydrant.

The new work will add $40,000 onto the original project cost estimate of $200,000, Kimmel reported. If contractors' bid proposal surpass the $240,000 threshold, Kimmel said the project would be altered by eliminating the alternative of replacement four-inch ductile iron water line and fire hydrants on Idaho Avenue.

Bid advertisements will be published after work is completed on the Well No. 9 project at Riverside Park, he said.

LID timeline released

Kimmel also discussed the timetable for completing work to establish a Local Improvement District to help pay for the city's proposed downtown revitalization.

Mayor Harold Wilson said Monday that he wouldn't know until after meeting with Kimmel and a legal advisor after deadline on Tuesday when the city will begin soliciting signatures from business property owners for an LID petition. Petitioning business property owners to get 60 percent approval is one way the council can establish the LID. The council also can unilaterally vote for the assessment district without input from property owners.

Kimmel's time line, though, included the council passing a resolution of intention to form an LID during its 6 p.m. meeting on Aug. 27. It's estimated that an ordinance creating the LID would be voted on during the Sept. 9 meeting, and that an advertisement for bids would be published Sept. 16.

If the LID is created, work on replacing sidewalks, curbs and gutters and erecting streetlights, would begin in October, according to Kimmel's presentation.

Subdivision plans in flux

Planning and Zoning administrator Sylvia Bahem announced that in an effort to sell lots, operators of the Santa Fe subdivision downtown are contemplating allowing double-wide mobile homes and building dwellings through Adair Homes. She said that Realtor Cathy Smith also could reduce lot prices.

"There's nothing in the covenants or city ordinance to prohibit it as long as its on a foundation and has an attached garage," Bahem said of the construction of modular homes in the city limits.

Business expansion, exposure discussed at Chamber luncheon

The Terry Reilly Health Services clinic in Homedale could be in line for an expansion, and Homedale businesses could get more U.S. Highway 95 visibility, Chamber of Commerce president Gavin Parker announced last week

Parker made the announcements during Thursday's monthly Chamber luncheon at Owyhee Lanes Restaurant.

The TRHS board of directors recently voted to pursue federal economic stimulus funds to expand its Homedale clinic on East Idaho Avenue.

Parker said he, Mayor Harold Wilson and other city and business representatives will meet with Terry Reilly CEO Timothy Brown next month to get more information on the medical group's plans.

The announcement came during the same meeting in which District 23B Rep. Stephen Hartgen (R-Twin Falls) said progress was being made to bring a St. Luke's Regional Medical Centeraffiliated clinic to Homedale.

"It's pretty exciting to know that Terry Reilly will be expanding in the community and potentially partnering with St. Luke's," Parker said.

Hartgen said he has had conversations with St. Luke's regional planning director Devan Johnson about a possible St. Luke's location in Homedale.

"They feel the market would support that," Hartgen said.

"To me that's a really important piece of economic and community development in a community like Homedale," he said. "To have a community-based health clinic is a real asset for a small community."

Hartgen and fellow District 23 legislators Rep. Jim Patrick (R-Twin Falls) and state Sen. Bert Brackett (R-Rogerson) discussed current issues at the Chamber meeting. Read next week's Avalanche for more on the legislators' presentations.

Chamber angles for U.S. 95 advertising

Parker also reported progress in the ongoing effort to get city businesses more exposure on U.S. Highway 95. He plans to seek a variance from the Idaho Transportation Department rule to allow logo food, fuel and lodging signs to alert U.S. 95 motorists of the services available in Homedale. The signs are similar to those seen on Interstate 84, and Parker said a variance is necessary to get the signs on something other than an Interstate.

If he gets the go-ahead, each business that qualifies for an entry on a logo sign would have apply individually to ITD to inclusion. Parker envisions a southbound sign on U.S. 95 in Canyon County near Campbell Tractor and a northbound sign somewhere south of the Main Street intersection.

Volunteers sought to promote Census

The federal government is looking for a group of volunteers to brainstorm on how to promote the upcoming Census 2010 in Owyhee County.

Murphy resident Tiffany Walker has been appointed the chair of the local Complete Count Committee, and she is looking for people from Homedale, Marsing and Murphy to serve on the panel. Walker said the volunteers will meet periodically to develop strategies to get the word out on the importance of getting an accurate count of county residents for Census 2010.

Census press releases stress that a less-than-complete accounting of the county's population means a loss to the state of Idaho of $1,400 per year in federal funding per uncounted person. That funding could be used to pave roads, build schools and fund federal grants.

Walker said the volunteers

Making COSSA's case

When he made his pitch to the Homedale City Council on Wednesday, Homedale School District superintendent Tim Rosandick brought along a Powerpoint presentation and an artist's rendering of the proposed Canyon-Owyhee School Services Agency regional technical center.

$\sqrt{\text{COSSA:}}$ Public pitch comes Thursday

Services Agency Regional Technical Center that would be housed in Wilder.

Marsing patrons in both Owyhee and Canyon counties will be able to vote from noon to 8 p.m. on Tuesday. Owyhee ballots can be cast at the Marsing High School library, 301 8th Ave. W., in Marsing, while Canyon votes will be taken at the Marsing Sprint Boat Track, which is across the Snake River from Marsing on Idaho highway 55.

Homedale's election takes place from noon to 8 p.m. on Aug. 27. Owyhee County ballots will be cast at the school district office, 116 E. Owyhee Ave.; Canyon patrons will vote at the Seventh-Day Adventist Fellowship Hall, 16613 Garnet Road, in Wilder.

A public presentation on the proposal will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at the COSSA Industrial Welding shop in Homedale.

Homedale superintendent Tim Rosandick and COSSA director Mark Cotner made the rounds last week, telling both the Homedale City Council and the town's Chamber of Commerce that with in-kind donations and a potential federal grant swallowing up $3 million of the $5 million cents per day.

"I would hope that the wise and far-sighted people in this community would realize we can't pass this opportunity up," Rosandick said during the council meeting. A simple majority is required in both districts to pass the levy. Both proposed levies are earmarked for use for the COSSA project, and Rosandick and Marsing superintendent Harold Shockley have said their school boards will not certify the levies if a $2.5 million federal Economic Development Administration grant isn't received. "If this fails, it would be very, very difficult to piece together $520,000 for (the project), and the consequences would be very negative," Rosandick told council members.

Last week, Rosandick said officials are 90 percent certain that the project will win the large government grant. A decision is expected in September.

The proposed 55,845-squarefoot complex will be built on land donated by the Wilder School District and located on Peckham Road. Cotner said the location was selected because the federal government has targeted the area for economic development assis- in Canyon County — would be tance because of its poverty level, housed in a central location. economic situation and proximity to transportation infrastructure such as a railroad spur.

the five districts, but also the communities located near the proposed site. Rosandick said businesses looking to relocate will be attracted by the prospect of a professional-technical training facility nearby.

Also, students — both youth and adult - will be able to enroll in classes - both day and night — to earn college credits. The center will be affiliated with the College of Western Idaho in Nampa, Rosandick said.

Rosandick told the city council last Wednesday that if the project is built, vacated sites such as the engineering building would be sold, putting the properties back on the tax rolls and bringing revenue into the COSSA program in the form of the sales proceeds.

Rosandick said the Homedale district would benefit from the sale of the property because it would mean more direct revenue for COSSA and less support required from the five districts in the consortium.

The center also will help the district's cut their transportation budgets because all services - from the welding and engineering in Homedale to the nursing program and alternative school — JPB

Marsing city council briefs

Following Owyhee County's adoption of the proposed plan for the Marsing impact area, the city council planned to meet and adopt the final version Tuesday, after deadline.

City Engineer Amy Woodruff gave a report on the city water project, saying that "phase three is going forward ... it's really going well ... there's been no trouble so far" and offered thanks to everyone for their patience.

"You'll see construction going on, probably through the winter," she said. "We're pretty close to where we thought we would be."

She added that while customers on the new system should be seeing increased water pressure, they should also see increased water quality arriving in stages as the system is fine-tuned and settles in.

Woodruff also said the city is pursuing a $30,000 grant that would allow for the addition of an arboretum in the northern portion of Island Park.

John Larsen, head of city maintenance, reported on progress in finding a contractor to test the methane output from Marsing wells, with an eye towards possible use of the gas, sale of carbon credits, or the like. Initially the quantity and quality of the gas must be tested. A previous bid from a Washington state firm was $12,000, Larsen said. Loren Bonney, husband of city attorney Stephanie Bonney, offered to do the testing for $6,250, and the council approved the expenditure.

Larsen added that federal American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funding for methane capture had reached the state level, though methods for disbursement and application had not yet been announced. By getting the city's testing done early, Marsing "will be at the head of the line," he said.

The council also decided to approve pursuing the investigation into replacing the city sewer plant's calcium hypochlorite chlorination system with a sodium hypochlorite one. The solid-tablet calcium hypochlorite system requires approximately $1,200 per month for operation, Larsen said. The sodium hypochlorite (effectively liquid bleach) system would save an estimated 30 percent each month, in comparison.

The 2010 Marsing city budget as covered last week was also approved.

Mayor Keith Green announced that he was applying for a $12,500 grant in hopes of adding a reader board to the old railway crossing armature on Main Street. The board would be used for community events. He is also in dialogue with the Idaho Transportation Department in an effort to see if it could be linked to the Amber Alert system, he said.

Deputy Jeff Wasson gave the Owyhee County Sheriff's Office report to the council. He said several ordinance violations were delivered during the previous month, and that Marsing had seen 302 hours of patrol time.

$\sqrt{\text{Marsing:}}$ Fees outlined business owners will vary: Resident businesses will pay \$50 per year, \$100 for out-of-town, \$30 for home occupation businesses, and special businesses will see charges of \$100 for resident and \$200 for non-resident.

Business categories are defined as follows:

 Resident businesses are those owned by any person with a domicile within the city of Marsing are those in which an owner does business in their place of residence — and earning annual revenue in excess of $10,000.

 Special businesses are those operating as a transient merchant or itinerant vendor, and the license requires the approval of the city council, and if deemed necessary, by the Owyhee County sheriff.

In all categories, additional definitions and stipulations exist. Businesses not applying on time could face a $25 late fee, according to the ordinance.

price tag — there is no better time than now to pass the levies.

Five school districts — Homedale, Marsing, Wilder, Parma and Notus — will be responsible for the remaining $2 million. Each district will pay a share proportionate to its total market value share of the consortium.

Homedale is seeking a levy of $520,000 (or 26 percent of the $2 million), while Marsing's levy is priced at $474,000 (23.7 percent). Property owners in the Homedale district would pay $99 per year for two years for every $100,000 in taxable property value; Marsing owners would pay between $77 and $87 per year for two years.

Rosandick said the cost to taxpayers factors out to about 27

"I would hope that voters in Homedale wouldn't be too narrow-minded or competitive to think that (the center) wouldn't benefit Homedale or its children," Rosandick said during the Chamber presentation.

The regional technical center will house the Industrial Engineering class now located on West Idaho Avenue in Homedale. The other building in Homedale, which holds automotive and industrial welding classrooms, will remain in town.

Officials say the center will help not only the students of substation. The PATs include landowners, elected officials and other citizens from each of three regions affected by the project.

According to an Idaho Power release, project advisory teams will review comments from the public and present revised information for review at the meeting.

PAT members are in the process of suggesting two alternate routes for the proposed line, the initial course for which was on private property for more than 80 percent of its 300-plus mile length.

The release does not indicate if the meeting will address the Gateway West line, which will enter the county from the east to join with B2H, and which is also a subject of county attention as its original route crosses many private properties in the Bruneau and Grand View areas, as well as coming near or over Murphy.

OCSO sergeant demoted

One Owyhee County Sheriff's deputy was demoted and a decision on another's promotion tabled last week by the Board of County Commissioners.

Sheriff Daryl Crandall brought to the board a proposal to strip Perry Grant of his sergeant rank and reduce his pay, while promoting Deputy Farrell Ramsey to replace Grant as the North County patrol sergeant. Grant is based in Marsing; Ramsey currently works in the Bruneau-Grand View area.

Board chair Jerry Hoagland said that after an executive session requested by Crandall, the commissioners voted to grant the adjustment for Grant. Hoagland said Crandall told the board that Grant agreed to the reduction in pay.

Crandall confirmed that Grant no longer was a sergeant. He declined further comment, saying the matter was a personnel issue. The Ramsey vote, however, was delayed. Hoagland said the commissioners need more information before making a decision. Crandall said Friday that Ramsey has been promoted to sergeant. "He lives in Grand View, but he'll be working out of the Murphy office," Crandall said. Crandall hired both Grant and Ramsey this year. A former Homedale Police corporal who served previously with OCSO, Grant was named patrol sergeant for the Homedale-Marsing area when he re-joined the sheriff's office in January.

$\sqrt{\text{Budget:}}$ Weeds supervisor cut to part-time, probation secretary laid off lower than the nearly \$7.5 million budget used in FY 2009. This is on the heels of a 15.3 percent reduction in FY 2009 from the FY 2008 expenditures.

Last year's budget reductions included the loss of about eight positions, Hoagland said. Only one position, the secretary for the probation office, has been cut this year.

The BOCC chair said the parttime post was eliminated on the recommendation of department head Doris Jewett.

"We got a really tight budget and kept as many jobs as we possibly could," Hoagland said. "And I think in today's world that's pretty good."

Departmental budgets have been cut. Employee hours have been slashed. The Weed Department supervisor, Bruce Sibert, will work a part-time position, and the county is seeking a contractor to do the labor. Office supply budgets have been reduced in some departments. All in an attempt to make sure the county stays in the black as is required by law.

But with District 23B Rep. Stephen Hartgen (R-Twin Falls) saying last week that state revenues lagged behind start-of-theyear estimates by $450 million (20 percent) — meaning that the county's "other revenue" projection of nearly $4.5 million might miss actual numbers — will the cuts be enough?

Airport, JC tuition funds increased for FY 2010

While the overall Owyhee County fiscal year 2010 budget has been cut, increases have been proposed for a few departments:

• The airport budget is set to increase by $10,000, or 178.5 percent, to fund chip-sealing of the runway in Murphy, which is carried out every other year.

• The junior college tuition budget has been increased by 50 percent to $45,000. Board of County Commissioners chair Jerry Hoagland said the move was triggered by the increased demand for assistance from a growing number of incoming college students.

The JC tuition budget is wholly funded by state tobacco and alcohol funds, but Hoagland said that money is dwindling.

"If the state money runs out, there is a potential we would have to go to a levy on that down the road," he said.

• The county fair budget to fund the year-to-year operation of the event could increase 10.9 percent, or $4,550, to account for a rise in expenses.

• The solid waste budget could go up 3.6 percent, or $13,024, to cover the wage of an attendant at the Bruneau landfill and employee benefits.

• The 911 fund could increase 3.1 percent to $3,000. County Clerk Charlotte Sherburn said if the state awards a grant for emergency communications upgrades, that money will be placed into the 911 trust fund and then moved over to the yearly fund as needed.

• Outside of current expense budgets, only the Building and Grounds budget (1 percent) and Elections (1.3 percent) will increase, comprising a total hike of $1,438.

"I hope so. That's all I can say," say, March, a Hoagland said. "I've never been so nervous about this in my life. "We're in good shape until, Salary ind say, March, and we'll see how the economy is and the revenues are coming in."

Salary increases are few and far between. The most substantial pay hike comes for Prosecuting Attorney Douglas Emery, who is set to earn $80,000 in FY 2010, a 16.6 percent increase over the $68,604 he was due to make in his first year of service.

Hoagland said the raise was justified because the commissioners have confidence in Emery's growing ability in the role.

The BOCC chair also said the salary bump was made possible because Fred Kelly Grant no longer works as a consultant for the county.

"We think he's qualified, and he's learning a lot," Hoagland said of Emery. "And with our meetings with natural resource issues, he's getting up to speed pretty fast."

At the same time, the commissioners decided to reduce the compensation for deputy prosecutor Chuck Saari by nearly 50 percent to $29,000 for the upcoming year.

The budget reductions have been deep in some departments, including 12 percent in the county jail budget ($91,497) and 9.3 percent in the sheriff's budget ($111,204). Work hours were trimmed for patrol deputies and dispatchers.

Hoagland said he hasn't heard much concern from constituents regarding possible effects to law enforcement service in light of the proposed cuts. "I haven't heard anything, really," he said. "I think they all understand the situation."

Hoagland pointed out that the sheriff and jail budgets were relatively untouched in FY 2009 planning. But with a continued bleak outlook, the county's two biggest expenditures couldn't dodge the bullet in FY 2010.

"We did cut quite a bit out of the budget this time, and they're going to have to work within that and provide the same services that they can and then we'll go back and look at it," Hoagland said.

Another area to take a big hit was the Building Department, where the hours of building official Arlyn Tietz have been reduced. Hoagland said Tietz will work three days a week now.

"The building fees aren't coming," Hoagland said, adding that continued work on Idaho Power's Hemingway Butte substation and the possible construction of a solar energy plant in Grand View could bump fees during the year.

Even with the county now facing a lawsuit from former employees, the Tort fund was reduced by 29.1 percent ($37,850). Hoagland said the BOCC hopes that the county's insurance carrier, Idaho Counties Risk Management Program, will cover the cost if the county loses the lawsuit. He also said the Tort fund was one of the areas used to pay Grant.

\checkmark County: Five plaintiffs were fired in sheriff's first six weeks in office employees are seeking general damages, court costs and attorney fees and other forms of relief. County clerk Charlotte Sherburn said Monday morning that she didn't know how much the lawsuit demanded because "no official tort claim was ever filed."

The plaintiffs' attorney, Jeffrey S. B. Harr of Boise, reserved comment until he could consult with his clients.

Crandall said Friday that he hadn't seen the lawsuit. He wouldn't confirm if he had been served with court papers Thursday.

"Even if I was, I couldn't tell you, and I was out of the office most of the afternoon

Gregory M. Culet. No court dates have been set.

The lawsuit outlines the individual experiences of each plaintiff, all of whom either were dismissed or resigned from the sheriff's office in the six weeks after Crandall was sworn in on Jan. 12.

The suit alleges that:

• Crandall fired the plaintiffs without cause.

Due process was violated when all five were terminated without notice and before grievance hearings were held. The county's employee handbook mandates both notice and hearings must be held before an employee is fired.
The plaintiffs' rights to free speech protected by both the state and U.S. Constitution and guaranteed in the employee handbook — were violated. nate public employees on taking office based solely on the employees' support of his incumbent opponent during an election would have a chilling effect on their ability to participate in discussions on matters of public concern or otherwise engage in any political association or discourse for fear of losing their jobs if the incumbent, or current supervisor, lost," the suit states.

• As sheriff-elect before taking office, Crandall discussed his desire to fire the five individuals with a representative of county insurance carrier Idaho Counties Risk Management Program (ICRMP). Also, the suit claims Crandall posted openings for some tive assistant and accepted reassignment as a dispatcher. However, the complaint states, she was notified on Feb. 13 that she would be terminated and was fired on Feb. 25.

• Even was fired as a patrol deputy on Jan. 12.

• Bish was terminated from his position as sergeant on Jan. 12. The suit alleges Bish was offered a deputy assignment in Grand View that "did not have adequate funding" and that would have required him to move.

• A day after being terminated as records manager on Jan. 12, Olson accepted a reassignment to dispatch. By Feb. 2 she was forced to resign, the suit alleges, because Olson felt she was physically unable to perform the duties of the post and would put the public at risk. The lawsuit further claims that Olson formally expressed concerns to Crandall that limitations in her hearing and sight would make the dispatch job difficult. It's alleged that the new sheriff was aware of Olson's limitations and the impact they would have on her performance.

yesterday," he said.

Board of County Commissioners chair Jerry Hoagland said Friday morning that he had received word of the lawsuit, and he was scheduled to examine the document when he returned to Murphy in the afternoon. He said that commissioners will discuss the suit with legal counsel, but declined further comment because the county was named as a defendant in the suit.

Obituary Rolland Karl Patrick (Rolly)

Rolland Karl Patrick (Rolly) from Three Creek, Idaho passed away at his Devil Creek Ranch on Friday, August 14, 2009, at age 93, surrounded by his family. Rolly was born April 18, 1916, the son of Karl D. and Carolyn Patrick, at the Roseworth home of his grandparents, Derrick and Onora Hartwell. His parents were pioneers of the Three Creek area. Rolly attended schools at House Creek, Hollister, Buhl, and college at Pocatello.

Rolly married Beth Brackett on May 27, 1939 at Hailey, Idaho. They moved to Brown's Bench in 1940 and began their own ranching life, raising good beef cattle. During this time, their three daughters, Ronda, Dee, and Bethene were born. In 1946 they purchased Devil Creek Ranch.

Rolly served on the Three Creek School Board of Trustees, President of the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association, was elected President of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association in 1975. and served on the board of directors of the American National Cattlemen's Association. Rolly served 21 years on the Boise District Advisory Board for the Bureau of Land Management, and also served as chairman on the State and National BLM Advisory Boards. In 1977 Rolly was named to the Idaho Livestock Hall of Fame for outstanding achievement in the cattle industry. In 1994, Rolly and Beth were presented the "Million Miles in the Saddle" award by the Magic Valley Cattlemen's Association. Rolly was a lifetime member of the 71 Livestock Association, and also of the Owyhee County Livestock Association. He was a 50 year member of the Masonic Lodge. As he looked back on his years of work within the cattle industry, his message was to pull together to solve the many problems. He actively supported the cattle industry his whole life, and was an avid friend of the 4H program.

Thank you Dad, for taking the time to teach us to ride, to care for the land, cattle and animals, and to care for each other. You would make us smile when you made willow whistles for us, or showed us how to make an arrowhead, and the importance of setting a fence post really solid. Thanks for playing the guitar for us, and for helping us learn to sing. You taught us the importance of honesty and integrity and hard work. Thanks for taking the time to attend all of those football games and track meets and graduations, and 4H events. Thanks for building us a 4H barn, and teaching us that hard work and doing our best at any job is important. None of us will forget the rides with you in the pickup to bring cattle in off the range, or to scatter salt on the mountain. Thanks for teaching us the importance of family and being a good partner to your spouse. It was obvious that Mom was your best friend and the two of you shared the most special of bonds. Please know that we will work to carry on the many good things that you created here at the ranch, and that we will always love you.

Rolly is survived by his daughters, Ronda (Mike) Macaw, Dee (Joe) Conrad, and Bethene (Randall) Brewer. Those grandchildren and great grandchildren surviving him are Kirk Macaw; Chris (Becky) Macaw and children Jared Montgomery, Justin and Chase Macaw; Michelle Macaw and her daughter Karlee Macaw; Vic (Jani) Conrad and children James and Lauren Conrad; Patrick (Jennifer) Conrad and children Adam and Tara Conrad; Jodee (Kevin) Kelly and children Carson and Cooper Kelly; Shana (Scott) Kerbs and children Blake and Dylan Kerbs; SheIlie (Jon) Griggs and children Wyatt and Mackie Griggs; and Derek Brewer. He is also survived by his sister-in-law Phyllis Patrick and cousins Nora Holland and Lowell Patrick, nephew John (Maureen) Hullinger and children Miles and Eva Hullinger; nieces, nephews, his many friends, and "Bob" his faithful dog.

Thanks to all the friends and family who stopped by with warm greetings, care, and love, and the special phone calls to visit with and check on our Dad. Thanks to the children who filled his wall with drawings and pictures, for he truly loved those. Many thanks to the caregivers from HomeLife Care who became an important part of his life, and our lives, for these last years. We thank Idaho Home Health and Hospice for the comfort extended to our family. Many thanks to Keith and David Severe and their families for working hard to keep the ranch going.

Rolly was preceded in death by his parents, his beloved wife, Beth, sisters Ruth and Irene, and brother Denny Patrick. A celebration of Rolly's life will be held at 2:00 p.m. on Friday, August 21, 2009 at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. East, Twin Falls with Dr. Hank Anderson officiating. Masonic Rites by the Twin Falls Masonic Lodge #45. A private family burial will take place at Sunset Memorial Park. In lieu of flowers the family suggest memorials be given in Rolly's name to the 71 Livestock Association, Idaho Cattle Foundation, or a charity of your choice. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Rock Hudson went from postal service to silver screen

Rock Hudson was a postman . delivered mail to the home of Henry Wilson, a screen agent. Hudson told Wilson he was tired and bored with delivering mail, and Wilson got him a meeting with director Raoul Walsh. Walsh got him his first acting job in the movie Fighter Squadron.

Mozart must have really been a genius ... he wrote the opera Don Giovanni in one day ... then to top it off he played it completely the next afternoon.

The number thirteen ... well, for one thing ... it was the decreed waist measurement for ladies at court of Catherine de Medici ... also the number of Coca-Cola's sold each day for the first eight months after it was invented at Jacob's Pharmacy in Atlanta, Ga. Also, thirteen years of marriage is the "lace" anniversary.

No one knows what Albert Einstein's last words were ... he spoke them in German and the nurse on duty didn't speak it ...

So, did you ever wonder why Whistler painted his mother? Not literally, but the painting of his mother ... Well, Whistler was scheduled to paint another person one afternoon, and that person skipped the appointment. Old James asked his mother, Anne, if she would pose for him, and you know the rest.

The longest word that can be typed entirely with the left hand is ... stewardesses.

You knew that the word ... Nepheligenous ... was from the Greek word for cloud and meant ... "Producing clouds of smoke". I'm certain this is what the Cavalry shouted when they saw smoke

COUNTY CONTINUES QUEST FOR 911 SYSTEM Grant application outlines | Commissioners still forming panel replacement options "He has a lot of expertise and Like Hoagland, Crandall sug-Hoagland:

Commissioners met with Homedale Fire District officials last week to clear up lingering confusion over the Owyhee County 911 system.

"They got a lot of their questions and concerns answered," BOCC chair Jerry Hoagland said.

The District 1 commissioner from Wilson suggested that he and his colleagues should have similar meetings with all emergency responders to explain that their input is vital to whatever the future holds for the 911 system.

Homedale Fire District board of commissioners chair Ric Uria said he and fellow commissioners Steve Zatica and Wendell Hyer were concerned about how their service would be affected by a change in the system, specifically how calls would be dispatched if the system failed — whether it was a remote system or a Murphybased platform.

"They have enough safety features in this service that we probably wouldn't even realize if it goes down," he said, adding that in the event of a failure calls would route through other dispatch centers in the valley.

Hoagland said the BOCC also informed the fire district board about the search of 911 committee members, who would give input on the best way to go — if the county's application for a state grant is approved. The county commissioners want the nominations filed by Sept. 1. Sheriff Daryl Crandall has said the county will know in October if it has received the grant.

Hoagland said he thinks a remote system is the most

The Board of County economical solution. In that scenario, Owyhee County would lease access to the mainframe computer in either Canyon or Elmore with high-speed phone lines connecting the dispatch center in Murphy to the off-site hardware system.

According to the county grant application, Qwest Communications estimates it would cost between $144,000 and $196,000 for a new 911 system in Murphy and then a $441.25 monthly fee thereafter. There would be no start-up costs, but there could be a maintenance contract fee once the equipment warranty expired.

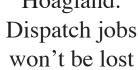

Having a remote to Canyon County would cost between $727 and $1,169 each month depending on whether the county phone trunks remained in Caldwell or high-speed phone lines were run to Murphy. The Elmore option would cost $1,212.95 or $1,630.20 monthly. In each scenario, there would be a one-time start-up fee of either $1,302 or $2,882.

A remote system would eliminate the six-figure cost of building a main frame in Murphy.

Hoagland favors a remote setup because of the ever-changing technology. With hardware in Murphy, Owyhee County would be responsible for all upgrades; with a shared system, the expense would be communal.

"If we went out and purchased a stand-alone system, it's probably obsolete the day we put it in," he said. "But if we're in a remote system then we all kind of share the cost of those updates as technology is added."

– JPB

Now that a 911 grant application has been submitted to the state, Owyhee County will set out to determine how best to use any funds that are awarded.

Steps are being taken to reestablish an Emergency Communications Board in accordance with Ordinance 01-03 passed in February 2003. The Board of County Commissioners envisions the panel giving input on how best to upgrade the 911 system — either through a standalone system based in Murphy or through a piggy-back system in either Canyon or Elmore county with a remote dispatch center in Murphy.

In either scenario, the county would retain its staff of dispatchers, commissioners say.

"There's an awful lot of misinformation out there," BOCC chair Jerry Hoagland said. "One of (the) biggest concerns is we're going to do away with the dispatch if we go with Canyon County. That's not ever going to happen."

At its Aug. 10 meeting, the BOCC approved letters to be sent to emergency services commissioners seeking nominations for the Emergency Communications Board. Nomination deadline is Sept. 1.

Hoagland said that changes may have to be made to the ordinance to make room on the panel for representatives from emergency agencies established in the past six years, including Silver City Fire and Rescue, Inc., and possibly adding county Civil Defense director Jim Desmond to the committee.

common sense; his connections with the Bureau of Homeland Security and knowledge of different grants and funds," Hoagland said. "He has knowledge of how the systems work from his military experience and he does have a very best interest in those fire districts."

Hoagland said Desmond used to be involved with Murphy-Reynolds-Wilson Fire District.

Like the process to submit the grant application, formation of the advisory committee has sputtered. A group formed by Sheriff Daryl Crandall met at least once in July even though the BOCC hadn't approved any of its members.

Earlier this month, Crandall submitted to the commissioners a list of seven people who would represent various emergency services agencies in the county and serve on the committee along with Crandall, who would serve as a non-voting administrator. He also announced at the Aug. 3 BOCC meeting that the committee would meet again later in the week.

"I think you're putting the cart before the horse," District 3 Commissioner Freund told Crandall after the sheriff announced the next meeting date, which was supposed to be Aug. 6.

Crandall was originally asked to submit the list for approval last month, before he convened the first meeting.

The sheriff's proposed list included county Coroner Harvey Grimme as the elected official, James Ferdinand representing Marsing Fire, Scott Salutregui (Homedale Fire), Lisa Price (Homedale Ambulance), Donna Bennett (Grand View), Wes Anderson (Murphy-Reynolds-Wilson Fire) and Sherry Colyer (Bruneau).

gested that Ordinance 01-03 needs an amendment to account for those agencies that aren't represented.

"I want to see everybody included in this, and my feeling is fire and ambulance departments may be under the same groups, but what fits for one won't fit the other," Crandall said, "What I'm concerned is everybody has a fair say."

Ordinance 01-03 calls for representation from Grand View Fire and Ambulance, Marsing Ambulance and Fire, Oreana Quick Response Unit, Murphy-Reynolds-Wilson Fire, Homedale Ambulance and Fire, Bruneau QRU and Fire and one city or county elected official. The ordinance was put in place before the formation of Central Owyhee QRU or Silver City Fire and Rescue Inc., and it doesn't allow citizens at-large to serve on the committee, as had been Crandall's idea last month.

"My feeling is citizens at-large can go to their (fire) commissioners and give their input that way," District 2 Commissioner George Hyer said. His father, Wendell, is a Homedale fire commissioner.

After Crandall submitted the list, though, the BOCC decided at George Hyer's suggestion — to leave the job of recommending advisory board members to the commissioners from the respective fire districts.

BOCC seeks to redirect Initiative focus, local power

Meeting labeled pre-emptive to preserve county's role

In a move that a county commissioner said was aimed at refocusing the intent of the agreement, Owyhee Initiative representatives met Tuesday in Murphy.

Results from the meeting weren't available at press time.

Board of County Commissioners chair Jerry Hoagland said that one reason the county convened the meeting was to address concerns about bylaws language proposed by the Initiative board of directors possibly weakening the county's power in the process.

"The proposed (bylaws) that were presented are pretty vague and leave a lot of room for interpretation, and interpretation may lead to the commissioners losing control," Hoagland said.

"Whether that's accurate or not, it needs to be defined.'

Hoagland said Tuesday's meeting also was called because there has been a lack of communication between the Initiative directors and the county in the months since the Initiative became law.

Messages left for Initiative chair Fred Kelly Grant seeking comment weren't returned by press time

Hoagland fears the lack of strong county participation could lead the process "astray" and away from objectives that are beneficial to the county, such as multiple use in wilderness areas to preserve recreation and livestock grazing. He said that "one of the biggest concerns" was that grazing will continue in the wilderness areas.

"There are some things that we need to say, 'Now wait a minute. This is the county's Initiative and you guys are directed to implement it, but you better implement it to what was agreed by all."

Hoagland said the meeting was an attempt to pre-empt any possible slippage in the process rather than a reaction to something that has happened.

Another county concern is the formalization of Frank Bachman as the representative of Owyhee County interests on the Initiative board. Hoagland said as an appointed alternate, Bachman stepped into the county's chair at the table when Inez Jaca resigned. But Bachman never has been formally appointed as the representative nor has an alternate been named to take his former position.

"He's got a lot of knowledge on the eastern side of the county, and I think that's a good fit, in my own personal opinion," Hoagland said, adding that the issue is the formality of the appointment and not Bachman's presence in the process.

The District 1 commissioner added that a formal appointment could be made in an upcoming BOCC meeting after months of neglect.

"Yes, and that's what we want to clean up and get it moving in the right direction," Hoagland said.

The second-term commissioner also said the commissioners must begin work on cataloguing which wilderness roads should retain RS2477 designation and from which roads the label should be removed. Other RS2477 issues must be resolved as the recreational management plan process, as mandated by the Initiative, is undertaken, he said.

Court briefs

This week's Third District Court docket summary saw a few DUI convictions and 23 speed violations.

Steen W. Marts, 37, of Homedale, was found guilty of misdemeanor DUI. Marts was originally charged in April. He will pay fines of $500, has had his license suspended for six months and will be on probation for 18 months. Three days of Sheriff's Inmate Labor Detail (SILD) duty were offered as an alternative to three days in the county jail.

Juan E. Arteaga of Mountain Home was found guilty of misdemeanor DUI stemming from an arrest earlier this month. Arteaga faces fees and fines of $1,000, has had his license suspended for one year, will be on probation for two vears, and was initially sentenced to one year in jail, reduced to 10 days, which he had already served.

Last week's court docket showed a single DUI conviction. that of Boise resident Timothy M. Dennis, 20. Dennis was fined $500 and had his license suspended for six months following a stop in May. He will be on probation for two years.

Homedale's Kevin Grimes, 21, was found guilty of disturbing the peace, a misdemeanor, amended from misdemeanor domestic batterv. Grimes was fined $200 and will be on probation for 15 months. The sentencing was a result of an enhanced penalty arising from a prior domestic violence conviction, according to the docket. Last week's docket also included 23 speed violations. All cases listed were heard by Judge Dan C. Grober.

CODY KENT, MARSING Award-winning volunteer

Know someone worth knowing? Contact the Avalanche with feature ideas at jon@owyheeavalanche.com or (208) 337-4681.

Volunteering, rodeo and sports make for a full day seem a little vague, a touch nonspecific, but it's hard to think of another way to describe Cody Kent's breadth of interests, or his willingness to turn his hand to the needs of others.

Since Kent moved to the Marsing area in February 2008, he has become involved as a volunteer with Care-ousel Therapeutic Riding, which helps autistic and developmentally disabled people improve motor, social and life skills. He has gotten into rodeo, having never been on a horse before arriving in Owyhee County. Kent is involved with Marsing Optimist football, Marsing Lions wrestling, is a budding snowboarder and an award-winning writer. Oh, and soccer, too.

He is also just 10 years old.

Kent's not a new name in The Owyhee Avalanche. A piece of his, an entry called "Why I love America" won a writing contest held by Marsing Elementary School with awards funded by the Smit family, the American Legion

Care-ousel

Kim Kent has 30 riders in Marsing, and 40-45 in Modesto, and a waiting list in her California stables. She moved to Marsing about six years ago, with the intent to hand over the reins of her Modesto operation in a period of six months or so. She had just a single youngster she was working with, but more joined, and "more just added in," she said. She commutes by car, each week, to work with her riders.

In comparison to Modesto, Marsing has taken a bit more time to get under way.

"Here it's been a little slower to take off," she said. "Because maybe people think Marsing is too far to drive." She's had people raise an evebrow and comment that Care-ousel is 'all the way out in Marsing', she said with a grin. "We have kids that drive an hour-and-ahalf one way in Modesto," she added. If the area was initially slow to take advantage of a therapeutic riding option, it makes up for in other ways, she said. "It's a fun group, a great group of parents. They're here, cheering on the kids," she said. "It's like a giant family up here." Parents with a child who might benefit from Care-ousel can contact Kent at 208-530-0021. They are also online at www.care-ousel.com.

"Renaissance man" might and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. A panel of vets gave Kent the nod and the $200 top prize. If you were at the Marsing schools' Veteran's Day program, you probably got to see him on stage.

> Despite his literary kudos, Kent, like most sixth-graders-tobe, is not a huge fan of writing per se - language arts is, he admits, his least favorite class. His favorite? Science.

> Sports are something Kent has an obvious love for. In addition to purely-for-fun activities like snowboarding, he's played football with the Marsing Raptors team, and is fifth among 60-pound competitors in the 2009 standings as posted on the Intermountain Champion Series for wrestling Web site.

> His rodeo skills are still a work in progress, but he has moved up to steer riding. Last week saw him make his first two rides on steerback — helped a bit by his family; he admits it was a little scary - but he's well on his way to following in big brother James' footsteps. James, 18, is a bull rider now, and has competed in high school rodeo.

Being horse-y is a good thing around the Kents' spread, especially with Kim's Care-ousel program. Cody tacks up, feeds, grooms and leads horses for riders who need the help. Though many riders, he said, do a great job of doing so on their own. He also mucks out six of the farm's horse stalls; Kim gets the ones inside the barn, he said. He's also team roping with his family on Saturday nights, and is learning the fine art of goat tying.

His favorite horse is Snickers, though he said she was a little lame at present and resting, and he rides Diamond to do his roping.

He's also helping the disabled in Marsing, young and old, in the program that Kim operates both in Marsing and Modesto, California. His work with Careousel led to his recent recognition as a store winner in the Kohl's Kids Who Care® Scholarship Program, which picks volunteers age 6 to 18 "who help make their communities a better place." The basic requirement of the award, "efforts that are above and beyond what is normally expected of a child his or her age" probably made Kent a shoe-in. While he hasn't yet netted one of the $5,000 national scholarships, he did get a Kohl's gift card.

Cody Kent lends a hand on the lead rope for Care-ousel rider Kyle Warwick. Warwick is riding Joy, a Bureau of Land Management Mustang mustang who has found a new career.

Both Kim and other volunteers spoke of how the program helped people, young or old, polish motor and social skills.

"With autistic kids, they're not very social," Michelle Warwick, grandmother to program member Kyle Warwick, said. "To bring that (social aspect) into this is just amazing." She mentioned the graining, having and tacking up the more advanced riders did on their own. "They're doing lots that even their parents didn't think they could do," she said. Cody just said that he likes the chance to meet people, and has fun helping out.

If you stand in the ring and watch, you don't see developmentally disabled young people — you see kids having fun and learning. Some of them might have had a tougher fight than most to do so, but overcoming difficulties is often the way great character is born. Kent has had to overcome his own personal trials, and now lives permanently with his grandparents and legal guardians Kim and Hartzell Kent, but Kim said he is a remarkably forward-looking young man.

"He's come a long way," she said.

Moving is potentially rough for children, but Cody liked Owyhee County right off the bat.

"The first night I was here, I saw a rabbit," he said with a smile.

It's hard to sum up a person, but Cody, in his essay last Veterans Day, perhaps said it best.

"I want to do all the things I can to help my career and maybe help others too," he wrote. "I have a dream to be the best person I can. I want to get a good job and have a good life."

Plane crash near Succor Creek State Park kills three down last week several miles southeast of Succor Creek State Park, about five miles from the Oregon-Idaho border, killing three men.

The three listed aboard the Navion aircraft were pilot Jed Mingo, Jordan Mingo, 26, and Ron Mingo, 54. Jed and Jordan were both Utah residents. Ron Mingo lived in Hazelton.

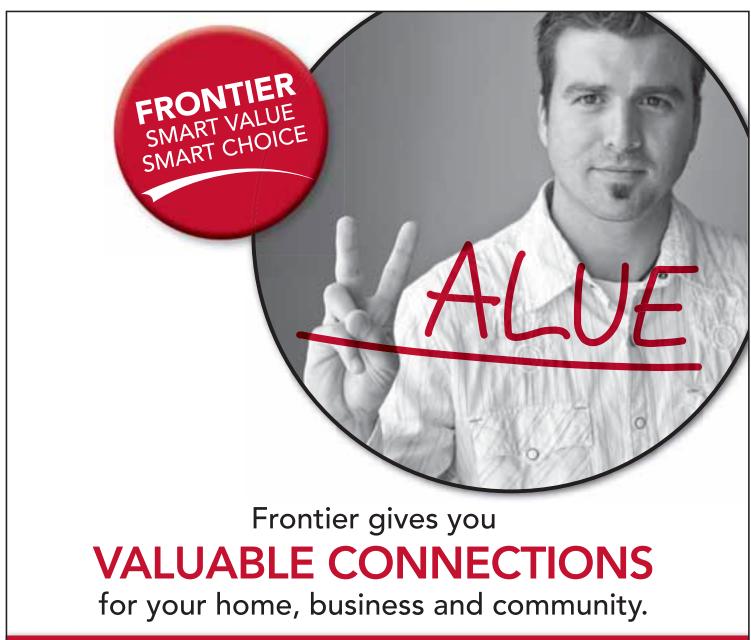

The plane was traveling from Jerome to Ilwaco, Wash., on Aug. 7, and was scheduled to return on Aug. 9. Malheur County Sheriff's personnel responded to

A single-engine plane went reports of a possible plane crash Monday, Aug 10., after the plane had been listed as overdue, and members of the Civil Air Patrol had made visual identification of the wreckage in the afternoon of the 10th. First responders confirmed that all three men had been killed in the accident.

> The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) was investigating the cause of the crash, and had sent investigator Zoe Kelleher from the NTSB's Seattle regional office. No details on the cause of the crash had been released as of deadline Monday.

Area fire reports

The county, perhaps helped out by rains during fair week, saw few fires. No home or building fires occurred, though a pair of vehicle fires were reported.

The first was a boat fire on CJ Strike Reservoir in the afternoon on Aug. 8. A fiberglass-hull inboard caught fire, most probably due to faulty wiring, Ed Collett of Grand View Fire said. Firefighters extinguished the blaze on the lake with water and dry chemicals, then managed to tow the boat to shore and remove it from the lake without any oil or gasoline entering the water. The boat was severely damaged.

While there are no worries of spread with a boat fire on a lake, Collett said that crews were pleased that no fluids or fuel escaped the craft, which would have required additional cleanups in light of environmental regulations.

The Murphy-Reynolds-Wilson Fire District had its own vehicle call last week, when an excavator working on Idaho Power's Hemingway Butte Substation caught fire. Workers on the site had used what extinguishers they could from other vehicles, and the fire was out when MRW units arrived, chief Wes Anderson said Monday.

MRW units also responded to small brush fire, located on the roadside just west of Givens. The fire was about one acre in size, Anderson said

Owyhee Gardeners award winners, 2009

It's that time of year, and the Owyhee Gardeners winners are tending their plots despite the heat, though now with recognition from others in the green thumb brigade. The names of this year's winners have been added to the plaques on display at the Marsing and Homedale city halls, and each winner also received a framed certificate and will have a roadside sign displayed at each location.

The Owyhee Avalanche took a photo tour through the winning gardens, and spoke briefly with the people who take care of them.

Ned and Gloria Stokes Rural home award, Homedale

The Stokes, of Garnet Road, just across the river from Homedale, have a two-acre plot with landscaped garden. Ned Stokes, who said he prefers gardens with many shades of green with patches of color, rather than masses of blooms, has planted a wide variety of flowers, shrubs, grasses and trees in his garden. The garden itself is laid out intentionally in organic curves, with no straight lines — something he smilingly admits makes riding mowers a lot easier.

The garden is furrow- and flood-irrigated, and Stokes spends all day on Wednesdays tending it, as well as weeding and tweaking throughout the week.

The garden includes Arctic willows, Canna lilies, Black-Eyed Susans, a filbert tree, dry-tolerant species like Apache Plume and many, many others, including what Ned calls "the only S-shaped cornfield in the world", tomatoes and squash. The majority of the garden was started in 1992.

Tom and Diane Kenney Rural home award, Marsing

Located off the beaten track on Covote Lane Road south of Marsing, the Kenney home garden comprises two acres of roses, hibiscus, cactus, blooming artichokes, a wide variety of trees, a grandfathered-in sagebrush of huge size, two dogs, a cat and many hours of work.

Diane, a retired nurse, works about five hours each day in her garden, aided by husband Tom.

"I love gardening, but I've gone a little too far," she said with a smile.

The Kenneys started work on the garden about five years ago, and the project is an ongoing one, with new terraces soon to be planted and a fish pond yet to come.

Elva Ochoa

Town home award, Marsing

Elva Ochoa's Main Street home and garden were in part inspired by a trip she took to Germany. The hanging and window-mounted flower boxes there inspired some of the design decisions for her Marsing home. Ochoa said she began gardening seriously after raising her seven children — "after I got old" she joked and is helped out by her grandchildren and youngest son, Raymond.

The garden — which is spacious, home to butterflies, roses, butterfly bushes, lilies and a selection of hanging flower planters - began with the additions of a few plants here and there.

"I'm sorry now," she said with a laugh. "The time and money, with the sprays, the fertilizer.'

Those entering Marsing from Homedale will be able to see Ochoa's home on the right side of Main shortly after entering town.

The Downings have had the property for about 30 years, Tim said, and throughout

AutoZone Business award, Homedale

The landscaping at the S. Main Street location of Homedale's AutoZone caught the eye of judges this year. The business put in the plants and landscaping three years ago, and received kudos this year from the Owyhee Gardeners. Despite wrestling matches with a recalcitrant sprinkler system, AutoZone's garden, kept in trim by David Slawson and store manager Tom Fiorica, is flourishing.

"It's far from perfect," he said, "the amount of time it takes, sometimes my wife thinks it's too much."

"We should be fishing, instead," Deb added with a laugh.

Marsing Senior Housing Business award, Marsing

Marsing Senior Housing won the Owyhee Gardeners award in 2009, with the help of the many residents who all added to the complex's attractiveness by tending and designing their own gardens, bringing splashes of color and interest to the winding pathways through the complex.

Marty Fisher accepted the award for MSH at the Owyhee Gardeners' Thursday awards presentation.

Prep athletes tune up for soccer, gridiron, VB seasons

Local high school athletes and Owyhee County prep sports fans get their first taste of competition in the coming week with a series of preseason jamborees, tournaments and the start of volleyball season.

The football teams from

Homedale and Marsing will visit the same jamboree Saturday in Payette. It's the first time new coaches Matt Holtry (Trojans) and Scott Bryant (Huskies) will be able to see their charges in pads against opponents. The Marsing volleyball team, under the direction of veteran coach Loma Bittick, plays host to a jamboree Thursday, while the Homedale varsity and junior varsity squads travel to Melba for a 6 p.m. jamboree on Tuesday. David Hann returns as the Trojans varsity coach.

The Huskies kick off the volleyball regular season at Nampa Christian on Tuesday against North Star Charter School.

Homedale's girls' soccer team tunes up for the season in the 3A Snake River Valley conference preseason tournament at 4 pm. on Tuesday at Homedale Middle School. travels to Fruitland on the same day to play at the same time in a conference preseason tourney.

Rimrock High School begins its football season on Aug. 28 on the road against Garden Valley. The volleyball team travels to play in the Wilder Tournament on Aug. 29.

The Trojans boys' soccer team

Building the D, and future wins

Homedale High School's new football coach, Matt Holtry, instructs his squad on the finer points of defense during practice Friday. Holtry and the Trojans will see their first action of the season on Saturday in the Payette Jamboree.

Injured Eby sits out; Outlaws win title

At one time cleared to play, Homedale High School graduate Michael Eby was on the sidelines during the Billings Outlaws' 71-62 victory over the Rivercity Rage in the Indoor Football League's United Bowl on Saturday.

Originally given the go-ahead Aug. 10 to play in the game on the Outlaws' home turf, the rookie free safety was pulled back from active duty after a second doctor chimed in, Eby's mother, Vicki, told The Owyhee Avalanche.

"The team doctor contacted a urologist (Aug. 12) who told him Michael could not play and that no urologist in the United States would approve of him playing this early after an injury like he had received," Vicki Eby wrote in an e-mail. Michael Eby suffered a lacerated kidney and a liver bruise while making a tackle early in the Outlaws' Intense Conference championship game victory over El Paso on Aug. 1.

Eby was named the IFL's defensive rookie of the year after snagging 10 interceptions and making 43 tackles in 14 games. — JPB Sprint boats zoom back to Marsing

On Saturday sprint boat fans will get to enjoy their sport at the track in Marsing as summer races return.

The gates will open at 11 a.m. with qualifying starting at 1 p.m. and eliminations at 6 p.m. Donna Bernard, wife of Homedale resident and race participant Wes Bernard, said there will be a Best of Sprint Boat Show for the final race. Prices will be $12 for those age 12 and up, $6 for children 4 to 11 years of age, and children 3 or younger may enter free. Pit passes will be available for $5.

Race day will also feature a raffle with a variety of donated items, with a portion of proceeds going to the Idaho Youth Ranch, Bernard said.

Concessions will be available on-site.

Saturday's fat stock sale grosses $91,781.34

Over 200 steers, swine, and sheep were sold in Saturday afternoon's 4-H and FFA Fat Stock Sale, held in conjunction with the Owyhee County Fair.

The auction revenues totaled $91,781.34, according to the county extension office figures released Tuesday.

The total is slightly under last year's sale, which grossed $95,225.

"Bruneau Roundup" to be revived after 14 years

A revival of the old Bruneau Round-Up rodeo is now in the organizational stages and is scheduled to be held Sept. 29 and 30 at a new arena site in Bruneau. According to Marilyn Black, a member of the newly formed Bruneau Round-Up Association, the last Bruneau Rodeo was held 14 years ago and had been an annual event for many years in the small Bruneau ranching community.

Tim Jewitt, president of the new rodeo association, and Tom Buckingham, vice president, have been heading up working committees, who are in the process of constructing a new arena facility at Bruneau.

The organization has purchased three acres of land above the BLM Fireguard Station in Bruneau and has constructed two cinder block restrooms complete with plumbing. Electrical hookups have also been made available, Black said.

With Powder River pre-made panels, approximately half of the arena has been erected, but the Association is now soliciting sponsors for the remaining panels at $125 each and for the five chutes to be installed. Mrs. Black said that contributions for the panels also include membership into the Association and commercial signs promoting sponsors will be displayed on each panel.

Sale to support young bowlers

A community-supported yard sale will be held this Saturday, Aug 25, at Homedale City Park from 10am until Proceeds from the sale will be used to send youth bowlers of Homedale to State competition at Challis. Money raised in fund-making projects determines the number going, as this is their only means of financing their trip.

Seventeen young bowlers competed in state contests last year. Two were first in fourth division doubles; two second in second division and one sixth; and one 16th in singles.

Burglaries reported by sheriff

Owyhee County Sheriff's officers reported the occurrence of two burglaries in the Homedale-Marsing areas over the past weekend.

Officer Gary Aman said the Owyhee County deputies assisted Malheur County officers in the investigation of a burglary at the Norm Rudolph residence across the Oregon line southwest of Homedale Friday night. The burglary was reported by a neighbor who has been watching the place while the Rudolphs have been on vacation. A complete accounting of all stolen items cannot be concluded until Rudolph returns, but known to be stolen is a pickup truck, approximately 36 guns and a number of power tools. Malheur County investigators continue to work on the case.

Quake tremors noticed in area

Residents of Owyhee Heights, Succor creek and Central Cove communities reported feeling the tremors of the earthquake Monday night.

Northside community was undisturbed except for the east side of the community where they reported windows shaking and beds moving.

The city of Homedale itself reported some movement from the quake but many residents reported no disturbance.

Fair and rodeo representatives appear on TV

Several representatives of the Owyhee County fair and rodeo appeared on Periscope on TV channel 7 Monday afternoon to advertise the coming fair and rodeo.

Those attending were Mac Parkins, fair board chairman, Anita Maher, rodeo queen, Frank Ireton, Marsing, parade chairman. Felisa Echevarria, parade hostess, L. J. Matteson, C. J. Cotner, Wilson and John Malmberg, Marsing board directors, Ed Mink, secretary-manager of the fair board, Pete Echevarria, calf-rider.

Mac appeared on Home Town Reporter that evening and was interviewed concerning events scheduled for the four day fair and rodeo.

Outstanding cowhands to vie for purses at rodeo

Several outstanding cowhands have entered competition at the Owyhee County rodeo sponsored by the Owyhee Wranglers and Owyhee Sheriff's Posse, August 20, 21, 22. They are coming from far and near to compete in the six events which include, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, calf roping, cow milking, team roping and wild horse races. The total purse for the events is $850.

Some of those who have entered include Emery Ratliff, Grand View, and Paul Black, Grand View, team roping, Jack Baker and Dr. Millard Ickes, Nampa, team roping, Larry Robeson, Twin Falls and his brother, Jerry Robeson, also of Twin Falls, saddle bronc riding, Bob Scarbrough, Boise, cow milking and team roping; Benny Tomn, Owyhee, Nev., calf roping, team roping and cow milking; Bob Graham, Rupert, saddle bronc riding, and Dick Seal, Rupert, saddle bronc riding.

Anita Maher, Owyhee county queen will ride each night in the grand entry. Anita is a graduate of Homedale high school, and attended a year of business school at Boise. The past summer she has helped her father with cattle at Indian Meadows. An excellent horsewoman, she has ridden since she was big enough to sit in a saddle, according to her father, Frank Maher.

The rodeo this year will be produced by Jake Pope, from the Spur Rowel ranch in Twin Falls. He recently produced the ICA championship Emmett rodeo and last spring produced the Jordan Valley rodeo. The stock for the events arrived the first of the week and all last-minute preparations are being taken care of. Among his bucking stock is the SPANGLER'S STATEMENT. The New York World of the 23d ult., publishes a lengthy and interesting statement from Edmund Spangler, concerning his arrest, trial and imprisonment. In this statement he makes this following allusion to Mrs. Mary E. Surratt, who was executed, July 7th, 1865

"I have suffered much, but I solemnly assert now, as I always have since I was arraigned for trial at Washington Arsenal, that I am entirely innocent of any fore or after crime which John Wilkes Booth committed, save I knew in common with everybody after it took place.

"I further solemnly assert that John Wilkes Booth, or any other person, never mentioned to me any plot, or intimation of a plot, for the abduction or assassination of President Lincoln; that I did not know when Booth leaped from the box to the stage at the theatre, that he had shot Mr. Lincoln; and that I did not, in any way, so help me God, assist in his escape; and I further declare that I am entirely innocent of any and all charges made against me in that connection. I never knew Surratt, Payne, Atzerodt, Arnold or Harold, or any of the so-called conspirators, nor did I ever see any of them until they appeared in custody. While imprisoned with Atzerodt, Payne and Harold, and after their trial was over, I was allowed a few minutes exercise in the prison yard. I heard the three unite in asserting Mrs. Surratt's entire innocence, and acknowledge their own guilt, confining the crime as they did, entirely to themselves, but implicating the witness, Weichman, in knowledge of the original plan to abduct, and with furnishing information from the Commissary of Prisoners' Department, where Weichman was a clerk.'

Further on in this statement Spangler says:

"The first time I ever saw Mrs. Surratt was in the Carroll prison yard on Capital Hill. I did not see her again until we were taken into court the first day at the arsenal. My cell was on the same corridor with hers, and I had to pass it every time I was taken into court. I frequently looked into her cell, a small room about four feet wide by seven feet long. The only things in her cell were an old mattress laid on the bricks and an army blanket. I could see the irons on her feet, as she was generally lying on the mattress, and was the last one brought into court. She occupied a seat in court near the prison door. The seat was twelve inches high, and the chains between the irons on her feet were so short that she always had to be assisted to her seat. She was so sick at one time that court had to adjourn."

FROM THE BASIN. The World of the 12th has the following: During the week several cabins occupied by miners, in this vicinity, have been burgularously entered and in some instances small sums of money were stolen by the burglars, who were three in number and masked. We hear also of two or three attempts made on stores in town, but in which the wakefulness of persons who lodged within prevented the burglars from further mischief than alarming the occupants. Strangely enough there appears to be no clue to the perpetrators of these misdeeds, beyond the small item that they seem to be young men, and that they are three in number. Wm. Fagan, last a Justice of the Peace in this Precinct, ran off in roguish style one day in the early part of last week, and left divers debts, big and little, which he not only failed to liquidate, but lied awfully about, to deceive his victimized creditors into the belief that he intended to go no farther than Silver City, to accompany his wife and two little ones that far on their way to California. But worse than this, the rogue either hid or destroyed his office record book and consequently parties to suits and those interested in judgments &c., are materially affected by his roguery. It is known that he was guilty of most shameful and even criminal acts in his official capacity, and he doubtless ran off as much to escape the investigation of the next Grand Jury as for any other cause. We caution other communities against him, go where he will. He is a bad man, and a very cheap rascal.

OCHS plans Flint trip

The Owyhee County Historical Society will be holding a field trip to the Flint Mine this Sunday, August 26.

Anyone interested in joining the historical excursion at no charge can meet the group at the Catholic Church in Oreana before 9am Sunday.

The caravan will leave Oreana at 9am and will proceed over Bachman Grade, making two brief stops before arriving at the Flint Road turnoff from the road to Triangle at approximately 11:30am. High clearance vehicles are recommended.

A stop will be made at noon for a potluck lunch along Flint Creek. The last stretch of road before the mine is very rough and high clearance rigs are mandatory. famed "Bingo" whom few cowboys have ridden.

Adrian Pollard, Star, will be the announcer this year and will also furnish the sound equipment.

An office has been opened by the rodeo board at the east gate entrance to the fairgrounds, Mrs. Frank Regan, rodeo secretary said the office would be open starting Wednesday morning.

Homedale of long ago is recalled by oldtimers

G.M. Eidemiller, Sr., Madras, Ore., and W.F. Faulker, Colorado Springs, Colo., stopped by the Chronicle office Friday afternoon on their way to Madras, Ore.

The two men are childhood buddies who came to Homedale almost 50 years ago when Homedale was nothing but a general store owned by K. M. Gardner and company, a harness shop run by a Dutchman named Landbeck and a hardware store run by Mr. Splawn. The old timers reminisced that Wilder was not in existence and that a reclamation camp stood on the townsite that now exists.

On the edge of common sense

The mechanical bull

"So, what's the difference between riding a mechanical bull and riding a real one?" asked the boy of his dad.

"You will know the difference, my son, the first time you climb over into the buckin' chute and look down."

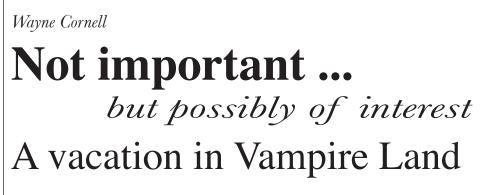

The mechanical bull is a carnival ride, it is not a life-changing experience. Riding a real bull will affect how you answer one of the questions you will be asked the rest of your life. Whenever PBR comes on ESPN, or Extreme Sports are being discussed, you will have a practiced answer like ... "I was going to ride one once, but I had a sinus infection so I couldn't," or "I was taking piano lessons and worried about injuring my hand," or "Yeah, I rode bulls till my brains came in."

I can't remember the first bull I got down on. I do recall trying to hang on to the back of a steer in a roping chute and being scraped off! I started riding bulls in high school. There wasn't much of a system set up for kids to learn. Most of the rides I made were in rodeos where the money was up.

I tell the story in retrospect years later that I had a friend on the NMSU rodeo team named Charley Engle. He was a good bull rider, and I admired him. When I asked him for advice he suggested that I had to practice. "Practice?!!" I thought. Does that make any sense to anyone reading this? "I'm going to have a train wreck tomorrow, I better have one today to practice!"

The difference between riding a mechanical bull and a real bull has less to do with the actual ability to stay on, and more to do with facing your own courage; i.e., how you will deal with an unforgiving, unpredictable, massively strong, dangerously quick force of nature. Riding bulls is better compared to standing outside during a tornado, arm-wrestling an octopus, or walking into a cage with a grizzly bear!

You cannot control the outcome, yet you drop down on his back with a leg on either side. You glance at the spread of horns as big as baseball bats three feet in front of your face. Your muscles are as tight as tarp rubbers as you slide your rosined hand into the rope. They pull it tight. "Good?" they ask. "More," you say. You have squeezed your mind into a steel-jacketed, blue-tip, laser flame of concentration. You have gone inside your mind as the mechanics of mounting swirl around you. You take your wrap. The bull bangs his horns on the steel chute. He mashes your leg into the side. You can feel his body heat and taste his feral tension. It smells like a storm coming. You scoot up on your hand, lean back. You are so in tune, you can feel your nerves running through your veins like sand in an hourglass. You are totally spring-loaded shivering focused.

Six years ago, Stephenie Meyer, a Phoenix, Ariz., housewife, had an idea for a novel. The main characters were two high school students — Isabella (Bella) Swan and Edward Cullen. Bella is a pretty normal teenager, but Edward is a little different — he's a vampire.

Stephenie's novel, "Twilight" has been on the New York Times Best Seller List 91 weeks and has sold 17 million copies worldwide. There are now several sequel books and a movie was released in 2008 which, along with DVD sales, has grossed about $500 million.

In 2004, my sister bought a vacation home in Forks, Wash. Forks is located way out on the Olympic Peninsula — a three-hour drive from Seattle. Forks is about the same size as Homedale. The big differences between the two towns are that Homedale is on the edge of the desert and receives about 10 inches of precipitation each year. Forks is surrounded by the Olympic Rain Forest and receives 10 to 12 FEET of rain annually. Oh yeah. Forks also is the town where Stephenie Meyer's "Twilight" is set.

We hadn't been to Forks for about three years. The first things we noticed as we drove into town were cars parked by the city limit sign. Some people were standing by the sign and other people were taking their picture. We passed the sign a number of times during our three days in Forks and there were always people there taking pictures.

Forks has several motels that usually fill up during the salmon fishing season, but the "No Vacancy" signs were out at all of them during our visit. A number of new stores have appeared. Almost all of them have some sort of "Twilight" reference on their signs.

After unpacking at Sis's house, I browsed through the local newspaper, "The Forks Forum." It boasted that a special "Twilight" special edition can be purchased by visitors. The edition includes photos of places in Forks and the surrounding area where the movie could have been shot.

The "could" is important because the movie wasn't shot anywhere near the town. Actually, Stephenie Meyer has never been to Forks. When she was writing her book, she needed a small town where it rains a lot and an Internet search pulled up Forks, Wash. But that hasn't stopped the Twilight fans from coming in droves.

One day, we drove over to LaPush a town with about 350 people on the coast. LaPush is on the Quileute Indian Reservation. In "Twilight," book some of the Quileutes can change into werewolves. We ate breakfast at the café, and the local residents we saw were eating bacon and eggs rather than people. But I understand some "Twilight" fans have expressed concerns about camping at LaPush for fear of what might crawl in their tents in the middle of the night. They apparently don't understand what the term "fiction" means.

The residents of the Forks area seem amazed that people are coming from all over the world to visit a town that even "Twilight's" author has never visited. But most Forks folks seem happy to pretend there are vampires and werewolves around for as long as the "Twilight" fans keep spending money.

It seems to me that given the millions of dollars Stephenie Meyer has made by turning the Forks area into a haven for vampires and werewolves, the very least she could do is give a healthy donation to the local school district or public library.

It seems silly to me that Twilight fans are excited about visiting a town where the movie wasn't filmed and the author has never visited. But if some reader who is really into "Twilight" wants a color print of Sara and yours truly, standing in front of the "Entering Forks" sign, send $15.95 to "Wayne Cornell, Twilight Adventures," c/o this newspaper.

And in case someone thinks I am serious about the offer, I'm not.

Financial management Share your story to get parents to open up about habits

Dear Dave,

I'm worried about my parents and their finances. They're both in their 50s, and they're not being very responsible with their money. I'm especially concerned about what this could mean when they reach old age. Do you have any advice on how I could help them manage things better?

- Corey

Dear Corey,

It sounds like you may have already run into what I call "Powdered Butt Syndrome." Once someone has powdered your butt, they really don't want your advice on anything. Sometimes parents will grow to the point where they respect and even seek counsel from their children. But the reality is that most adults simply don't want unsolicited advice.

I'm on the radio every day giving financial advice to people, but I don't grab them by the throats and make them listen. I encounter or hear about people doing dumb things all the time, and in most cases I mind my own business. Now, it's a different story if someone asks for my opinion. At that point, I'm obligated to tell them what I think.

But if the person I'm worried about is a good friend or member of the family, I'll try to put myself in a position where they might ask for advice. One good idea could be to tell them your story. You could describe your past problems, how you fixed them, and how much easier and secure things are now. Sometimes, when you approach a person with this kind of spirit, it becomes easier for them to get into subjects they ordinarily wouldn't talk about. — Dave

Dear Dave,

My husband and I are not on the same page when it comes to money and our three teenage daughters. I think they should learn to work and make some money, but he doesn't care if they work or not. Plus, he insists on regularly buying them big-ticket items they don't deserve like cameras and fancy phones. What can I do about this?

— Susan

Dear Susan,

You're right about one thing. Kids should learn to work and make money at an early age. I've given nice gifts to my kids, but the difference is that they work and make money for themselves, too. The nice gifts I gave them were for special occasions. Showering them with expensive toys all the time was not our way of life.

In this situation, your husband is allowing them to be nothing but consumers. They're not learning how to work, and they're not learning how to save or give. This is setting them up for a lifetime of unrealistic expectations, and it's a really bad plan. If nothing changes you're going to end up with kids who think they're princesses. They'll believe the entire world revolves around them, and the poor guys who marry them will spend the rest of their lives trying to keep three spoiled little girls happy.

Still, I think the biggest problem here is that you and your husband are experiencing a marital breakdown. If the kids were taken out of the picture, the same problems would still be there. The difference is that they would manifest themselves in other ways. He needs to stop being so impulsive, but maybe you could lighten up a little and try to establish some guidelines as to when gifts are appropriate. There's a middle ground you guys can reach, but it's going to take some time and effort. Most of all it means the two of you are going to have to work together!

Donation, ticket sales make Marsing quilt raffle a success

The Marsing Seniors wish to express their appreciation to Charles and Joann Weygandt for the donation of the beautiful quilt for which we were able to sell tickets to support our funds.

The quilt was won by Roger Gibson of Caldwell, and little Emma Atchison drew his winning ticket.

We were able to sell over $400 worth of tickets, and we thank each of you for participating. We know you won our esteem for supporting us. We also want to thank Anne Ingersol and Tom Felzien for helping sell the tickets as well as those of you who helped me set up my "Quilt Corner" at the fair. This makes about 20 years for me, and I hope next year someone else comes forward to do this.

Tax-funded charter schools squeeze out private alternatives

According to press accounts, the "Initiative Learning Center" (ILC) started by Nancy McDonald is shutting down. One recent story explained that enrollment at the ILC was "cut in half during the past five years as its leadership saw an influx of area charter schools draw students." Another report noted that "The floundering economy and competition from new charter schools contributed to Mc-Donald's decision."

In a segment of the KBGN (1060 AM) program, "Legislative Watch", last January, host Elizabeth Allan Hodge lauded the recent movement toward parental choice in education. However, later in the program, Mrs. Hodge and Darrell Deide, a representative for Idahoans for School Choice in Education, promoted tax-funded charter schools as a "choice" that should be expanded. Hodge didn't disguise her enthusiasm for charter schools, which she thinks should flourish: "I certainly believe in a free market system, and I think one of the wonderful things about the charter school is it ... gives people a choice, and it certainly does brings an element of competition."

Deide likewise endorsed charter schools as a viable and important "choice" for parents and students. According to Deide, charter schools raise the bar for all schools.

Whatever their merits, tax-funded charter schools are not a free market alternative. Like every other government program, they are funded through legalized plunder — taxation — and drive out legitimate free market alternatives, such as Nancy McDonald's private Initiative Learning Center.

Authentic conservatives should recognize that a "choice" funded through legalized plunder is not truly a choice. Scott Watson Homedale

COSSA tech center levy an investment in future, economy

by Harold Shockley and Tim Rosandick

In 1969 a group of rural school districts in Southwestern Idaho formed a partnership to provide high-quality vocational education programs for their students. Forty years later, Canyon-Owyhee School Services Agency (COSSA) is still going strong. Not only does COSSA prepare students for well-paying careers in Nursing, Medical Records, Welding, Automotive and Diesel Mechanics, Engineering and Building Trades, it also provides for Special Education, Gifted and Talented Education as well as the operation of an alternative high school. For four decades COSSA has served the students and member communities well. Now, COSSA is poised to enhance the educational opportunities for students and community members through the construction of a new Regional Technology Center. On Aug. 25 in Marsing and Aug. 27 in Homedale, supplemental levy elections will be held for the purpose of raising funds for the construction of a new, state-of-theart regional technology center that will serve the students, adults, and industries of Marsing, Homedale, Notus, Parma and Wilder. At least 60 percent of the $5 million project will be funded with outside resources: 1) $2.5 million from an Economic Development Administration federal stimulus grant; and 2) approximately $500,000 in donated land and construction materials. The balance, $2 million, will require the joint funding of all five COSSA school districts. Marsing's proportionate share will be $474,000;

Homedale's $520,000.

A "yes" vote for the new Regional Technology Center will be an investment in the communities of the five school districts in COSSA. During the 2008-09 school year, students in the Professional-Technical programs of COSSA enrolled in 231 college transcript credits at a cost of $15 per credit as compared to the normal cost of $253 per credit. This represents a substantial savings to students and parents. In addition to college transcript credits, each student who successfully completes one of the Professional-Technical programs receives a certificate verifying their qualifications in the field. Records show that 2007-08 COSSA program graduates had a positive placement rate of 96 percent — 45 percent enrolled in college, and 51 percent were employed in their field of study. The COSSA Professional-Technical program has served more than 100 adults through evening courses and classes that COSSA has taught for West Valley Medical Center in Conversational Spanish over the past six years. In addition, courses will be offered this fall in Electronics, Welding, Computers, Conversational Spanish, and Medical Technology. For an investment of approximately 20 cents on the dollar of the total project for each district, Marsing and Homedale will be able to construct and benefit from a stateof-the-art technology center. This center will significantly expand and enhance professional-technical classes and opportunities for students and adult learners, house the alternative high school, serve as a place where students and adult learners can take college-level classes through the College of Western Idaho, and be the location where local business and industry can gain access to a trained workforce and retrain their existing workforce.

A "yes" vote on Aug. 25 (Marsing) and Aug. 27 (Homedale) is a vote to save taxpayers money and invest in our communities' economic future. At no time in the future is it expected that outside resources — federal grant funds, donated land, materials, and services - will be accessible for a project like this. In excess of 60 percent of the total cost of the project is being paid by sources outside of the local property tax. Instead of the COSSA school districts having to generate $5 million in construction funds, they are able to take advantage of the opportunity to partner with other sources and raise $2 million of the total $5 million for the new Regional Technology Center. This is a 60 percent savings for the COSSA communities and a solid investment in their future. It is our firm belief that it is in the best interest of the communities we serve that voters approve funding for the COSSA Regional Technology Center. Its construction will have long-lasting benefits to children, adults, and the economic vitality of our region. We thank you for your support.

— Dr. Harold Shockley is the superintendent of the Marsing School District. Tim Rosandick is the Homedale schools superintendent.
